Brickbats Fly As Political Chiefs Trade Compliments

Ickes Doubts McNutt Will Get Backing of 'Liberals;' Republican Leaders Seek Cash

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Political brickbats started flying yesterday, with Republican National Chairman John Hamilton and Secretary of the Interior Ickes in the thick of the melee.

In the wake of Thomas E. Dewey's maiden speech and a National Republican Executive Committee meeting here, Ickes cast the first stone.

Ickes flung one in the direction of Dewey's Minneapolis speech and shied another at the "heir apparent" claims of Social Security Administrator Paul McNutt.

Opposed to McNutt

He said he did not think the President favored McNutt as a candidate and that he personally and the "liberal and progressive" element would not support McNutt. Ickes called Dewey's speech "baby talk" but said he proved his qualifications as a candidate by talking "45 minutes without saying anything."

Hamilton, his executive committee meeting adjourned, returned the throw. He said neither Ickes nor the New Deal was capable of understanding Dewey's remarks because they understood only "state socialism and government by handouts and subsidies."

Farley Derides Speech

Another Cabinet member meanwhile took a potshot at the maiden bid of New York's district attorney—Postmaster General Farley.

Farley called Dewey's speech "probably as fine an example of sidestepping as our political history affords." The Democratic national chairman said the speech would appeal to those who want "a President who is afraid or unwilling to state his attitude or intentions regarding every vital issue on which the welfare of the United States depends."

The exchange broke after Hamilton earlier quoted Republican committeemen as feeling "the so-called political truce is over." The G. O. P. national chairman said that "war hysteria is dying down and folks are getting back their eyes on domestic problems."

"Nonsense," Says Landon

Former Gov. Landon, of Kansas, arriving here for tonight's Gridiron dinner, contributed his bit to the end of the armistice. He said the President is "furnishing the nonsense" of the third term issue and called on Mr. Roosevelt to "declare himself one way or the other."

"It is only a few months off to the national conventions," said Landon. "Certainly it is time to put an end to the uncertainty about a third term."

Terming the third term "stuff and nonsense," Landon said groups around the President are furnishing the "stuff" by urging the President to make a sacrifice and run, and the President himself is supplying the "nonsense."

Landon said the Dewey speech was "very good and very well delivered."

G. O. P. Developments

The following developments marked the Republican executive committee meeting here:

Republicans mapped a Nation-wide drive for funds to wipe out the committee's $655,000 deficit by December 31. Hamilton said the committee wanted "limited subscriptions of $1,000 each" but will "accept anything down to 15 cents."

Strong sentiment developed for delaying the national committee meeting until February and postponing the convention date possibly until late July, but it was pointed out this decision must be made by the national committee. Hope was fading that the Democrats would agree to convene first.

A preponderance of committeemen appeared favorably impressed with the Dewey speech, with praise ranging from the "marvelous" comment of Walter S. Hallanan, to less enthusiastic "very goods" and one

Roosevelt Sees Himself Depicted as Popeye, Feeding Spinach to Correspondents' Corps; Gets Ring and Hat, but Won't Toss

By Edward T. Folliard.

President Roosevelt last night again turned down an opportunity to declare himself on the third-term question.

The occasion was the Founder's Day dinner of the National Press Club at which the President was the guest of honor. Other honor guests were Secretary Hull, Secretary Morgenthau, Postmaster General Farley, Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison and other officials.

Toward the end of the dinner, a member of the Press Club, attired as Santa Claus, E. E. Wilcox, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, presented the President with several presents. Among these presents was a ring and a hat.

Here was a chance for the President to throw his hat in the ring if he meant business for 1940. He accepted the gift with a smile, but made no attempt to use it in the symbolical sense that was expected.

The President, whose boyhood ambition was to be a sailor, found a seagoing atmosphere provided for him. As commander in chief of the United States Navy, he was "piped aboard" by Boatswain's Mate N. A. Burbrink, of the Washington Navy Yard, as he came into the Press Club auditorium. Eight bluejackets snapped to attention, rendering him side honors.

Police Brand Slain German A Nazi Spy

Consul's Aide Linked To Army Intelligence; Personal Vengeance Blamed for Murder

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 7.—A suggestion that Dr. Walter Richard Engelberg had used his post as first secretary of the German consulate as a facade behind which he carried on espionage was made officially today as the authorities sought amid a mass of correspondence and pictures of nude men to identify his slayer.

Deputy Medical Examiner M. E. Marten asserted he had learned that Engelberg, whose beaten body was found in his home yesterday, was a German intelligence officer.

"He was in a line of business," the physician added, "where a thing like this could be expected." He did not disclose the origin of his information.

Hoover on Scene

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, came here presumably to direct an independent inquiry, but Government sources declined to discuss it. He was accompanied by several investigators.

So fantastically savage was the bludgeoning that the police meanwhile provisionally had accepted the theory that the motive must have been personal vengeance.

The 50-odd photographs of nude men found among Dr. Engelberg's effects, they said, had been taken at a nearby nudist camp.

Late in the day two men were urgently sought. One is of extraordinary bulk and about 6 feet 4 inches in height. Police said his size 11 bedroom slippers and capacious dressing gown were found in Engleberg's home—a home full of the meticulous touches not usually found in bachelor quarters, and also marked with fingerprints that might have been made by a big man.

The second is a man about 23 years old, who, the authorities were informed, went Saturday night to Engelberg's house—"Hitler's house," the neighborhood children called it; left the home with the consular official during the evening and returned later with him.

Weapon Sought

While this search went on, a squad of some 25 officers capable of reading German was marshaled to go through Engelberg's papers. The police, following protocol to the letter, regarded the house as German territory and asked that a consular representatives be present before they touched the victim's belongings.

The fact that the investigation was centering around the correspondence and pictures was disclosed by District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, of Brooklyn, who said the case in its present state did not suggest "international complications."

Finns Open Drive; Denied Nazi Aid; Soviets Declare Blockade; Italy Warns Russia Off Danube

Fascists Caution Kremlin as They Reaffirm Loyalty to German Alliance

By Herbert L. Matthews,
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Dec. 7.—Italy turned the clock back tonight and reaffirmed the axis in all its former strength through the Fascist Grand Council, Italy's highest deliberative and advisory body.

The same meeting issued a warning which must have been intended for Russia, that anything which may occur in the Danube basin or in the Balkans interests Italy directly.

Finally defiance was thrown down to England and France in strong terms expressing Italy's determination to safeguard her maritime traffic "in explicit manner."

Devoted to Foreign Policies

The communique, however, also makes clear that Italy intends to maintain her present non-belligerency. That means there is no change in the present situation but potentially there is all the difference in the world. Premier Mussolini never lost his faith in the axis policy and Germany's might, and this proves it.

The entire meeting was devoted to foreign policies, except for a few unimportant internal affairs. Foreign Minister Count Ciano spent two-and-a-half hours explaining international developments during the recent months. After that the Duce spoke for an hour and a half. Then the motion was accepted, which one may be sure Premier Mussolini himself drafted.

"Nonbelligerency" Stabilized

The Grand Council of Fascism, having heard the full report of the foreign minister, accompanied by detailed documentation, "reaffirms that the immediate precedents of the war, the character of static siege which the war itself has assumed on the Western Front; its development primarily in the economic sphere with blockade and counter-blockade of trade; displacements which have taken place in the territorial situation and relations of strength from the Baltic to the Carpathians,

"Fully warrant the decision of the Council of Ministers on September first, which stabilizes the 'nonbelligerency' of Italy, a decision which until now has avoided extension of the conflict to southeastern Europe and the Mediterranean, a decision which the Grand Council reaffirms,

"In face of tendentious reports of foreign origin the Grand Council declares that relations between Italy and Germany remain those fixed by the pact of alliance and exchange of

Turks Caution Von Papen To Behave or Leave Country

Threaten to Expose Envoy's Life if He Keeps Up Propaganda

By the Associated Press

Ankara, Dec. 7.—The Turkish press today called upon Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, to halt alleged propaganda activities or "pack up and get out."

There were widespread reports the government would ask for Von Papen's recall unless activities under attack were halted.

The indictment arose over circulars bearing the water mark of the German embassy press service, which reprinted an article from the Moscow newspaper Pravda, Communist Party organ, attacking the Turkish press.

The newspaper Yenisaban said that if Adolf Hitler's No. 1 troubleshooter continued the alleged propaganda activities it would publish his biography telling of his "mischievous life and unscrupulous Nazi propaganda methods."

[Von Papen, as military attache of the German Embassy here in the early days of the World War, was in effect ordered from the country as a suspected plotter against American neutrality.

[After a series of explosions and fires in American munitions plants and aboard American ships, Secretary of State Lansing announced:

["On account of what this Government considers improper activities in military and naval matters, we have requested the immediate recall of Capt. Boy-Ed (naval attache) and Capt. von Papen."—Editor's note.]

Berlin Shows Hand

Moscow, Dec. 7.—Russia today announced that Finland would be under blockade beginning tomorrow.

The blockade will apparently be a total one, to be enforced by mine fields, although the Aaland Islands are exempted, apparently as a concession to Sweden.

The note announcing the blockade was handed to the heads of the various missions in Moscow.

In attempting to enforce the blockade, Russia [illegible] aboard ships [illegible] can be flung herself into [illegible] and with [illegible] main theater of [illegible] and was announced [illegible] dispatches reported that Finnish troops had made a fierce counterattack in the Karelian Isthmus to halt the Red army advance toward the eastern terminus of their Mannerheim Line.

Ports Shelled

While Soviet troops renewed their attack on the central front, the Russians bombarded the southern coast of Finland from the sea.

Heavy fighting was reported along the Taipale River and along the southern edge of Lake Ladoga, 20 miles from the frontier.

"On the Murmansk front the Soviet troops advanced 10 kilometers (6 miles) are now 45 kilometers (28 miles) south of Petsamo," a Soviet communique stated.

"Soviet troops also advanced 10 kilometers on the Ukhinsk-Rebolsk-Porozozersk-Petrozavodsk fronts to points 75 kilometers (46½ miles) beyond the Soviet frontier.

"Soviet troops reported the seizure of six 75-millimeter guns, nine 37-millimeter guns and 37 automatic rifles.

"The retreating Finns left numerous wounded and 300 frozen bodies. Four officers of two planes which were shot down were captured.

"In the eastern sector of the Karelian Isthmus the Red Army troops are marching along the Vuoksi water system from 8 to 12 kilometers (5 to 7½ miles) north of the Taipalunioki River.

Air Force Inactive

"In the western sector of the Karelian Isthmus Soviet troops advanced 9 kilometers (5½ miles), occupying Usikirkko, and Nautisjaervi on the Viborg Railroad.

"Bad weather again rendered the air force inoperative."

The blockade move suggests once more the lack of adroitness in handling the whole Finnish affair. Lines along which the Finnish conflict is developing indicate that before long the control of events may slip from the hands of the Soviet Union and she may find herself involved in a major conflict which all experienced observers believe to be the reverse of what Josef Stalin has intended, and which would be contradictory

Trumpet Blast By Symphony 'Restores' Light

Power Off, Weber Sforzando Brings Surprising Result

By John Chabot Smith
A Staff Correspondent.

Hamilton, N. Y., Dec. 7.—Stormy weather played tricks with the National Symphony Orchestra in a concert at Colgate University here tonight, but Weber's "Oberon" triumphed over wind, rain and gloom of night.

Five minutes before the concert was to begin in the University Chapel, a failure of the city power lines darkened the hall. The orchestra was waiting to file on to the stage; nearly all the university population of 1,000 and scores of Hamilton residents were on their way to their places.

Undaunted by darkness, the students clamored for their concert. Candles were brought, and flashlight beams criss-crossed the stage. The musicians picked their way among the stands, dropping hot candle-grease on each other's shoulders, but sparing the music. From time to time the lights flashed on and off, and the students cheered.

"Gabriel's Horn" Gets Results

In 10 minutes the stage was set with a candle wired to each stand, and two on the podium to guide the conductor's feet. It was a scene for Christmas carols, or a re-eneactment of the night Hayden first played his "Farewell Symphony."

Dr. Hans Kindler appeared at the door, slightly worried. "Shall we start? These candles won't last forever." He marched on to the stage,

Bund Agents May Face Jury Inquiry Here

Murphy Ready to Offer Some Alien Cases in Two Weeks

By Felix Cotten,
Post Staff Writer

The Justice Department may seek indictments before a District grand jury against leaders of the German-American bund for failure to register with the State Department as foreign agents, it was learned authoritatively yesterday.

Attorney General Murphy announced that a special grand jury would be called here in about three weeks to consider evidence against persons who had failed to register, as well as others believed guilty of violating Federal passport and income tax laws.

Within about two weeks, he said, evidence in a few cases will be presented to the grand jury now sitting. This will start the proceedings against foreign agents. Thereafter, the special grand jury will handle these cases exclusively.

Although Murphy did not reveal the nature of the cases involving failure to register, it was learned that the State Department had referred to the Justice Department ten or more cases in which it believed persons who had failed to register were representing foreign principals.

Among these, it is understood, were certain cases involving bund leaders. It would be up to the Justice Department to decide whether the evidence against them would warrant seeking indictments.

Farm Federation Backs Hull, Urges 3 Pass on Trade Pacts

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 7.—The American Farm Bureau Federation today indorsed the reciprocal trade agreements and asserted that according to available information the net effect of present agreements has been helpful.

The federation, in a resolution, proposed, however, that the law be amended to provide that no agreement be consummated without the unanimous approval of the Secretaries of State, Commerce and Agriculture. At present the agreements are subject only to the approval of the Secretary of State.

[The trade agreements committee, which negotiates and drafts all agreements, already is composed of representatives of the Secretaries of Commerce, Agriculture, Treasury and State and of the Tariff Commission.—Editor's note.]

The proposed trade pacts with Argentina, Chile and Uruguay were frowned upon on the ground that it "would be extremely difficult to negotiate agreements not fraught with grave danger to American agriculture" since the bulk of Argentine exports were directly competitive with American farm products.

The federation proposed a readjustment of business and labor policies to place industrial and farm prices on the same level.

The resolution said control of production has not been rigid enough to raise market prices to "parity levels" and appropriations for benefit payments to farmers have not been sufficient to bridge the gap between open market prices and parity.

The board of directors was empowered to support "such tax measures as may be feasible and most effective in raising the required revenue."

Edward A. O'Neal was reelected president, and Earl C. Smith, vice president.

The Neediest Families

Post Readers' Gifts Bring Real Results

By Lucia Giddens

With the 50 neediest families on the verge of actual suffering, Washington's generous citizens have an opportunity for constructive Christmas giving—not only to meet an emergency but to help rebuild the lives of these families.

In the short time before Christmas, this help must be given, or it may be too late. The families are in acute need, in dangers ranging from broken morale to homelessness and hunger.

Each Family Requires Only a Moderate Sum

The Post's Christmas Fund, to which citizens are urged to contribute, will offer help to these earnest hard-working families, overtaken by misfortune. Each of the families is known to one of the five family welfare agencies, members of the Council of Social Agencies, as being in want and needing a helping hand.

Many generous contributions are needed now to tide so many families over their distress, although each individual family requires only a moderate sum. A citizen who will contribute the total amount asked for one of these cases will give courage and a new start to an entire family! But any gift, however small, will do valiant duty in helping to give Christmas happiness to a family which is now in despair.

Timely Aid Last Year Brought Good Results

As an example of the results from this kind of constructive giving, look at the difference it has made in the McC family which readers helped through The Post's Christmas Fund last year. Bill McC, 26, who had been supporting himself and his aged mother, had lost his job. Finally Mrs. McC was forced to ask for help. Hesitatingly she admitted: "We are almost entirely out of food."

Post readers contributed $80 to this family, for although the need was acute, Bill needed only temporary help until he

U. S. Refuses To Recognize New Blockade

Note to Britain Will Reserve Right to Receive Nazi Exports

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

The United States is notifying Great Britain, it was made clear last night, that this country does not recognize the British blockade on German exports as authorized by international law, and will reserve the right to claim reparation for damage to American interests.

Secretary of State Hull revealed at his press conference yesterday that a note would be delivered to the British government last night or today, setting forth the United States' stand, but he refused to indicate contents of the communication in advance of its delivery.

Not an Indictment

Elsewhere, it was said that the note will not be a sharp indictment of London's course, but will maintain the rights of shipping between neutrals. The London order in council would provide for seizure of German exports even when they are in transit between neutral countries in neutral bottoms.

At the same time, President Roosevelt prepared to receive Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to London, in conference early this morning, when the ambassador, just home for the holidays, presents information on the European situation which he has termed too confidential for the cables.

American resentment of Russian invasion of Finland continued actively yesterday as the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in

Double Maginot Line Completed; to Be 'Pivot' When 'Hour' Arrives

Paris, Dec. 7.—French infantry today repulsed German attacks on the Western Front, inflicting heavy losses, the French high command announced in an official communique.

Completion of a second Maginot Line was revealed at the time the French troops were turning back repeated Nazi assaults on Allied outposts along the entire northern flank. French machine guns and artillery were said to have inflicted heavy losses on enemy patrols in savage fighting near Wissembourg, west of the point where the Rhine flows into Germany.

King Entertains Lebrun

Behind the front King George, touring British army positions, gave a luncheon for French President Albert Lebrun, Premier Daladier, Gen. Gamelin and Winston Churchill, first lord of the British admiralty.

An authorized commentary on the military situation issued here tonight has an importance which cannot be overemphasized. It reads:

"Our work of fortification, carried out from the start at an accelerated pace, is now virtually completed. The essential purpose was to double the Maginot Line. Thus in the north of France and in the Jura (the area adjoining the Swiss border) there has been constructed a line of defense which may well be described as formidable.

British Repel Nazi Air Raid Directed at Firth of Forth

By Russell F. Anderson
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Dec. 7.—The Royal Air Force today repulsed an intensive German sky attack aimed at the Firth of Forth area in Scotland.

One British plane was lost, at least two German planes were believed shot down and a third destroyed in a midair collision in battles over the North Sea.

It was believed the British plane admitted to be lost had collided with a German craft, both plummeting into the sea.

At least eight Heinkel planes participated in the raid, which was intercepted by British patrol craft before the Germans could reach the Firth of Forth.

The whole Firth of Forth zone, where the Edinburgh industrial district and the Rosyth naval base were bombed several weeks ago, was placed under a 35-minute air alarm beginning shortly after noon.

High-speed Royal Air Force combat planes droned out to sea to meet the aerial invader. Soon the sound of British coastal antiaircraft battery fire could be heard. Shore observers witnessed the air battle, in which at least a dozen British fighting planes took part.

The air ministry announced that giant German Dornier flying boats Wednesday twice attempted to intercept British air patrols off Britain's coast, "but were forced to retreat."

Over the Coffee

MONEY FROM HEAVEN

You and I don't get any money from the Government, and I'm not so sure about you. But almost half the rest of our fellow Americans do know the bitter-sweet taste of "Washington money."

Harlan Miller

Here's a thumbnail portrait of the Republic's pay roll, plus other Government benevolences. You can paste it in your hat, look at it for cheer when you get that bilious attack of tax illness. Use is like smelling salts.

* * * *

To begin with perhaps the most deserving: 397,412 war vets got last year an average of $40.24 monthly for war ailments, $27.33 for non-war ailments; 113,418 widows, orphans or surviving parents got from $15 to $45 a month.

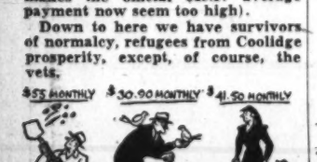
* * * *

Vets may get from $10 to $275 a month; only a few of the most war-torn drew the top figures, and those richly deserved it. It all amounted to $242,865,913 last year, or $3,880,233,265 since the war. Some 329,263 other war pensioners average $572.96 yearly, totaling $173,837,953, including one pensioner of the War of 1812 who gets $240 a year.

* * * *

Some 5,248,796 farmers last year got an average of $84 a YEAR for soil conservation. You thought it was more, eh? At that, 62 per cent of them got less than $60 for the year. But it added up to $440,000,000.

In these families were 22,000,000 persons.



"—on the Republic"

Since WPA began 7,500,000 different persons (whose families totaled 28,000,000 persons) have drawn a little over seven billions.

Now there are 1,986,999 on WPA; they draw from $31.20 to $94.90 a month for 130 hours work, and average $55 a month.

* * * *

Nearly 300,000 CCC boys draw $30 a month—$8 for themselves and $22 for their destitute families—plus their own board and room.

This number may soon be increased by 200,000 boys [illegible] tary training at only $5

Retired wage earners [illegible] been anteing for at least three [illegible] will be getting from $20.60 a mo[illegible] for those whose monthly wages averaged $50, up to $41.20 a month for plutocrats whose wages averaged $250 a onth, under social security.

* * * *

By these scales, their widows and orphans will get from $15.45 (lane widows) up to $72.10 a month for a widow with two tots. In 1940 these pensioners will total 912,000, drawing $114,000,000.

* * * *

Destitute oldsters—who haven't been anteing—are now averaging $19.17 a month in Federal aid to their State grants. Washington money is now going to 1,896,982 of these. But some niggardly States are paying only around $6 a month. To States paying up to $30, Washington contributes half; after January 1 Washington will contribute half of grant up to $40 monthly. (Which makes the official $19.17 average payment now seem too high).

Down to here we have survivors of normalcy, refugees from Coolidge prosperity, except, of course, the vets.

"—Washington money: bittersweet"

Some, but not all, of the above is largesse. Not largesse, but still Washington money, is upward of a billion going to about 1,000,000 full-time Federal employes, from FDR and the justices down to $900 a year clerks and postmasters.

* * * *

The Federal shilling goes also to more than 500,000 soldiers and sailors of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, reserves and militia. Last year this totaled $418,696,598, not mentioning cost of board and room.

* * * *

Also, Washington money is behind 149,000 loans on houses, at 5 per cent interest or less, running from 4 to 25 years. These loans are for 80 to 90 per cent of the value of houses, up to a $16,000 maximum. These home loans average $4,362.42, and the total is $650,000,000. But it's partly private money.

* * * *

In a way, the wage-and-hour law ought to be mentioned here. It now requires 30 cents an hour wages a week of not over 42 hours, with time and half for overtime, or a princely minimum wage of $12.60 a week. The law affected 1,380,000 this year, and next year it will bring more than 3,000,000 down to a 40-hour week; the hour wage goes up to 40 cents in 1945.

But that's the boss' money, by courtesy of the New Deal.

Did I say I don't get any money from the Government? I had forgotten. On second thought, I remember a check for $90-some last time I did two weeks' active duty as a captain in the Reserve Corps.

If you add up all the Republic's beneficiaries and multiply by 3.76, the average number of persons in a family, it'll total half of our 130,000,000 Americans partly on the Republic.

Maybe Gallup should poll these people about 1940.

Atlanta, Dec. 7 (AP).—W. L. Miller was ejected bodily, feet first, from the chairman's office of the Georgia highway department today for the second time since Gov. E. D. Rivers ordered him dismissed as road chairman.

After being evicted last Saturday night, Miller inaugurated a surprise move early today and walked into his office unopposed after a temporary injunction writ had been served on his successor, Lawson L. Patten.

Similar to Saturday night, three scuffles ensued before the slender chairman was dragged from his office with gubernatorial aide S. Marvin Griffin gripping both ankles.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 7.—Should the United States declare war on Germany and send her Army and Navy abroad to fight?

GEO[illegible] GALL[illegible]

In five successive surveys since the outbreak of war in Europe, the American Institute of Public Opinion has put that question to the voters of the Nation. During the first week of hostilities the vote against American participation was approximately 20 to 1. In the latest survey it is 27 to 1—one of the few instances in all the Institute's four years of polling where public sentiment on any issue has been so one-sided.

The overwhelming public desire to avoid war is dramatically illustrated in the results of the institute's five successive surveys, as follows:

For United States Participation in the War:	For	Against
First survey	6.0%	94.0%
Second survey	5.0	95.0
Third survey	5.0	95.0
Fourth survey	3.5	96.5
Fifth survey	3.5	96.5

The almost complete absence of "war fever" does not spring, however, from any lack of sympathy with the Allied cause, or from any condoning of Germany. Other Institute surveys have shown that the public is overwhelmingly on the side of England and France and believes Germany chiefly guilty of causing the present war. But the same studies have found a widespread disillusionment with the results of American participation in the last World War. Over 70 per cent of voters interviewed in one recent study said it was a mistake for the United States to enter the World War of 20 years ago.

Sentiment for staying out of the present conflict shows practically no variation by income groups or age groups. Of voters in the upper income level, 98 per cent oppose American participation in the war. Persons at the other end of the economic scale—those on relief—feel no differently, 95 per cent being opposed to war. This is one of the few cases where the rich man and the poor reliefer think alike.

The same unanimity of opinion is found by age groups in the survey. Voters under 30 years of age are 27 to 1 against going to war, and voters over the age of 50 are opposed to war by exactly the same ratio.

While it is clear that the public is in no mood at the present time to join a war abroad, earlier Institute polls have shown that the majority of voters would be willing to take up arms if the American continent were invaded. In case Canada were attacked by a European power, 73 per cent of voters in a recent survey say they think the United States should give military aid to Canada. Approximately the same number say they would fight to defend territory around the Panama Canal Zone from attack by a foreign power. A much smaller number (53 per cent) say they would fight if South America were invaded.

Only Christ Can Soothe World Ills, Says Pastor

Amid the social, moral and religious perplexities of this age, Christ is the only way of keeping lives uncontaminated, poised and simple, Dr. Clark J. Forcey said here yesterday on the celebration of his 1,000th local religious broadcast. The minister and founder of the Non-Sectarian Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch road northwest, preached over WOL.

Better Education Held Necessary in War on Syphilis

Better case finding, case holding and public education efforts are essential if a decrease in the incidence of syphilis is to be accomplished, a Public Health Service consultant reported yesterday.

Helen E. Woods, chief social worker of the Institute for Control of Syphilis, University of Pennsylvania Hospital, said full co-operation by the patient is the most important factor "if our goal is to be realized."

"In general," she reported, "the division of responsibility is as follows: (1) The community provides treatment facilities; the patient presents himself for treatment and accepts it in spite of the obstacles.

"(2) The community provides adequate instruction and assistance to the patient in adapting himself to a difficult situation; in response to this the patient observes precautions and protects others from infection.

"(3) The community provides the service to assist in arranging for examination of contacts; the patient's part is to divulge the identity of his contacts and sometimes to approach them regarding examination."

Lepke Sought Dope Ring Cut, Court Is Told

Demanded Half Share, Agreed on One-Third, Convict Testifies

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—One of the leaders of a reputed $10,000,000 narcotics syndicate testified today that Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, convicted racketeer, had demanded a half interest in the ring's profits but later agreed to take a one-third cut.

Attempting to break down the Government's efforts to link Buchalter with the ring's activities, the defense drew an acknowledgment from the witness, Yasha Katzenberg, that he "hoped for some consideration" in return for his testimony.

But Katzenberg, already serving a 10-year term in connection with the smuggling enterprise, denied he had been told his sentence might be reduced.

He said Max Schmuckler, one of Buchalter's three co-defendants, had no part in the conspiracy. The other defendants are Morris Sweeder and David Kardonick.

Katzenberg, known to police as the "king" of the ring, testified that after the first shipment was received in the fall of 1935, he met with Buchalter and two others named in the indictments as co-conspirators, and "it was agreed that Lepke would get 33 per cent of the next shipment which was already on the way." The shipments, he said, came by way of France from China.

Katzenberg, a native of Rumania, admitted under cross examination that he had engaged in bootlegging, bookmaking and narcotics peddling over a period of many years.

He said Buchalter innocently carried $6,500 to Europe to be delivered to an agent and used in the illicit trade, but later refused to go to China to buy narcotics.

Welfare Session Urges Uniform Merit System

Proposed establishment by the Social Security Board of a uniform merit system for the country's public welfare agencies yesterday won the approval of the fourth annual conference of the American Public Welfare Association.

"All delegates apparently favor adoption of some merit system," a conference official asserted, "but they have widely differing opinions on what the system should include."

Occupational standards for public welfare administrators will be discussed today, he said, when Social Security Board members are expected to confer with conference delegates during sessions at Wardman Park Hotel.

Paul V. McNutt, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, and Clarence D. Martin, Governor of Washington State, are scheduled to address delegates at the annual dinner at 7 tonight in the Continental Room of the hotel.

Justice Disobeyed By O'Hare Friend

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland, former business associate of the slain Edward J. O'Hare, defied an order of his chief justice today by holding court.

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby had ordered that Judge Holland's cases be assigned to other courts pending completion of an investigation into the judge's business associations with O'Hare, assassinated president of Sportsman's Park Race Track.

Today, the day the order became effective, Judge Holland began hearing cases.

Judge Sonsteby ordered Judge Holland's court call transferred to Judge Erwin Hasten. Judge Holland's courtroom will be stripped of bailiffs, clerks and other attaches.

Ohio Relief Is Criticized By Cincinnati

City Council Asks That State Meet 'Moral Obligation'

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 7.—Cincinnati's voice was added today to the list of Ohio cities clamoring about State handling of relief.

City council called upon Gov. John W. Bricker to "see to it that the State of Ohio lives up to its moral obligation to match necessary local relief money 50-50."

Pointing out Ohio had paid "only an average of 33 per cent" this year, the council declared in a resolution that unless the State "lives up to its obligation," a relief shortage of "not less than $400,000" would develop here in 1940.

Thus far this year, Cincinnati has been comparatively free of the relief woes of Cleveland, Toledo, and some other Ohio cities.

Although Cleveland expects to obtain $1,200,000 through sale of tax delinquency bonds, approved yesterday by the State tax commission, officials pointed out this did not mean 12,000 employable single persons and childless couples would return to city food order rolls. Mayor Harold H. Burton declared the sum would insure against further privation to those still on the rolls, however.

At Toledo, Martin S. Dodd, city law director, went to work on a demurrer to a $560,782 suit filed by Harold Fraser, attorney for the city's relief creditors. Fraser promised that merchants he represents will meet to arrange immediate extension of credit within 24 hours after a final judgment is obtained against the city. Dodd, however, took the position that the city's legal rights must be maintained.

All Toledo employables have been without city relief for 80 days.

Cab Drivers Held Evading License Law

Hire Boys to Drive, Leave Them to Take Blame, Krouse Says

Evasion of Washington's taxicab licensing laws by means of a new racket was exposed yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Krouse.

The disclosures came when Krouse investigated the case of Theodore Harrison, 23, colored, 1114 Fourth street northwest, who was found to be an innocent instrument of the racketeers, who left him to face a charge of unauthorized use of an automobile.

Harrison was arrested in October for driving a cab without a permit. The cab's owner told officers Harrison had no right to drive the vehicle and the District grand jury indicted the man.

Harrison's attorney, Ely Grubic, produced witnesses who said Harrison had been driving the cab by arrangement with the owner for months.

Krouse dismissed the charge and announced that he would take "appropriate action against the owner of the cab."

"The racket appears to work like this," Krouse said. "The owner of the taxicab arranges with colored youths to drive them, but no driver's licenses are obtained, to save the cost of fees. If the drivers are picked up, as this man was, then the owner disavows connection with them and they are accused of unauthorized use of an automobile. This apparently is not an isolated case."

Leiserson to Be First Witness in Labor Act Inquiry

William M. Leiserson, member of the National Labor Relations Board, will be the first witness before the House committee investigating the Wagner act, it was indicated yesterday.

Leiserson, who was appointed by President Roosevelt after Senate confirmation of Donald Wakefield Smith became impossible, is expected to appear when the committee holds its first open session on Monday. Thirty other witnesses including 15 employes of the Labor Board, have been subpenaed by the committee.

Final plans for opening of hearings were made yesterday at a committee meeting presided over by Chairman Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

Press Advised To Be Truthful With Americas

Firmer Friendships Would Result, Furay Tells G. W. Session

The United States should supply the Latin-American countries with truthful news via press associations and short-wave radio even though it hurts, a conference on inter-American affairs at George Washington University was told last night.

The responsibilities of the press and radio in improving Pan American relations by education were discussed by James H. Furay, vice president of the United Press, and Guy C. Hickok, director of international short-wave broadcasting for the National Broadcasting Co.

"To my mind the main thing the press can do for inter-American friendship is just what it can do for world amity—tell the truth, pleasant or unpleasant," said Furay.

Tells of Criticism

Furay said the United Press was subjected to a barrage of criticism a few years ago because it transmitted to South American newspapers stories of the campaign against Sandino in Nicaragua, Senate speeches condemning the marine activities in Nicaragua and Haiti, and the last days of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"I hesitantly suggest the word "democracy" again be used in the press with more reference to what a government is than where it is," Furay said.

Furay added that the press should assist in building up a background of accurate knowledge so that each new event reported "will fit into a general picture and not stand by itself."

Hickok pointed out that European nations engaged in conflict cannot "afford to broadcast honestly," whereas American international radio stations, "aloof from the melee . . . can still tell the nations to the south the truth, or all of the truth they can discover."

Warns Against Boasting

He warned against boasting of American achievements in addressing Latin Americans or condescension, and he advised speakers to steer clear of imperialism.

"Whether we like it or not," he said, "the conception that our southern neighbors have of us is not at all like our conception of ourselves.

"Germany reminds Latin America quite frequently—I hear them—that the United States has sent military expeditions into Latin America more than 50 times, and every Latin American who reads his history has very decided notions about the acquisition of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

"We must not therefore boast to the Latin Americans of our national morality as we boast of it to ourselves on patriotic holidays. We must not, in fact, boast to the Latin Americans at all.

"We must, on the contrary, try to approach the standard of courtesy which to them is a mark of civilization."

Francis S. Harmon, executive assistant to the president, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., also spoke.

Juror Strays Home, Draws 2 Days in Jail

He Blames Nerves But Judge Declares He Was Drinking

For failing to return to Police Court for jury duty after lunch Tuesday, Arthur Jay De Koven, 37-year-old engineer of 1436 R street northwest, was held in contempt yesterday and sentenced to two days in jail.

De Koven was arrested at his home Wednesday night by Detective W. E. Perry on a bench warrant issued by Judge Hobart Newman, of Police Court. He was made to post $100 to insure his appearance at court yesterday.

Excused for lunch Tuesday, De Koven failed to return to the court at 1:30 p. m. The roll was called twice that day and both times he failed to answer. When he did not appear Wednesday morning, Judge Newman ordered a bailiff to telephone his home. De Koven was reported to have said he would report immediately.

Several hours later he was called again, at which time it was learned he was still at home and taking a bath. It was then that the attachment was issued.

"I suffer from a nervous disorder," the defendant explained to Judge Newman yesterday. "I got panicky Tuesday and had to go out."

"My information," Judge Newman replied, "is that you had been drinking. I shall hold you in contempt and commit you for 48 hours."

Mrs. Keyes Left D. A. R. Over Funds, Writers

Held Out for Higher Pay for Contributors Than Daughters Wished

Friction over money matters and selection of writers—particularly the salary paid Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wife of the Michigan Senator—was revealed last night as the principal reason for Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes' resignation as editor of the National Historical Magazine, "house organ" of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"Yes, we are going out together," Mrs. Vandenberg declared last night. "I resigned my job this fall, but with the hearty consent of the D. A. R., I think."

"Lump Sum" Was Refused

Mrs. Vandenberg, who worked on newspapers before she married, was employed by Mrs. Keyes as a Washington feature columnist, but the D. A. R. always considered she was paid too much.

Mrs. Keyes, who also won the ire of her D. A. R. bosses by running an article by Mrs. Roosevelt—her friends said yesterday—before the First Lady resigned from the organization, of course—held out for a "lump sum budget" that would permit her leeway in her spending.

The D. A. R., however, insisted on breaking the total up into stated amount for each division of the magazine.

Tried to Raise Employes

"I also tried time and again to get more money for the girls who worked in my office," Mrs. Keyes explained last night.

All Mrs. Keyes' "possessions" were removed from the editorial offices yesterday, but Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, said last night no action had been taken on her resignation.

"The magazine will continue as usual, of course, but when a successor will be chosen we could not possibly say. We were two years selecting Mrs. Keyes, you remember," she said.

Antitrust Laws Boost Prices, Arnold Avers

Constitutionality Doubtful, Monopoly Hearing Is Told

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Price control through anti-profiteering legislation will meet serious opposition in some high-ranking New Deal circles, it was indicated at a hearing of the Monopoly Committee yesterday.

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General and chief of the Government's "trust-busters," asserted that the tendency of such laws was to boost prices rather than curb them. He added that legislation of this type was of doubtful constitutionality.

Other members of the committee have privately indicated in more guarded language that they would favor price controls only as a last resort. However, anti-profiteering legislation is being drafted by some liberal New Deal advisers and, it is reported, by the Department of Justice itself.

Arnold Agrees With Nelson

Arnold's comments on anti-profiteering laws came in the course of testimony by Donald M. Nelson, vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., who contended there is no necessity, at the moment, "for any governmental agency to police the price situation."

Arnold agreed that the Monopoly Committee, Justice Department and Federal Trade Commission could take care of the situation.

It is nearly impossible to draft anti-profiteering legislation, Arnold added, because "a profiteer usually was anyone making a lot of money." He declared that he thought well-organized consumer opposition might prevent serious price rises.

Arnold, who will formally testify before the committee today, also observed that some industrialists are using the wage-hour law as an excuse for increasing prices.

Low Prices Predicted

Meanwhile, in a renewal of the insurance investigations, a Monopoly sub-committee heard that an insurance examiner for the State of Kansas obtained official approval for a transaction involving companies in which he was financially interested and that an insurance executive poured money into a political campaign for the election of a State insurance superintendent.

In the price hearings, the Sears Roebuck executive told the committee he thought prices on consumer goods for next spring would be "low, even after the necessary small increases are made."

Nelson said industry had shown "great statesmanship" in preventing "a run-away price situation" this fall. Industry, he said, "must continue to keep prices relatively low, depending upon increased production wherever possible to bring about decreased overhead and lower costs."

Nelson was followed to the stand by Albert Haring, professor of marketing at Indiana University, who declared that "any form of direct supervision" of the Nation's 532,000 food stores "would probably cost more than it could save the people." He said "publicity ought to do the job" in preventing undue food price advances.

V. B. Holt Testifies

The hearing concluded with a lengthy discussion—strongly reminiscent of the classroom—between four college professors—Haring; Theodore J. Kreps, economics professor at Leland Stanford now serving as economic consultant for the monopoly committee; and two committee members, Willard Thorp, formerly of Amherst, and A. F. Hinrichs, formerly of Brown.

The insurance hearing dealt principally with the defunct Federal Reserve Insurance Co., of Kansas City, Kans.

V. B. Holt, former secretary-treasurer of the company, testified that Col. W. K. Herndon had received over $100,000 from a transaction involving insurance stock sales while he was examiner for the State insurance department in 1929.

Holt said Herndon had authorized him to tell the owner of the stock that the State insurance department demanded that it be sold. Herndon eventually received $100,000 in cash and a $15,000 note in return for his brokerage services, the witness said.

Holt said Herndon for several years received percentage of commissions paid by the Federal Reserve Co. on an exclusive agency contract held by the late W. H. Gregory, one of the company's founders.

Holt read to the committee a letter, dated August, 1936, in which Gregory said that "more money was spent" in a campaign to elect W. R. Baker as State insurance superintendent than in "probably any other campaign in Kansas." Money, said Gregory, "rolled as freely as water running downstream." Baker was elected.

O'Connell at 80 Assails Greedy Public Officers

CARDINAL O'CONNELL

Boston Archbishop On Birthday Eve Urges Caution in Elections

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP).—William Cardinal O'Connell, dean of the American Roman Catholic hierarchy, censured public officials influenced by "a low greed and ambition" today and urged the people "to be more cautious about whom they elect."

In an interview on the eve of his eightieth birthday the prelate, who is Archbishop of Boston, declared "our people have been played upon by officials who want everything in a day. These officials have lost their heads. Some people don't know how to stand success. They plunge headlong as though no one was watching them, but God is always watching."

Addressing members of the clergy of his diocese and representatives of various charitable and religious organizations, the cardinal spoke of "the unity and cooperation" that had been achieved in the diocese, but added "we can not end, however, on such a note of triumph.

"What is it that is lacking in some of our public officials? They have been trained to know what their duty is. Is it a lack of direction on our part? God forbid. No, they can not say they don't know their duty. Neither can they say that it is the temptation of public office, because they must know from long experience in public affairs what the temptations are."

Responsibility rests upon the people, he said, to determine whether or not "the man is really fitted to do his duty."

Alluding to the work that has been done throughout the diocese, particularly among the poor and the blind, the cardinal concluded: "I hope that I will be able to give everything, even to the last drop of my blood, for Him, amen."

Five Tax Plans Studied to Get Defense Funds

Flat Percentage Increase in Existing Levies Heads List

By the Associated Press

Congressional experts are studying five new tax plans designed to raise money for the projected record defense outlays next year.

All would give the average American pocketbook a severe jolt, and it is problematical whether any of them could be enacted in an election year.

The five plans, which will be submitted to Congressional Committees if special defense levies are deemed necessary, follow:

A flat percentage increase in existing taxes. If an individual owed $100 in taxes under the present schedule and if a 10 per cent increase were ordered, for instance, his bill would be $110.

Reduction of existing exemptions to bring more "little fellows" under the income tax structure, and imposition of higher rates on middle bracket incomes.

A "defense profits tax" which would impose special high rates on all profits in excess of those a corporation had made in a designated "normal" year.

A special levy on the profits of munitions and armaments manufacturers. Such a tax was enacted in 1916, but yielded only nominal revenue.

A general sales tax. This suggestion has been criticized by Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and presumably would command scant support.

Various Government authorities have been studying possible new taxes since President Roosevelt suggested the country decide soon whether to finance increased defense by taxation or borrowing.

The Chief Executive said he wanted to provide public discussion of the problem. He reported that the next defense budget would aggregate $2,250,000,000, or about $500,000,000 more than that for the current fiscal year.

Revenue authorities said the simplest plan would be to increase the general tax burden by a specified percentage. On the basis of 1938 returns, it would require a general increase of about 20 per cent to raise an additional $500,000,000 from income levies on individuals and corporations. A flat increase could be applied also to the existing excise taxes, such as those on liquor and cigarettes.

$149,199 Tax Claim on Lalor Estate Upheld

By the Associated Press

A Tax Appeals Board opinion upheld yesterday the Treasury's claim to $149,199 in taxes against the estate of Willard A. Lalor, who died October 9, 1934. Lalor resided at the Metropolitan Club here.

The board's findings said Lalor, who inherited a substantial part of his fortune from his brother, John Charles Lalor, noted chemist, provided in his will for creation of a $400,000 Lalor Foundation Memorial Scholarship Fund and professorship, to be established by his sister, Anna Lalor Burdick, of Washington, and his nephew, Dr Charles Lalor Burdick.

The Lalor Foundation accordingly was incorporated in Delaware, where Dr. Burdick was associated with the duPont company as a consulting chemist.

Lalor also had provided $2,000 each for his nieces, Ruth Lalor and Margaret Lalor Carry, if they refrained from marriage until the age of 25. They complied and received the money from the estate.

Executors of the estate contended estate tax deductions should be allowed on these payments.

The board's opinion denied these deductions on grounds the sums were not paid as outright bequests.

Dr. Buhrer to Be Buried Today From His Church

Funeral services for Dr. James D. Buhrer, pastor of First Reformed Church for 35 years, whose death occurred Wednesday, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The body will lie in state at the church after 1 p. m.

Dr. Buhrer came to the church here from Tiffin, Ohio, in 1904. He was educated at Western Reserve Academy, Calvin College, where he received his B. A. and M. A. degrees, at Heidelberg University, where he was awarded his B.D.; Chicago University and American University. The latter institution awarded him his Ph.D.

He was known as a teacher of psychology and religious history. He conducted classes in these fields at the Y. M. C. A., Howard University and other institutions.

Among his writings was a "History of the Buhrer Family." Dr. Buhrer was a member of the Sixteenth Street Citizens Association, the Potomac Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States, and the Presbyterian Ministerial Association.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Leiner Buhrer, died in 1930. Two children, Paul M. Buhrer and Edna M. Buhrer, survive.

3 Hurt as 2-Ton Steel Column Falls 8 Floors Into I Street

Piece Knocked Down By Derrick Boom Narrowly Misses Bus

A two-ton steel column thundered into busy I street from the eighth floor of the new Lafayette Building yesterday, narrowly missed a Capital Transit bus and sent three men to the hospital with injuries caused by flying timbers.

The 30-foot column, already bolted into position on the eighth floor, was knocked over by a derrick boom. It tore loose a second column the same size, and then slipped over the edge, according to Deputy District Building Inspector James B. Daly. The second column hung by a thin steel plate, and did not fall.

Injured and admitted to Emergency Hospital were:

Dewey Klotz, 39, of 716 East Capitol street, construction foreman with the Senn Herrick Corporation, which has the concrete contract for the building. Klotz suffered fractured ribs and a possible spine fracture, the hospital reported.

Mark W. Krause, 61, of 928 K street northwest, retired paper hanger, who was walking past the building. He suffered a broken left leg, and possible spine and skull fractures.

James McManus, colored, 36, of 73 G street northwest, laborer employed by Senn Herrick, who suffered a hip fracture.

Police reported the crash occurred at 2:30 p. m. On the eighth floor the derrick was being employed to sort steel beams. At ground level a truckload of tiles had been backed under the sidewalk shelter to unload. The bus was approaching from the west along I street, just west of Fifteenth street.

As the steel column fell, witnesses saw workmen flee from under the sidewalk shelter. The bus, about half full of passengers, pulled to a stop.

The column crashed against a horizontal fifth floor beam, leveled out, ripped through the flimsy sidewalk shelter, and landed in the street. One end was more than half-way across the street, and the other rested on the wrecked timber on the sidewalk. The column was twisted nearly a foot out of line by the impact.

Workers on Truck Escape Injury

An ambulance, fire rescue squad and police went to the aid of the injured men, while workmen on the ground cleared wreckage and those on the eighth floor worked to secure the hanging column and haul it to safety.

More than 500 persons watched from across the street and traffic was routed around the area for nearly an hour.

Witnesses credited the tile truck with minimizing the number injured. It was backed across the sidewalk, diverting pedestrians.

Its driver, Jack Jarvis, 26, of 2225 Shannon place southeast, said he was just getting out of the driver's side when the column crashed within inches of the other side. His helper, Roger Williams, colored, 25, also escaped.

Another Has Close Shave

William Graham, of 1326 Columbia road northwest, said he had been standing right where the column fell, and had walked away when the tile truck arrived. He was around the corner when the crash came, but he heard the "terrible noise."

The sound as the column hit was heard three or more blocks away.

Charles Burger, of 3441 Fourteenth street northwest, was watching construction from across the street, and was "just going to go across." The crash came a few moments after he decided to stay where he was.

The 12-story Lafayette Building, on the site of the McLean mansion later used as offices by the Bituminous Coal Commission, is being built at a real estate and construction cost of more than $8,000,000, and will provide some 250,000 feet of office space.

An official of the steel contracting firm, the Taylor Fichter Steel Construction Co., said there had been no negligence.

John W. Oehmann, District building inspector, said he had received Daly's report. Oehmann said there had been no violation of the building code.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dec. 7.—The battleship Wyoming will make a special trip to Saint Eustatius, Dutch West Indies, in order that Capt. Donald F. Patterson, representing President Roosevelt, may present the Dutch authorities with a bronze plaque commemorating the first recognition of United States sovereignty by a foreign power.

It was on November 16, 1776, four months after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, that Gov. Johannes de Graff, of Saint Eustatius, ordered a gun salute fired in reply to guns of the United States brig of war Andrew Doria. This signified recognition of the new American Republic.

Domestic Case Advisory Body Wins Backing

Would Speed Action, Bar Committee Says; 3,000 Pleas Waiting

Creation of a commission to modernize the District Court's procedure in domestic relations cases was urged yesterday by a special committee of the District Bar Association.

The plan was opposed in a minority report.

The proposal will be considered by the association at a special meeting at the Mayflower next Thursday night.

H. Winship Wheatley was chairman of the committee, which investigated commission plans operating in Detroit and Cleveland.

Would Save Judge's Time

The proposed commission would investigate all family disputes reaching court, and advise the court what orders would best serve the welfare of children, the adults involved and society in general.

The committee observed that about 60 per cent of the nonjury cases filed in the District Court involve matrimonial troubles. The issues in these cases claim much time of the judges, determining matters which could be handled better by a commissioner, acting informally. Justice would thus be speeded up, said the committee, pointing out that more than 3,000 divorce cases now are awaiting disposition.

Minority Dissents

Others approving the report were Hyman M. Goldstein, Irwin Geiger, Philip Goldstein, Lawrence Koenigsberger, George Monk, A. Philip Kane, Louis Ottenberg, H. Winship Wheatley, jr., and John J. Sirica.

Attorneys Jean M. Boardman, Lewis H. Shapiro and Raymond Neudecker contended that the court is able to handle the divorce situation without a commissioner and expressed fear that the commission plan would lead to greater delay.

Adm. Meyers Dies Aboard His Flagship

Rear Admiral George Julian Meyers, 58, commander, Base Force, United States Fleet, died of a heart attack late yesterday aboard his flagship, the Argonne, off San Pedro, Calif.

ADM. MEYERS

During the World War, Admiral Meyer was awarded the Navy Cross for "exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility as commander officer of the U. S. S. Michigan in the Atlantic Fleet.

Admiral Meyers was named commander of the battleship Alabama in 1919 and the following year assumed command of the U. S. S. Sacramento.

He also commanded Destroyer Squadron 14, Atlantic Fleet, and was a graduate of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., and the Army War College here.

After serving as commander of the U. S. S. Patoka, Admiral Meyers returned to Washington in 1926 to serve three years as a member of the staff of the Army War College.

Admiral Meyers, who was named commander of the light cruiser Memphis in 1929, also commanded Cruiser Division 5, U. S. Fleet, a special service squadron and the Sixteenth Naval District, Cavite, P. I. He was on duty here in 1931 in the Office of Naval Operations.

A native of Council Bluffs, Iowa, he entered the Naval Academy in 1898. He was a Mason and a member of the Army and Navy Country Club here.

Admiral Meyers is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Worthington Clagett Meyers, and son, George Julian Meyers, jr., both of Long Beach, Calif.

The body will be sent here for burial in Arlington Cemetery, the Associated Press reported.

Christmas Cash Is $56 Per Head

The Treasury said yesterday that everyone in the United States should have $56.87 for Christmas shopping.

According to Treasury Department statistics there was $7,482,230,677 in circulation on November 30, an average of $56.87 when divided by the 131,572,000 estimated population.

Last year at this time your theoretical Christian shopping money was only $51.96, and in case you were Christmas shopping in 1879, it was a meager $16.92.

Last Rites Today For Guy Mitchell

Last rites will be held this afternoon for Guy Elliott Mitchell, librarian of the United States Geological Survey. Services will be conducted at 3:30 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, by the Brightwood Masonic Lodge.

A pioneer in reclamation work, an ardent outdoorsman and an intrepid bicycle racer in his youth, Mr. Mitchell was born in Woodward, Pa., on April 11, 1870. His father, the late Frederick William Mitchell, was a Union officer in the Civil War.

Forty years ago he married Miss Madeleine A. Blandy, who survives, with their two daughters, Miss Margaret B. Mitchell and Mrs. Dorothy M. Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell lived at 3162 Seventeenth street northwest. He died Tuesday in Homeopathic Hospital.

Reserve Board Reports Ingot Output Record

Industrial Activity Almost at Capacity Since War Started

Industrial activity in the United States has increased to almost capacity levels in many lines since the outbreak of war, with some phases of the steel industry reaching the largest output on record, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

The first two months of war also brought a sharp increase in United States exports, in contrast to declines during the early period of the World War, and a decline in the flow of gold to this country.

The Allies, however, have more than eight billions of dollars available in this country for purchase of war needs, the report disclosed, while Germany has only $160,000,000. Russia has $1,000,000,000 in gold reserves and negotiable securities here, while Finland has less than $250,000,000.

Ingot Output a Record

Industrial production reached 125 per cent of the 1923-25 average in November, as compared to 103 in August, before the outbreak of the European war. The rise has been rapid since September 1, reaching 111 per cent in September and 120 in October.

"In the steel industry, outputs of ingots and of many finished products was the largest on record, and in most steel-consuming industries, there were marked increases in activity," the report said.

"Automobile production reached high levels, except at plants of one major producer whose production had been curtailed since early October by an industrial dispute." (This referred to the Chrysler company.)

Continue at High Levels

Output of textiles, petroleum products and electricity continued at high levels; railroad shipments declined "less than seasonally," while contracts for private construction, both residential and nonresidential, continued "close to the high levels of the year," the board said.

The sharp rise in United States exports was partly seasonal, the board declared, but figures were well above those for the same period last year.

"No such increase occurred in the initial war months of 1914," the board pointed out significantly.

"It was not until December, following the reorganization of disrupted shipping schedules and the reopening of established business connections, that exports exceeded those of the previous year," the board said.

This fall, however, United States cotton exports have risen markedly; exports of iron and steel "continued the steady expansion that began in the summer of 1938;" shipments of automobiles, coal, chemicals, machinery and petroleum products increased or "continued at the high levels reached during the recent years of war preparation abroad," the board asserted.

Woodring Announces Knox Trophy Award

Secretary of War Woodring yesterday announced award of the Knox Trophy, presented annually to the most efficient field artillery battery in the Army, to Battery A of the Second Field Artillery, stationed in Panama.

At the same time, it was stated that the Knox Medal will be awarded to Sergt. Vernon O. Moore, of Fort Bragg, N. C. The medal is given to the highest ranking enlisted student at the Field Artillery School, Capt. Walter D. Webb, jr., commanding the winning battery, will receive the trophy for his unit.

Col. Latrobe, Famed Spinner Of Yarns, Dies

Burial Tomorrow for Veteran Cavalryman And Aide to Coolidge

Col. Osmun Latrobe, who died in Walter Reed Hospital Wednesday night, was a colorful veteran of numerous cavalry campaigns and military aide to President Coolidge.

The well-known Army officer, famed for his story-telling ability, had been ill for more than a year. He retired from active service in August of last year and made his home at 6308 Connecticut avenue.

Funeral services will be held at Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, followed by burial with military honors in Arlington Cemetery.

Fought With Cubans

Col. Latrobe began his military career with the Cuban insurgent army, serve as a captain of artillery under Gen. Garcia against the Spanish from 1896 to 1898. When the United States declared war against Spain, he was appointed a captain in the Fourth United States Volunteer Infantry, and served as aide-de-camp to Maj. Gen. James H. Wilson, commanding the division operating in Puerto Rico.

After the war he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Eighth Cavalry and returned to the United States in 1902. From 1905 to 1908, Col. Latrobe served in the Philippines and returned there in 1911. In 1916, still a captain, he was ordered from the islands to join Gen. Pershing in the punitive expedition into Mexico.

He was an intructor at Plattsburg, N. Y., during the early part of the World War and went to France with the Eighty-second Division, but returned in August, 1918, to command a new regiment of Infantry.

President Coolidge met the red-haired, vigorous officer while on a vacation in the Black Hills in 1927. Col. Latrobe was commanding officer of Fort Meade, S. Dak., a Cavalry post dating from pioneer days, and the President was much taken with his neighbor.

Always a lover of wild life and famous as a humane sportsman, Col. Latrobe was largely responsible for the preservation of the elk herd in Wyoming. When Coolidge returned to Washington, Latrobe was soon ordered here as his aide. While holding the post, he often relieved the President's working hours by spinning yarns of the outdoors.

His last Army assignment was with the Organized Reserves at Towson, Md. A member of a prominent Maryland family, he was born in Baltimore 65 years ago. He attended the University of Pennsylvania.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Maria L. Latrobe, daughter of a Spanish naval officer and born in Puerto Rico; a daughter, Mrs. R. H. Lewis, of New Orleans; two sons, Lieut. Comdr. W. C. Latrobe, assigned to the destroyer Hale, and Osmun B. Latrobe, of Houston Tex., and two sisters, Edna C. Latrobe, of Baltimore, and Mrs. S. H. Browne, of New York City.

French Infantry Routs Nazis

new line of fortifications seems to have removed any hope the enemy may have of crossing or flanking the Maginot Line.

"Furthermore, completion of all this work places the French high command in a position to attempt maneuvering operations beyond the defensive phase on the day and at the hour it may suit it eventually to fix."

The significance of this statement is plain. In the first place the Maginot Line now can serve fully the double purpose for which it was conceived—of a bulwark to withstand the enemy and of a pivot of maneuver. The statement confirms previous indications that the war is likely to end only by a decisive battle. The statement is issued at a time when Finland is rallying the moral support of the entire neutral world in her resistance to an aggressor, when the League of Nations is meeting to discuss Finland's situation, when overt threats are being made to certain Balkan countries and when it is hinted to small neutrals in western Europe that they may soon have to choose between Germany and the Allies.

It may be only a coincidence, but the fact remains that in the last 24 hours German scouting and raiding parties have been more aggressive between the Rhine and the Moselle, and that for the first time since operations began the French communique mentions infantry fire along the Rhine itself.

Most enemy patrols were reported from the Wissembourg sector, not far from the point where the Maginot line turns south to follow the Rhine. Some fell back only when caught under artillery fire.

In the Bitche sector, west of the Wissembourg sector, the French a few days ago pushed some of their outposts beyond the frontier line where they had been established in mid-October.

Methods used in German attacks last night and this morning showed more precision and care than in the previous patrol actions.

McNutt Stresses Competence in Jobs

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 7 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, told the American Vocational Association tonight that the Nation would rise or fall "by the enlightenment and good citizenship of the average man or woman."

"Our country will never resign itself to the idea of permanent unemployment," McNutt said. "Nor will we trade the security of work at which the workman is competent, for any Government-guaranteed dole."

Stressing the importance of establishing "occupational competence" in individuals, McNutt warned that a trend toward a later "employment age" for youth, evident before the depression, is likely to continue for some time to come.

He said that continued unemployment of youth is in part the result of lack of suitable schools and colleges.

Barkley to Leave Clinic Today 'A New Man'

Rochester, Minn.—Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic leader in the United States Senate, who recently underwent a minor operation at the Mayo Clinic, was scheduled to leave here this afternoon for his home at Paducah, Ky.

The Senator, who came here three weeks ago, said he was "feeling like a new man."

He Faced Russian Firing Squad 3 Times

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 7.—Kenneth Brown Collings, of Rockville Center, N. Y., correspondent for the California Newspaper Publishers Association, turned up in Berlin today and described experiences in Russian prisons and narrow escapes from being shot as a spy.

Collings said he had been on an assignment to look at the German-Russian frontier.

"I inadvertently walked across into Russian territory near Prostken, in East Prussia," he said. "Two seconds later three Russian soldiers sprang from concealment behind a partially demolished house and rammed their bayonets into my ribs."

Unable to speak Russian, Collings could not make himself understood. The Russians thought he was a spy, he said, and three times within 20 minutes they made him stand against a wall while they loaded their rifles apparently with the intention of shooting him.

Each time, Collins said, he waved his American passport and shouted "Americansky correspondent."

"An officer came along and compromised by throwing me into the basement of a cell with nine Polish prisoners," he continued.

He said one of the prisoners offered him a belt to hang himself.

The next day, Collings said he was compelled to walk 20 miles through a downpour with a group of Polish prisoners who had become reconciled to being executed.

At Raegrod on the frontier he "succeeded in making the officer understand who I was but I was kept prisoner just the same."

During the night he was moved again, he said, this time to Augustow and another basement prison.

"Every time I went down into one of those basements," said Collings, "I never expected to come out alive. For three days I expected each moment to be my last."

A German-speaking Russian who finally acted as interpreter relieved Collings of his complications.

After his identity was straightened out, Collings said, the Russians were "so sorry for what they had done they installed me in a room in the officers' club. They next day they escorted me back to the German frontier."

Soviets Set Up Finn Blockade; Nazis Stand Pat

Reich Aids Only Those Who Aid Her, Inspired Press Says

to the vital interests of the Soviet state.

In Berlin, however, Finland and the other countries of Scandinavia were denied any assistance of the Reich in a German statement issued tonight.

The expression of Reich opinion, acknowledged to have been evoked by the Anglo-French contention that Germany is "coresponsible for the events in the north," is contained in a German news agency dispatch, obviously officially inspired.

German criticisms are directed against all of the Scandinavian nations, with but a brief ameliorating word for Denmark, because the latter country signed a non-agression pact with Germany while the others declined to do so.

Atlantic Goal Admitted

Directly, however, the statement represents an application of pressure on the Scandinavian countries, other than Finland, for their alleged pro-Ally tendencies, not only in their reaction to such a purely military measure as the blockade but also in their sympathies and public opinion.

Russia's westward striving in the north are generally conceded in Berlin to be in the direction of finding an ice-free Atlantic outlet, which, in turn, must be of the gravest direct concern to Norway and Sweden.

England, in the German view, is already sufficiently engaged in her war with the Reich, and, furthermore, does not desire to come to grips with Russia, because of the alleged vulnerability of her Near-Eastern possessions and India.

In which direction, then, are the Scandinavian countries to turn? The answer is apparently contained in the conclusion of the German statement, which infers that the necessary prerequisite to the Reich's beginning to become overtly interested in the Scandinavian countries lises with themselves and their adoption of a friendly policy.

"The Reich knows very well its duty to thankfulness and trueness, but its friendship does not lie in the street from which each as he wishes can call it at will, after having previously rejected it," the German statement declares.

"The Reich is true to those who are true to it. The Reich assists those who assist it. The Reich serves those who serve her," the statement adds.

Line Unbroken Say Finns

Helsinki, Dec. 7 (AP).—Contrary to Russian assertions, a Finnish spokesman said today the invaders were not yet threatening the Mannerheim Line, a water defense system composed of an irregular chain of lakes extending almost across the narrow isthmus. The line begins at Sakkola on the east and follows a westward course through the town of Moulaa to Kuolema Lake, "the lake of death."

The Russians announced early today they had broken through the Mannerheim Line at two places and were continuing to advance northward. On the east, they said they reached Kivinieml, a town behind the line and 7½ miles west of Sakkola. On the west, they reported occupation of Perkjarvi, 25 miles southeast of Viipuri, a main objective on the Gulf of Finland.

The heaviest fighting was reported along the Taipale River and along the southern edge of Lake Ladoga near Sakkola, which is 20 miles from the frontier, and at Uusikirkko, about 12½ miles from the frontier and 15 miles southeast of the Mannerheim Line's eastern terminus.

Despite the bad weather, the Red fleet bombarded undisclosed points along the southern coast, but Finns declared the big guns caused no damage. They said their famed coastal batteries, designed by Lieut. Gen. V. P. Nenonen, chief of Finnish artillery, beat off the attacks.

On the front in central Finland, the Finns reported they held their own against new Soviet attacks. Soviet fighters were aiming at Toiua Lake on this front.

A government spokesman said army physicians were treating 11 cases of gas poisoning at Salmi, on the northern shore of Ladoga.

Finland's fighting forces welcomed 230 Finnish-Americans, some of whom had never seen the country, who arrived to join the fight against Russia. They came from New York by way of Norway and Sweden.

The group said more Finnish-Americans would follow.

An army spokesman said papers taken from captured Russian officers indicated the Soviet forces were aiming at reaching the Atlantic.

He added that the papers indicated Russia long had planned her attack on Finland. Two captured Russian flying lieutenants were quoted as saying they had orders to load their bomb racks the night of November 26, four days before the Red army marched into Finland.

Finns Call for Help

Helsinki, Dec. 7 (INS).—Finland tonight appealed to the Anglo-French Allies, the Scandinavian countries and other sympathetic powers to rush men and arms to the aid of the Finnish struggle against the Russian invasion.

A Finnish foreign office spokesman bluntly declared that other nations must join in the actual fighting against the Soviet juggernaut or Finland will perish as a republic, just as Poland did.

Use of Gas Charged

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Dec. 7.—While Lord Strabogli, Labor member, warned in the House of Lords this afternoon that for Britain to become embroiled with Russia as a result of her invasion of Finland would play into the hands of Nazi Germany, Achates Gripenberg, Finnish minister to London, called the attention of the foreign office to the charge that the Red army had used gas shells in the fighting north of Lake Ladoga last night.

Minister Gripenberg said he had no information about what kind of gas the Russians were alleged to have used, but that he had been instructed officially by his government to call the alleged violation of international agreement to the attention of the British government.

The charge came almost on the eve of the convening of the League of Nations Council, which meets Saturday in Geneva to hear the Finnish case against Russia.

Duchess Marie Plans Benefit For Finland

GRAND DUCHESS MARIE
As She Arrived at Washington Airport

Member of Russian Royal Family Upset By New Invasion

The exiled Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, over a lunch of rolls and coffee at the airport yesterday, said the war in Finland is "frightfully important" to the rest of the world.

"It marks a turning point toward a new combination of the powers," she said, but to the question of what the combination would be she gestured helplessly, and asked "But how are we to know?"

The grand duchess—author, lecturer and journalist—came to Washington for an hour en route from Norfolk, where she had lectured, to her home in New York.

She said one of the first things she wanted to do was to get in touch with the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, but found he could not be reached at the legation. "I want to find out from him what I can do to help," she said.

Her plan now, she explained, is to arrange a big benefit party in New York to raise money for Finland.

And then she talked about the Finns as she had known them—"a brave, hard-working, modest, loyal people." "Hard-fighting, too," she added.

As plane time neared the grand duchess went first to a newsstand to find the newspaper with her favorite crossword puzzle. She said she found crossword puzzles helpful in brushing up her vocabulary.

Outside the terminal, and walking toward the plane, she recalled her first flight in a Russian bomber in the World War. "We flew over the German lines," she said. "It was terribly dangerous, but when you're young you don't care." A moment later she turned and, with a wave back, entered the plane.

Passion Play Canceled

West Europe Acts to Stem Russia's March

Mobilizes Resources To Bolster Finns, Set Up Front in Balkans

By Ralph W. Barnes

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Dec. 7.—That large part of Europe which desires to stem the new Soviet "drang nach westen," as manifest in the invasion of Finland and the veiled threats against Rumania and Turkey, was mobilizing tonight its spare resources to bolster the Finnish defense in the north and to build up a wall or front in the Balkans to the south, beyond which the Bolsheviks would not be permitted to come.

Every possible step should be taken, it was being stated in more than one European chancellery, to halt the westward advance of the Red avalanche. Aroused by the menace from the east, the British authorities on their part were studying their own existing and potential war supplies to determine what materials could be dispatched advantageously to the Finnish front.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Telegraph will say tomorrow that at the forthcoming sessions of the League of Nations Council and Assembly at Geneva, the British delegation will support proposals expected to be made that sanctions should be imposed against the Soviets because of their aggression.

"Finland," he will add, "has not appealed for aid under the article of the league covenant which calls for sanctions against the aggressor. It is anticipated, however, that the League will itself decide to discuss the position under that article—No. 16—of the covenant.

"While article 16 imposes sanctions on aggressor, actual action to be taken is left to the discretion of member states. It is not, apparently, the intention of Britain to call for the expulsion of Russia from the League. Her delegate will, I understand, certainly support such a proposal, if it is put forward."

Bucharest Nervous

By Sonia Tomara

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Bucharest, Dec. 7.—Two different factors contributed today to render the atmosphere more nervous in Bucharest.

First, the report spread about an article published in the Soviet press advising Rumania to sign a pact of mutual assistance with Russia.

Secondly, it was learned in some circles that Great Britain had started to fight Germany in the Balkan economic field.

Neither of these reports reached the general public.

Only Rumanian statesmen and some foreign diplomats heard about the recent efforts of the British to snatch raw materials out of German hands and to stop the leakage through Rumania and the Danube in Britains' blockade.

It was said that Sir Reginald Hoare, British Minister to Bucharest, had made demarches urging the Rumanians to sell less to the Reich and offering cash payments in sterling for 60 per cent of Britain's purchases in oil and food.

Such an offer naturally would appear very tempting to Rumania. Germany has been paying her purchases with goods and more often than not in long-term deliveries. It is understood the Rumanians fear British pressure may disturb the balance between the warring camps in the west.

The main apprehension of Rumanians is to have the British become so active in this part of the world that the Germans would no longer be satisfied with the amount of supplies delivered by Rumania. They might then, it is felt, want to get everything rather than a mere part of Rumanian oil and cereals. This might mean the marching in of German troops.

It has been noted that five oil plants and refineries have burned down in the last four weeks. No explanations of the fires have been advanced.

views which took place before and after at Milan, Salzburg, Berlin.

"Declares that everything which may happen in the Danube Basin or the Balkans cannot help but directly interest Italy, in view of the common territorial maritime frontiers which came after union of the Albanian Kingdom to that of Italy.

"As regards maritime traffic of Italy it intends to safeguard it in the most explicit manner, both for its prestige and its indisputable necessity to live."

By Augur.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 7.—German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's indiscreet remarks indicate that Josef Stalin is only waiting to conclude his Finnish enterprise to start a new campaign in the Balkans.

Here in London it is known that Von Ribbentrop among his secret annexes in the Russian-German pact signed a protocol admitting the right of Russia to use force if necessary to oblige Rumania to make restitution of Bessarabia, the province which remained under the czar's ownership through most of the nineteenth century and until the Bolshevik revolution.

No wonder Mussolini is desirous of preserving in the Balkans his sphere of influence and that Italian interests are anxious to help Finland.

He is believed to feel that the first line of defense in the Balkans against Stalin's aggression lies in the north. Italian volunteers who have gone to the aid of Finland are convinced that they are defending the vital interests of their own country.

A glance at the map shows that the configuration of the Russian-Rumanian frontier is such that it is easy to invade Bessarabia from various points simultaneously. Since the Russians have occupied Polish Galicia they possess a position outflanking the main Rumanian forces if the latter try to meet the Russian menace along the line of the River Dniester, which constitutes a divide.

Provided the Russians are prepared to put in a sufficient number of divisions, accompanied by ample motorized forces, natural obstacles do not exist to prevent them overrunning the whole province.

The Rumanian army's best plan is to organize its resistance on the line of the River Pruth on the western limit of Bessarabia, thus avoiding a dangerous flanking attack from Galicia.

The Rumanians, with their air force, and strengthened from the outside could hold up the enemy indefinitely, provided two conditions were fulfilled: First, that the Russians were prevented use of their Black Sea fleet to cover a landing at the Danube estuary, and second, if Hungary did not attack from the rear.

The first depends upon the attitude of the Anglo-French entente and Turkey, which are guarantors one way or another of Rumanian independence. For the British fleet cannot pass the Dardanelles without Turkish consent. The second is improbable in spite of efforts of Germany to move the Hungarians to take advantage of Rumania's difficulties and invade her territory with the object of retaking territory lost in peace.

It is clear that a Rumanian Russian conflict cannot be localized.

Finns Cheered in Budapest

Budapest, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Students demonstrations in which Russia was booed and Finland cheered were staged in the streets of Budapest tonight, a few hours after diplomatic relations between Hungary and Russia were restored after a 10-month break.

A crowd of 2,000 persons led by members of the Turul students association marched to the Finnish Legation at 9 p. m. The spokesman for the crowd, a student leader named Josef Ambruss, told Finnish Minister Omni Talas that the Hungarian people were completely sympathetic to Finland's plight.

The Finnish minister made a brief speech of thanks.

Spain Reaches Crux in French Trade Talks

Cut Off From Reich, Franco Must Make New Plans Quickly

Copyright by New York Times.

Madrid, Dec. 7.—Next week, with the return to Madrid of the French commercial delegation, will begin the crucial stage in negotiations which are to determine whether Nationalist Spain will resume trade with the western powers.

That negotiations have been found possible is the direct result of the European war which cut off virtually all trade with Germany—which for three years has been accounting for half of both Spain's imports and exports.

Most obstacles have been surmounted except for price. For instance, the price of Spanish oranges is nearly double the world price.

British Reach Accord

Trade between Spain and France has dropped to nothing. The British, however, have reached an agreement with the Spanish to permit export to England of a certain amount of oranges, and Spanish importation of Welsh coal is needed.

Oranges constitute the largest item of Spain's export trade. Arrangements have been reached with Sweden and other northern European countries to barter oranges for foodstuffs and lumber but the bulk of the crop remains to be disposed of. Unless an agreement is reached by January with Britain and France the Spaniards will have most of the crop on their hands.

Ore Stocks Accumulate

Spain's principal other exports to the western powers would be iron ore, pyrites, bismuth and mercury—all of which formerly were exported in large quantities to Germany. Large stocks of iron are accumulating.

Food is Spain's foremost need. France already has shipped considerable wheat and stands ready to supply barley, maize and other grains. France also is in position to spply phosphates, railway equipment and manufactured goods as well as automobiles. The French also have offered wool for uniforms and blankets for the army but the price obstacle disagreement over which Spanish mills shall manufacture the articles so far has prevented agreement.

As for Britain, coal, machinery, steel and fertilizer—which is vital for next year's crops since the supply of German fertilizer has been shut off—hold top rank on the Spanish buying list.

Thus far discussions have been exploratory. The political importance of such agreements is obvious, and they have been opposed by German representatives here.

Allies' Holdings Large

The war-time disposable financial resources of Great Britain and France and their colonies in the United States are estimated at $8,440,000,000 by the Federal Reserve Board in its December business bulletin. German resources total only $160,000,000.

The reserve board in its compilation includes foreign gold holdings, dollar balances and securities investments in the United States. The Kingdom, its colonies, and Canada, and France and its colonies are rich in every category of disposable financial resources, compared with the meager strength of Germany.

by Dr. Manuel E. Marten, an official medical examiner, made it appear that the attack on Dr. Engelberg had been even more furious than at first had been supposed.

The physician found that the face had been bashed in from forehead to mouth, even obliterating the saber scars with which the victim had been marked during his German student days.

Dr. Marten said death has caused by the familiar "blunt instrument," but added that it was an instrument that had a sharp edge, possibly a claw hammer.

Meanwhile, a search for the weapon, begun yesterday by police under orders to examine the entire neighborhood, including a nearby Jewish cemetery, still had brought no result. The house—in which no woman ever had been seen to enter although at least eight men had lived there, one by one, presumably as servants—stands in a quiet dead-end street. A small backyard is adjacent to the burial ground.

could make a new start. He succeeded in getting what looks like a permanent job. His mother was in the hospital for several weeks in the past year, but Bill paid the bill. He has made a good start again, and his mother thinks he ought to get married. Maybe he will. Anyway, things are much brighter this Christmas for Mrs. McC and her son because they were helped—in time—last year.

One Gift of $100 To Prevent Eviction

One of the earliest contributions this week was a check for $100 from a man who asked that up to $50 of it be used to save Mrs. C. and her two babies from eviction, and to give them food. The giver asked for the remainder to be used to relieve other families in the greatest need.

Today the needs of three more families are described. The families' problems are such that they cannot be solved by public or private agencies because of limited funds or other restrictions.

Contributions should be sent to The Post. Checks should be made out to The Washington Post, and the family may be designated by the giver. Cash contributions may be dropped into a box on the counter near the entrance of The Post, 1337 E street northwest.

Only $90 Will Pull This Family Through

Case No. 15

When a father and mother are in their early 20's, it is harder for them to meet a long siege of misfortune—such as Mr. and Mrs. W. have known.

Mr. W., who is 23, had a part-time job as a truck driver, but he lost that and the rent became overdue. The only family income was $3 a week, which Mrs. W. made, working as a domestic.

When Mr. W. had work, the young couple had ventured to buy a radio and an ice box on which they were to pay a few dollars a month. Being young and having no money to spend on amusements, they looked on the radio as their only chance to bring a bit of gaiety from the outside world into their home. Mrs. W. explained to the social worker.

When the danger of eviction from their two furnished rooms almost overtook them, Mrs. W. tried to borrow money wherever there was a chance of getting it, but without success. Finally in desperation, she took the radio to a junk shop and sold it, not realizing that it wasn't hers because she hadn't quite finished paying for it. She was arrested and taken to court where she was placed on probation.

By that time, hunger threatened the household, where there are two children, 3 and 4 years old.

The agency which has investigated the family says that both Mr. and Mrs. W. are "hard-working earnest persons." With help for the next two months, they could devote their efforts to getting steady employment. There is a good chance that one or both of them will succeed in doing so, if they can be relieved of the worry of homelessness and hunger. For $90, this family can be assured of food and rent for the next two months.

Family certified and help administered without cost by Bureau of Rehabilitation.

Amount needed, $90.

This Family's Need Can Be Met With $100

Case No. 16

Mr. A's problem is complicated, but he feels he can work it out if he is just sure that his wife and five children will not suffer in the meantime.

He has thought of himself as an American citizen for a long time. Twenty-five years ago when he came to this country, he filed application for citizenship and intended to follow through for his final papers. He was accepted for service in the United States Army during the World War and somehow got the impression that this service automatically gave him citizenship.

He did not discover otherwise until he received his dismissal slip from WPA last summer. He was told that WPA could not reassign him for further work because of his noncitizenship.

With a wife and five children, he worried increasingly when he could find nothing but occasional jobs. Mary, the oldest child, is 15 and wants to finish her high school course. The other children are in elementary school—but even so they have come to share the family worry.

Mr. A is a carpenter and has not been trained for anything else. Earnings from the odd jobs manage to buy food for these seven persons, but there is not enough money for rent or winter clothing for the children.

Mr. A has started all over again in working for American citizenship. In the meantime, while he is searching for a permanent job, his family needs help. Maybe in the next three or four months he will be successful.

But $100 is needed to pay the rent and to buy much-needed clothing for the children.

Family certified and help administered without cost by Catholic Charities.

for theft of funds of the bund, and now in Sing Sing, is believed to have been one of those referred to the department.

Whether the department will seek an indictment against Kuhn is not known.

The policy followed by the Justice Department, in its campaign against espionage and subversive elements, is to decide on the nature of its evidence, whether to seek indictments for failure to register, or for violation of the income tax or passport laws.

In cases where the evidence that the passport laws have been violated is stronger, indictments will be sought for such a violation.

Murphy said the Federal Bureau of Investigation was investigating the presence off the North Carolina coast Tuesday of the "mystery" yacht Lekola, manned by a crew of seven Germans. The yacht was seized by the Coast Guard neutrality patrol, and, according to the latest report, was being detained in Wrightsville Sound, near Wilmington, N. C.

The Attorney General would not say whether action was planned in the case.

He emphasized that the department was proceeding against foreign agents who had violated Federal laws. This does not necessarily mean foreign agents engaged in espionage, he said.

Judges Needed, He Says

Additional judges are needed in various parts of the country, he said, to handle the department's crusade against domestic political corruption, deterrents to business in the form of trade restraints and monopolies, and the flouting of Federal laws by foreign agents and others. There should be five additional judges in New York, he declared.

He said he had not studied the situation in the District to determine whether there should be additional judges here, but he declared the local judges "hard pressed."

He indicated there were about ten areas, including Kansas City, Missouri and Louisiana, in which drives would be made against political corruption.

In the effort to stamp out espionage and subversive activities, he declared, the object will be to jail "those at the top instead of those whom the leaders exploit."

"These are the real culprits," he declared, "and they are not going to escape."

Indictments against Communist leaders in New York he said, are "particularly significant." The inference was that the department is proceeding indiscriminately against Communists, Nazis, and others, so long as it has clear evidence that Federal laws have been violated.

In proceeding against foreign agents, Murphy said, sources of funds and the use to which they are devoted are traced.

Special attention, he said, will be given the first foreign agent cases placed before the local grand jury.

America urged embargo on all war materials to Russia and "such diplomatic measures as will emphatically express our moral protest."

The embargo idea was supported by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, who said "the thought that Soviet troops might be using American-made weapons is, indeed, a repulsive one."

Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, said he had wired the President urging recall of Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt from Moscow.

The Council of Churches' protest declared consciences of all Christian people "strongly revolts against Finland and the cruel inhumanity of the Soviet attack upon defenseless people in unfortified towns."

Relief Gifts "Amazing"

American sympathy for the Finns is reflected in almost unprecedented donations to the Red Cross for Finnish relief, Chairman Norman Davis revealed after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt. He was quoted as saying the Red Cross may open a campaign for Finnish relief funds totaling as much as $3,000,000. He said the sentiment for aiding the victims of Russia's attack was amazing."

Uruguay Quits League of Nations

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The Senate tonight approved a bill providing for Uruguay's immediate withdrawal from the League of Nations, except for the technical bodies affiliated with the Geneva organization, such as the International Labor Office.

The bill was passed at a session attended by Foreign Minister Guani.

Earlier this week, Uruguay informed the League of Nations that it would withdraw unless action were taken against Russia for its invasion of Finland. Sponsors of the withdrawal bill, however, decided to force this country out of the League without waiting for possible League action against Moscow.

Blackouts Blamed For 3,000 Deaths

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Nearly 3,000 persons were killed by accidents on blacked-out thoroughfares in Britain in the first three months of the war, Lord Alness, chairman of the accident prevention committee, said tonight.

Fatalities, he said, were almost double the peacetime figure.

(Latest figures place British war fatalities in the air and the navy at 2,141. Losses aboard merchant ships, British and neutral, total 3,373.)

Dies to Get Data on Spy Base in Mexico

Trotsky and Rivera Slated to Testify In Texas Hearing

By International News Service

Orange, Tex., Dec. 7.—Amazing charges of lengths to which Russia has been going to obtain American defense secrets and to spread communism over the Western Hemisphere will be aired by the Dies Committee in hearings in Texas before January 3, Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, announced today.

Dies and his secretary, Robert Stripling, said that among the developments expected were these:

Introduction of a document said to indicate that Russia planned for Mexico to sell its expropriated oil to warring nations and thus facilitate their mutual destruction, making it easier to disseminate red doctrines in the resulting chaos.

Testimony by Leon Trotsky, exiled Russian leader, and Diego Rivera, famous Mexican muralist, bearing on the committee's investigation into charges that Russia has been using Mexico as a base from which to spread its doctrines into North America and southward into Central and South America.

Presentation of evidence purporting to show that American Communists stole national defense secrets of the United States and turned them over to the Russian government.

Testimony of witnesses from Hollywood on certain organizations which allegedly have engaged in subversive activities among the notables as well as the rank and file in the film capital.

Trotsky, in exile in Mexico City, indicated his willingness to come to the United States and testify provided he was given assurances he would be allowed to return to Mexico unhindered after he had been heard. The State Department in Washington was understood to have waived the formality of a passport.

Stripling said Trotsky was expected to be able to give extensive information on the activity of Communist agents who assertedly have been using Mexico as their base of operations.

The hearing will be held in a city close to the Mexican border for two reasons, the first that Trotsky does not wish to travel far into the interior of the United States and the second to be near Dies' home as the latter's physician has ordered him to rest as much as possible.

A prominent Mexican leader's name will be brought into the hearing to authenticate a number of the documents which will be presented, among them presumably the document said to show Russia's plans for Mexico's expropriated oil, although this was not confirmed.

Army Plane Photographed

It was said that the committee had evidence which was held to show that American Communists got at least one late model of a United States military airplane, took it apart and sent photographs of working parts to Moscow.

This assertedly was accomplished in cooperation with the OGPU, Russian secret police. The plane was obtained, according to a source close to the committee, by setting up a bogus factory in Kansas and then obtaining Government orders.

Stripling said 10 or a dozen witnesses would come to Texas from Hollywood to testify on the alleged activities of Communist agents there and their efforts to have Red propaganda incorporated in certain screen productions.

Trotsky Accepts Invitation

Mexico City, Dec. 7 (AP).—Leon Trotsky, exiled Bolshevik, said in a statement tonight he had accepted "as a political duty" an invitation to appear at Austin, Tex., before the Dies House committee investigating un-American activities.

He declared, however, any implications he had been turning over documents to the committee "represent a pure fabrication from beginning to end." He insisted a committee investigator never had visited him.

Trotsky made it clear that any testimony he gave would be "about the history of Stalinism but in no case about the inner life of Latin-American countries. . ."

Trotsky said J. B. Matthews, chief investigator of the committee, telegraphed him October 12 inviting him to appear to enable the committee to "have a complete record of the history of Stalinism."

Sweden Expects War Soon, Says Professor

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Prof. Fritiof Ander, of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill., said on his arrival yesterday aboard the Swedish American liner Gripsholm that Sweden expects to be at war soon.

"Russia wants free ports in Norway and the rich iron and timber lands in northern Sweden," he said. "All Scandinavia is hopeful that the United States will help them, but they don't seem to know in just what way."

Kennedy to Confer Today With President

The White House reported yesterday that President Roosevelt had held a long telephone conversation Wednesday night with Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to England, who is now in New York. Kennedy will confer with the Chief Executive personally today.

The Ambassador flew from England for the Christmas holidays and to bring confidential reports to the President and Secretary Hull.

A Pointed Conversation

was standing at a theoretical gangway.

"Welcome aboard, sir," he said to the President.

"Good to be aboard," said the President, giving the traditional reply.

As he took his place at the table, along with Secretary Hull, Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison and other honor guests, the President was confronted by old-time ship models from the Navy Department. One of these was exhibited as "an advance model of the new 45,000-ton vest pocket battleship—U. S. S. New Jersey."

Across from the speakers' table hung a gigantic cartoon. It depicted Mr. Roosevelt as "Popeye," standing on the forward deck of a top-heavy destroyer and stuffing January, 1941 spinach down the throat of an unwilling press.

The cartoon, executed by Walter Karig, Washington correspondent for the Newark Evening News and chairman of the club's dinner committee, showed Mr. Edison as a mermaid wearing an admiral's fore and aft hat and swimming in the pool. Wisps of third-term smoke rose from the destroyer's stack.

The new National Press Club Chorus sang several sea chanties, and the Navy Band played. Under the direction of Gene Buck, several stars of the screen, stage and radio entertained the guests, including Benay Venuta, Jane Froman, Sheila Barrett and Lew Lehr.

When the diners picked up their menu cards. They discovered that they were observing the "National Press Club Naval Expansion Program." The fare included neutrality eggs in 16-inch shells; hors (du combat) a la dictator; Caribbean submarines "en surprise;" kedgeree of destroyers in drydock; Panama mixed salad with oil; hemisphere on ice with raspberry sauce and essence of Good Neighbor.

The wine list included Grapes of Wrath, 1940, Imported Bilge, 1928, Ink Rouge New Deal and G. O. P. Bubbles.

In the course of the dinner, Hachten picked up a telephone. With the diners observing silence, he put in a call for Marvin McIntyre's home in Asheville, N. C. Then McIntyre's voice was heard. An exchange of greetings between him and the President was heard over an amplifying system.

The President told his ailing secretary over the telephone that he had heard that the Press Club had organized a glee club in his absence. (McIntyre has the reputation of being quite a singer).

In this glee club, the President said, were Charlie Hamilton, 80-year-old dean of Washington correspondents; Mark Sullivan, dean of Washington commentators; a member of the Cuff Links Club and a member of the Associated Press staff.

McIntyre Pleased

McIntyre, after listening to the President describe the new Press Club chorus, said:

"I have not heard any discord in their singing."

The secretary had been listening to the entire proceedings by telephone. First and last, it was a precedent-shattering affair, climaxed when the Chief Executive of the world's most powerful Nation chatted with his secretary for the benefit of its newsmen.

The President made a talk, but, as is the clustom with Press Club dinners, it was off the record.

Nazis Behead Three As Servants of Britain

Berlin, Dec. 7 (AP).—The heads of two spies and a traitor fell today. All were convicted of serving the interests of Great Britain.

Heinrich Peters was convicted of high treason yesterday.

Walter Israel Becker, of Vienna, a Jewish immigrant, and Herman Stetefeld were beheaded as spies.

Scandinavians Restrict Peace Move to Baltic

Effort for General Truce Through League Dropped by Neutrals

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 7 (AP).—The foreign ministers of Denmark, Norway and Sweden decided today to make all possible efforts through the League of Nations for peace negotiations between Finland and Soviet Russia.

Conferring on issues raised by the Finnish-Russian conflict, the Scandinavians also discussed possible general consequences of the fighting, but they announced no decisions.

Since Denmark already has proclaimed neutrality, the ministers were not expected to advocate any joint Scandinavian action in support of Finland beyond conciliatory action through the league.

Attending the conference were Dr. Peter Munch of Denmark, Dr. Halvdan Koht of Norway and Richard Sandler of Sweden.

There were unconfirmed reports that they considered the advisability of appealing for general European peace but a communique issued at the end of the meeting lent no support to these reports.

However, the Scandinavian states are deeply concerned lest the conflict spread in their direction. Since the Russian invasion of Finland many Scandinavians have seen small hope of avoiding such a spread except through restoration of peace among Germany, Great Britain and France.

3-Man FCC Plan Reported Abandoned

End of Internal Dissension Removes Urge for Legislation

The Administration's move to chop down the Federal Communications Commission from a seven to a three-man agency, with the chairman in a role of virtual dictator, has been abandoned, according to authoritative sources.

Congressional leaders will not revive legislation introduced last session at the request of former Chairman Frank R. McNinch, it was said, because the internal dissension at the FCC which characterized McNinch's regime has disappeared since the appointment of James J. Fly.

Plan Raised Protests

President Roosevelt early last session wrote letters to the chairmen of Senate and House committees handling radio legislation and suggested a complete reorganization of the FCC and a revision of the communications act.

A reorganization bill, drafted by McNinch, subsequently was introduced by Chairman Wheeler of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Because of the protests raised both in and out of the radio industry the legislation was pigeonholed without hearings. Senator White (Republican), of Maine, offered a substitute bill to enlarge the commission to 11 members.

"Purge" Intention Charged

Opponents of the measure charged it was designed to rid the FCC of critics of McNinch's policies, particularly Commissioners T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne, who voted against the purge of the commission staff a year ago.

Representative Wigglesworth (Republican), of Massachusetts, who has sponsored several resolutions calling for a Congressional investigation of the FCC, said he will press for the inquiry again next session. Administration leaders, however, indicated that there will be no probe authorized.

Board of Trade Praises Airport

Development of Gravelly Point Airport was praised by Board of Trade representatives yesterday in an inspection tour of the terminal.

"It's evident that Washington is going to have an adequate airport," Jo V. Morgan, chairman of Board of Trade's sub-committee on Gravelly Point Airport, asserted.

Morgan complimented the Civil Aeronautics Authority on the work.

"Although we had no official status," he stated, "we have found all officials always ready to accept suggestions."

Finn Envoy Leaves Russia

Moscow, Dec. 7 (AP).—Members of the Finnish legation here, which has been virtually isolated since Russian-Finnish hostilities began a week ago today, departed by train for Latvia tonight. The departing group was headed by the Finnish minister, Baron Aarno Trjo-Koskinen.

Toy Baby, a Pekinese, Joins His Seven Chums in Death

Toy Baby, the Pekinese, lay dead in a white flower-banked casket yesterday and the mourners, who came in bareheaded, know she must be trotting on somehow to a good place of beefsteak, chicken and veal liver.

She liked those things most in life, along with her hobby of bringing home small stones; she was the last of eight Pekinese and her funeral would cost $45. That matter, said Mrs. George H. Tucker, her owner, a motherly woman with red, grieved eyes, meant nothing. That much was spent on burial for each of Toy Baby's seven relatives.

Tucker, whose eyes also were red, left the room when Mrs. Tucker said that Toy Baby, aged 14, had died yesterday. She added a wish that "people might be as good as dogs, as kind and grateful and simple."

She never again would own a pet. Now for the first time in 17 years—since they had bought the house at 2105 I street northwest—no dogs were there. Foo-Chee was the first of the Pekinese; eight came, in all. "I delivered them all," recalled Mrs. Tucker.

She told all the tricks the Pekinese would do and kept looking at the dog, resting high above the stacked chrysanthemums, Easter lilies and carnations. She had bought the flowers, and the engraved plate that read "Our Darling."

Three of the dogs had died this year and the funerals averaged $45. "What of it?" again asked Mrs. Tucker. "I'd rather have done it for them than to have bought a fur coat. They meant something to me."

The funeral will be held at Aspen Hill Dog Cemetery in Maryland this afternoon. Then a white shaft will go on the graves of all eight Pekinese. "We waited for this until all of them could be in the plot," Mrs. Tucker said.

D. C. Symphony At Colgate U.

carefully protecting his coattails. Pitchers of water were in the wings ready for any emergency.

The orchestra began playing the fairy-music of the "Oberon" overture. The students listened in the dark to the slow, dreamy introduction, waiting for the sudden shout of the brasses which announces the main body of the overture. It came, a tremendous sforzando, a Gabriel's trump that seemed to burst the hall.

At that moment the lights went on. Dr. Kindler's baton faltered; the audience rocked with laughter. The musicians laughed; Dr. Kindler dropped his arm, hung his head, struggled with himself, and laughed, too. Musicians and audience rose and applauded.

Dr. Kindler was the first to regain composure. He turned to the audience, bowed solemnly, turned back and raised his baton, and went on as if nothing had happened. The "grand pause" that follows the trumpet blast had been stretched from a beat to 40 measures. The happy excitement of Weber's fairy tale found a ready response in the laughing mood the incident had created.

The orchestra was immensely popular with the young listeners, and Dr. Kindler gave three encores after the first portion of the program, concluding with the Sibelius Second Symphony.

Taft Assails New Deal as Anti-Business

Criticizes Agencies In Broadcast; Frank Defends the SEC

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 7.—Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, asserted tonight that the Roosevelt Administration's policies were "either deliberately unfriendly to private enterprise, or so burdensome and restrictive as to check the normal conduct of business . . ."

Jerome Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, retorted that the Government not only could cooperate with businessmen but that its officers were "effectively and actively" doing so.

They participated with William M. Martin, jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange, and Floyd Odlum, president of Atlas Corporation, in a radio discussion. Senator Taft's speech was prepared for delivery from Columbus, Ohio.

"Not Really Friendly"

Taft said the Roosevelt Administration "is not really friendly to the growth and development of private enterprise."

He asserted that one member of the National Labor Relations Board was "a Communist sympathizer," and that its entire membership was "inspired by a crusading spirit, not only against employers but against the older established unions."

As to the Securities and Exchange Commission, he said it "seems to have gone beyond its real purpose of preventing fraud in the sale of securities to hamper seriously the distribution of all securities by an endless amount of restrictions and red tape."

Frank Defends SEC

Frank declared that on the contrary the SEC had made "untiring efforts to find workable solutions for difficult problems of business adjustment to existing laws."

"There are," he added, "many other examples of cooperation. For instance, I suppose that as much of the time of our legal staff is devoted to giving counsel to businessmen as to us. Daily, we receive letters from businessmen and their lawyers, thanking us for that kind of cooperation. I have in my files such a letter, received early this very year, from the law firm of which Senator Taft is a partner."

Martin said the "morale of those in our business is low," adding:

"The New York Stock Exchange has recognized that such a commission (the SEC) performs a useful function and it has been and is our desire to co-operate with it fully in the interest of the public. That commission's function, however, is one of regulating and not operating.

"In my judgment, the greatest impediment to the successful cooperation of business and Government today lies in the wide area of discretionary power vested in administrator."

Sees Capital Strike

Odlum said he wanted to answer "with an emphatic yes' the question as to whether Government and business could work together.

In giving that answer," he said, "I don't want to be misunderstood. This has been no picnic period . . . I realize that regulation is a normal relationship between government and business . . .

"The thing that I worry about is not regulation or even the degree thereof. I worry much more about the attacks and counter attacks that have been going on between certain elements in government and certain elements in business . . . the suspicion and fear so created caused capital to go on strike."

Merchants Hit By Evacuation Policy in London

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 7.—Businessmen who are facing ruin owing to the government's evacuation policy today discussed what to do against the cyclone that has hit London's internal trade.

At the outbreak of the war the government evacuated much of London's population. Apparently nobody considered what would happen to the traders who were left behind. Thousands are now faced with bankruptcy and forced to seek public assistance.

In the first five weeks of the war unemployment in GreatBritain increased by 99,710, and more than half of this was in London.

London is now becoming a depressed area. The owners of apartment houses have seen their tenants swept on their way, leaving them saddled with huge rents and prewar debts. Shopkeepers who have lost half their customers see their trade shut down at 4 p. m.—blackout time. Doctors' patients have been evacuated, and so on throughout greater London.

London's rent rates are now artificially high, and it was resolved to ask the government to consider the new French decrees, whereby rents can be slashed to a quarter if necessary.

100 Finns to Sail As Volunteers

Copyright by New York Times.

New York, Dec. 7.—When the Swedish-American liner Gripsholm sails tomorrow more than one hundred Finns from various parts of the United States and Canada will be on board, according to an announcement today by the Finnish war veterans in America. The volunteers will join Finland's army.

The War Veterans' Association will contribute 30 men to the contingent. All are veterans of Finland's war of independence against the Bolshevists in 1919.

All of the volunteers are Finns who have not obtained naturalization papers and are immune from complication with the United States neutrality act.

A number of women are expected to sail for Finland as nurses.

These G. O. P. Leaders Are Looking for $700,000

JOHN HAMILTON, National Committee Chairman; JOSEPH MARTIN, House Minority Leader; HENRY FLETCHER, Committee's General Counsel

With a forecast from Hamilton to victory at the polls in 1940 to cheer them on, Republican leaders met in Washington headquarters yesterday to find means of eliminating a $700,000 deficit from the 1936 Presidential race expressed wish that the speech had been "less general."

Indications are that National Chairman Hamilton late in January will call the national committee to meet some time in February to indicate a Republican convention date. Hamilton said the committee could meet as late as February 15, and still name the usual mid-June date if it wished. He said he thought the "orderly processes of government" entitled the minority party to meet last. But it was learned that increasing pressure was being brought to ignore the Democratic course, and independently agree on a July convention, unless Democrats meanwhile decide to meet in June, as usual.

Col. R. B. Creager, Texas committeeman, said he thought "unquestionably" the month's delay course would be followed.

Colladay Agrees

Edward F. Colladay, national committeeman for the District, echoed this view.

"My guess is we will meet the last week in July," said Colladay. If the Democrats haven't the nerve to step forward, I think we ought to go ahead. We are not willing to wait an unlimited time to look at their ticket."

Ickes at his press conference said he considered Roosevelt the only choice of the liberal element in 1940, but said, "Of course, I don't know whether he will run. I don't know anyone who can speak for him."

The Interior Secretary said he did not believe the President had or intended to support McNutt to succeed him "and I don't believe that Mr. McNutt has ever said anything to that effect."

Like Farley, Ickes ridiculed the Dewey speech. He said it contained nothing new or significant, and reminded him of the story of a child prodigy in a Sunday school address: "He did very well considering his age."

Republican Chairman Hamilton, who earlier had declined comment on the Dewey address, moved to Dewey's defense when told of Ickes' remarks. He said he was "not surprised Mr. Ickes couldn't understand it."

"His inability to understand it demonstrates perfectly what's wrong with the New Deal," said Hamilton. "The question of the Nation pushing forward in its policies and raising the standard of living by individual initiative, is one the New Deal never has understood and never will. Underlying all the New Deal is state socialism, a government by handouts and subsidies. As Mr. Dewey said, it is a government of defeatism and despair."

Sets Two Press Talks

Hamilton scheduled two formal press conferences, the first following noon adjournment of the Republican executive committee and another after Republican Party leaders had attended a closed luncheon with committee members.

He told newsmen committee members generally expressed "a feeling that the President's policy in dealing with the Russian-Finnish situation had not been helpful to Mr. Roosevelt." He said committee members felt the President should have broken off United States relations with Russia.

In declining at his first conference to comment on the Dewey address, he said as committee chairman he was concerned solely with service to all candidates and had laid down a policy for himself of making no comment on any addresses made by potential candidates.

He revealed that Brooklyn, Atlantic City, Philadelphia, Detroit, New York, Baltimore, Chicago, Minneapolis, San Francisco and St. Louis all had made inquiries as to the possibility of holding the next Republican convention there.

Hamilton said a number of committeemen thought the usual six months too long for a Presidential campaign, but the convention issue was still in abeyance. Asked if Republicans could save money by holding their convention late, he said they could, but to shorten the time of the campaign might also "lower the efficiency of the campaign."

Representative Taylor Praised

All were hopeful of a 1940 victory, he said, declaring committeemen from States where partisan elections were held last November believed the results to be "very indicative of the continued swing toward the Republican Party."

The committee adopted resolutions praising the late Representative J. Will Taylor, Republican committeeman from Tennessee.

The following nominations to fill vacancies on the Republican National Committee caused by death or resignation were received from State central committees: B. L. Noojin, Alabama; Mrs. Lindsay Patterson, North Carolina; Dan Whetstone, Montana; Carroll Reece, Tennessee; Hill Blackett, Illinois and J. Leonard Replogle, Florida.

Dewey Hears Farm Plaints

Minneapolis, Dec. 7.—Thomas E. Dewey carried a lot of first-hand information about the Northwest's farm problems with him tonight as he headed toward Washington after keynoting his campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination.

He carried also, his aides said, about 300 telegrams of congratulation on his speech last night.

Wallace Cuts Cotton Export Subsidy Again

2d Slash in 2 Days Makes Rate 40 Cents A Hundred Pounds

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced last night that the export subsidy rate on cotton would be reduced from 75 to 40 cents per hundred pounds, effective at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow, the second reduction in two days.

Wallace, who announced the cut after a conference with six leading southern exporters, warned that a shortage in funds might force further reduction, or even abolition, of the subsidies which had been paid at a rate of $1.50 per hundred pounds from last July 27 to December 6, when the 75-cent rate was put into effect.

He pointed out that the question of funds together with "the strong foreign demand" for cotton had led him to impose the cut. Of an original sum of $40,000,000, it was estimated that slightly less than $4,000,000 remains to carry the export subsidy program through the next eight months.

Wallace said that from July 27 to December 6, a total of 5,150,000 bales of cotton were sold for export—about half of which already has left the country—and that the Government paid more than $36,000,000 in subsidies.

The Agriculture Department estimates sales August 1, 1939, to July 31, 1940, will be about 6,500,000 bales compared with 3,500,000 for the last cotton year.

Exporters conferring with Wallace were W. L. Clayton, of Anderson, Clayton Co., Houston, Tex.; Everett R. Cook, Cook & Co., Memphis Tenn.; E. F. Creekmore, American Cotton Cooperative Association, New Orleans; Dan Manget, Manget Brothers, Newman, Ga.; Robert Mayer, J. Kahn & Co., Dallas Tex.; Benjamin J. Williams, Pape Williams & Co., New Orleans.

Penrose Dies In Colorado; Mine Capitalist

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Dec. 7.—Spencer Penrose, 74, Colorado Springs mining capitalist and a brother of the late Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania, died here today. His wife, Mrs. Julie Villiers McMillan Penrose, whom he married in Paris in April, 1906, survives.

A native of Philadelphia, Penrose was a Harvard graduate, who tried mining for five years in Mexico and New Mexico with indifferent success before he arrived in Colorado Springs in 1891 to make a fortune out of gold and copper mining. After he had accumulated his fortune he developed the Broadmoor Hotel at Colorado Springs as an American St. Moritz.

The son of a professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, Penrose was prepared for Harvard by private tutors. At Harvard, from which he was graduated in 1886, he studied mining engineering. He made $2,000 by the sale of property in New Mexico, but by the time he arrived in Colorado to participate in the Cripple Creek gold rush he had spent most of his stake.

With C. L. Tutt, another Philadelphian, Penrose acquired a gold claim in Colorado that netted them $300,000. Investing this capital in the smelter business with two other men, Tutt and Penrose devised a method of treating low-grade copper ore and formed the Utah Copper Co., which was subsequently absorbed by the Guggenheim interests.

In 1937 Penrose built a memorial to Will Rogers on Cheyenne Mountain. Called "Shrine of the Sun," it contained a crypt in which Penrose wished to be buried.

Manufacturers Urge Amity With Labor

Harmony Necessary To Promote National Security, They Say

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 7.—The National Association of Manufacturers declared today for harmony between labor and management to promote "national security and well-being."

The declaration was contained in a resolution adopted by delegates to the forty-fourth convention of the organization.

"Harmonious relations between labor and management in each industrial enterprise," said the resolution, "is in the interest not only of the employer and the employe, but of the whole people.

"National security and well-being cannot be built on a foundation of antagonism between labor and capital, resulting in unnecessary strikes and interferences otherwise with the continuity and economics of production.

"Beyond the give-and-take of 'a full day's work for a full day's pay' lies the broad responsibility of both parties for a healthy and prosperous national economy."

The manufacturers asserted that wages should be kept flexible "in keeping with rates in the industry and with due regard to conditions in the community" and added: "It is not practicable for most manufacturing enterprises to provide an established annual wage for employes."

The resolution declared that industrial management "must continue to work for a progressively improving standard of living by producing an abundance of needed goods and services at reasonable prices and by seeking to provide more and steady employment."

The convention elected as directors-at-large for the next two years: W. S. Farish, of New York, president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; John Holmes, of Chicago, president of Swift & Co.; Malcolm Muir, of New York, president and publisher of Newsweek Magazine; James H. Rand, jr., of New York, president of Remington-Rand, Inc.; W. S. S. Rodgers, of New York, president of the Texas Co., and R. E. Wood, of Chicago, chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Lawrence Jury Gets Case Today

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 7 (AP).—Final arguments were completed today in the trial of Pennsylvania Democratic Chairman David L. Lawrence on charges of blackmail and conspiracy to favor a gravel company on State contracts.

The case will go to the jury after the charge by Judge Howard W. Hughes.

District Attorney Carl B. Shelley referred to Lawrence as "the boss," who, he said, dominated State departments during the administration of former Gov. George H. Earle.

U. S. Bureau Acts to Record 'Sea Sagas of Swordfish'

Numbered Darts for Harpooners Help to Trace Movements

By Alfred Friendly

The Interior Department announced yesterday in a rarely poetic and alliterative press release, that "sea sagas of swordfish can now be told for the first time."

The piscine balladry, it appears, is made possible by a new system of tagging, in which the fisherman's loss is science's gain.

Heretofore, it was explained, tagging swordfish has been considered "impracticable" because of the difficulty of subduing so large a fish without mortally exhausting it.

The new method was suggsted by the fact that many swordfish break away after being harpooned, carrying with them, however, the brass dart or detachable part of the harpoon. The Bureau of Fisheries therefore proposed that captains of swordfish vessels use numbered darts, and keep a record of the number, position of vessel, and date each time a fish is harpooned.

If the fish is caught, it's all to the good. If it escapes, the captain will at least have the consolation of knowing he has done his bit for the greater glory of ichthyology. If the fish is subsequently caught the old1 barb will be sent to the Fisheries Bureau, which will thus be able to check up on where the fish has been in the meantime.

The system has the virtue of simplicity, requiring, it would appear, only one additional crew

The first "sea-saga of swordfish" to be reported in this manner was that of Capt. Henry L. Oakes, who harpooned a fish 60 miles southeast of Fire Island Lightship, off Sandy Hook, and later in the season caught the same fish off Browns Bank, east of Boston. This proved, indisputably that one swordfish migrated a distance of 400 miles. The whole venture can be chalked up as one more victory in the battle of science.

The second dart to be returned was also a signal achievement except for the minor fact that the captain to whom the dart was assigned forgot to keep a record of where and when he shot it.

Although the Fisheries Bureau is well pleased with the scheme, there are indications that Secretary Ickes will have his hands full settling a sharp intradepartmental difference of opinion. A release issued yesterday by the National Park Service, also in the Interior Department, is headlined, "Only Maladjustments Result from Man's Interference with Nature."

It's our favorite thought for this week.

Attention big game hunters! The Fisheries Bureau also announces that today begins the open season on baleen whales in the Antarctic Ocean. No poaching now, fellows. You can get your license from a couple of Coast Guard officers stationed for your convenience in the south polar seas.

Robert L. Johnson, president of the National Civil Service Reform League, yesterday renewed his plea that census supervisors, enumerators and other employes be chosen from the civil service lists. Johnson said it was reported that Tammany Hall would have its hands on 5,000 patronage jobs in New York unless the civil service rolls were used.

Reminding the Census Bureau that President Theodore Roosevelt insisted on using the lists in the 1910 census, Johnson said the bureau's present plan to hold qualifying examinations for politically selected candidates was "whitewash" and wasteful.

"The expense and time consumed in holding qualifying tests," he said, "could be avoided by using existing civil-service registers for practically all available positions."

From indications at the bureau, however, Johnson's proposal stands the proverbial feather's chance.

Newspaper Cited In Shushan Trial

New Orleans, Dec. 7 (INS).—A headline in the New Orleans Item stating the Federal Government charged Abe L. Shushan "took a bribe as levee board president," was responsible tonight for instituting contempt proceedings against the newspaper.

Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah instructed United States Attorney Rene Viosca to begin contempt action against the newspaper.

The order came during the trial of Shushan and four others charged with mail fraud in connection with a fee of $496,000 allegedly paid them in an Orleans levee board bond refunding plan.

Convicted as Poison-Killer

Tyler, Tex., Dec. 7 (AP).—W. A. Hergesheimer, jr., was convicted tonight of poisoning his 14-year-old stepson, Leroy Higgins, to collect $1,000 worth of insurance and was sentenced to 30 years. The youth died May 14.

Be Good Soldiers, Pius Tells Priests

Vatican City, Dec. 7 (AP).—Pope Pius XII today exhorted priests under arms to be good soldiers and to show piety as an example to the troops with whom they are serving.

He told them in a 2,500-word apostolic exhortation that "even in the midst of so much ruin" they could "draw souls to salvation."

Only a short time before the pontiff praised the Italian government for staying out of war, saying Italy thus was in "a more favorable situation to cooperate better for the advent of true peace founded on the noble principle of justice and humanity."

His praise came as he received Dino Alfieri, former minister of popular culture, who presented his credentials as new Italian Ambassador to the Holy See.

Friend Dead, He Ends Life

Dubois, Pa., Dec. 7 (AP).—William Weise, 53, grieving because he had unintentionally killed a young friend, Marvin C. Gibson, while hunting deer, walked into an abandoned mine and took his own life with the same gun, Deputy Coroner Howard Johnson reported today.

Curran Urges Mental Clinic For Abnormal Law Violators

Police Judge Edward M. Curran last night urged establishment of a behavior clinic to help judges deal with abnormal law violators.

Judge Curran asked for scientific help in the judicial field in an address before the District Medical Society's section on neurology and psychiatry.

"If a sentencing judge's duty and responsibility begins and ends with reading the portentous penal clause of a statute that opens and shuts prison doors, then an automaton could do his work," Judge Curran said.

He said the pre-sentence investigations of probation officers are of great help to judges, but there remains a "serious deficiency, which I am satisfied a psychiatric clinic is designed to supply."

"We are still at a loss," Judge Curran explained, "to know the physical, mental and emotional make-up of the offender. Is he suffering from disease? Is he feeble-minded? Is he criminally insane? Does he suffer hallucinations? Is he driven from pillar to post by a complex of persecution?

"A psychiatric clinic would make available to the court a thorough analysis of the offender's physical and mental condition.

"When a judge knows the background of the offender, his make-up and psychological response, he can intelligently distinguish between the man who should go to the penitentiary and the one who should receive treatment in a hospital."

Judge Curran said he was not advocating the "coddling" of criminals, because there were types who could best be handled by long prison terms. Nevertheless, he said, punishment ought to fit the needs of the offender, rather than the crime.

Participating in the panel discussion after the judge's talk were: Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital; T. Gillespie Walsh, of the Commission on Mental Health; Dr. James Lewald, of the District Training School at Laurel, Md., and Dr. Paul Ewerhardt, of the Child Guidance Center.

Impatient Children Take 400 Toys

Kansas City, Dec. 7 (AP).—Thirty boys and girls, impatient for Christmas, stormed Santa Claus' storehouse and ran away with 400 toys.

Later seven repentant raiders helped the Santa Claus Club, Inc., recover most of the toys, intended for poor children.

The children, 6 to 16 years old, met outside an abandoned church where the toys were stored.

"They've moved away. They don't want those toys in the basement," said the youngsters. They'd have taken them if they did."

That was the signal for the raid.

Man Dies After 3 Hours At Bottom of Well

Melbourne, Mo., Dec. 7 (AP).—Warren Burnell, 19, suffocated today at the bottom of a 30-foot drilled well after air pumped to him through a hose kept him alive three hours.

The 18-inch bore defied rescue efforts by hooks and volunteers. The body finally was recovered after a rescuer succeeded in fastening a rope about the victim's shoulders.

Kuhn And Browder

The prison sentence imposed upon Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American Bund, follows hard upon the indictment of Earl Browder, and Welwel Warszower (known as Robert W. Wiener), general secretary and national treasurer, respectively, of the Communist Party, who are accused of using false passports.

It is, of course, impossible to condone the crimes of theft and forgery of which Fritz Kuhn has been convicted. It is likewise impossible to defend the use of forged passports. But without desiring to protect lawbreakers against deserved punishment, it is possible to regret that the bund and Communist leaders have fallen afoul of the law just at this time.

The seeds of political intolerance have been sown very widely by the revelations of the Dies Committee. And there is no question that many of the facts uncovered give cause for alarm. Recent events in Europe have also increased the natural antagonism of lovers of democracy for the alien political philosophies of Fascists and Communists. But it is at just such times that preservation of the rights guaranteed to individuals under our democratic form of government have to be most vigilantly safeguarded.

Judge Wallace undoubtedly realized that the conviction of the bund leader might be interpreted by many as an attack upon the bund teachings as such. Consequently, he stressed the fact that sentence was being imposed upon the defendant as "an ordinary small-time forger and thief and not because of his dissemination of any gospels of hate or anything of that sort."

But despite protestations to the contrary, an atmosphere somewhat akin to that of persecution surrounds the accused in the Kuhn and Browder cases. It may be doubted that Fritz Kuhn would have been brought to the bar of justice if he had not been preaching doctrines so offensive to believers in democracy. The passport frauds, too, have come to light so opportunely as to arouse suspicion that an ulterior motive lies behind the decision to prosecute offenders.

Faced by positive proof of lawlessness on the part of leaders of unpopular, un-American political movements, it is wholly desirable to invoke the full force of the law against the offenders. But a definite restraint is the more in order when the organization to which the culprit belongs is itself both hated and suspect.

The Power Of Phrases

At the opening session of the Congress of American Industry speaker after speaker lauded the superiority of free enterprise as opposed to government paternalism, and emphasized the necessity of safeguarding political liberty and individual initiative against the assaults of economic planners.

The speeches of these otherwise level-headed businessmen indicate that the habit of indulging in sweeping generalizations about the perfection of free enterprise is growing. There is danger that some will become so enthralled by resounding phrases as actually to believe that the United States is confronted by a choice between a mythical system of unhampered competition and throttling forms of governmental control.

The problem that this Nation faces today is not whether we are to be wholly free or completely regulated. It is, rather, whether such regulation as is admittedly necessary shall be carefully planned and efficiently administered.

A large part of economic life is already subject to governmental regulation and has been for many years. Americans are not only resigned to regulation of public utilities; they would not even consider reversion to the comparative freedom of an earlier period. Similarly, government regulation of hours and conditions of labor is regarded as essential to protection of workers. Businessmen also demand legislative protection against various kinds of so-called cut-throat competition—that is, free competition carried on without consideration for the weaker units.

In short, the people who indulge in nostalgic yearnings for a return to a system of free enterprise are romanticists whose exuberance needs some deflation. There is no sweeping formula by which to guide our actions in dealing with the multitudinous problems of a constantly changing industrial and economic society. When to apply governmental controls to private business, and how far to go if regulation becomes necessary, are questions which have to be asked as specific problems arise. Fortunately for those who value individual freedom, our form of constitutional government is not well adapted to the purposes of economic planners whose goal is regimentation of all industry.

The speakers before the American Congress of Industry were amply justified in pointing to the dangers of progressive extension of government controls in fields where private enterprise is functioning effectively. Their mistake lay in placing a too-exaggerated emphasis upon the value of an unrestrained and anarchical economic liberty.

Balkan Tremors

During the present war the nations occupying the southeastern corner of Europe have so far enjoyed a measure of uneasy stability. Belying its old reputation as "the cockpit of Europe," the Balkan area has demonstrated overwhelming desire to be allowed to remain at peace.

Finland also wanted peace. She was willing to make large concessions to Russia to that end. But because the Finns refused to make concessions of a kind that would have meant the destruction of their independence, their country was viciously and wantonly attacked by its powerful neighbor.

No wonder, then, that developments along the Russo-Finnish frontier have enormously increased the uneasiness felt by the Balkan nations. In particular, Rumania has reason to fear that she will be the next victim of aggression. By way of proof there is the demand in the Moscow organ of the Communist International that the Bucharest government make a "mutual assistance pact" with the Soviet Union. Such a demand and its inevitable rejection was the prelude to the Russian assault on Finland.

Were the Balkan states thoroughly united, they would be in a position effectively to oppose a Russian thrust into Rumania. Unfortunately, the nations of southeastern Europe are much divided among themselves. Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey are members of the Balkan entente. But they have no agreement jointly to resist Russia should that country seek a foothold in the Balkans. On the contrary, in making her alliance with Great Britain and France, Turkey specifically sought and received an escape clause under which she would not have to undertake any action against Russia.

At the same time Bulgaria wants Rumania to return the lost territory of Dobrudja while Hungary, for her part, has been anxious to recover still another slice of Rumanian territory, the rich and populous region of Transylvania.

Such disunity makes it easier for an aggressor to act. It is possible, therefore, that even without an easy victory over Finland, Russia will seek to take over Bessarabia. And there is some likelihood that if this happens Germany will also move into southeastern Europe to secure, among other things, the oil fields and the wheatlands of Carol's kingdom. In that way the German-Russian partition of Poland would be repeated at Rumania's expense and the difficulties for a negotiated peace would be even greater.

It is not surprising, under the circumstances, that the Italians are greatly alarmed over the prospect of Russian aggression moving south. Such a development would imperil Italian as well as Balkan interests. That is, no doubt, why the Italians have taken so strong an anti-Russian line on the Finnish question.

For the same reason, despite the differences that divide them, the Balkan nations and Italy may now draw together so as to present a solid front to Communist aggression. And in so doing, Italy's potential position as a mediator in the west would be strengthened.

Railroad Earnings

The effect of rapidly rising business activity is reflected in the greatly improved earnings statements of the railroads. Figures now released for October show that the Class I roads had a net operating income of $101,600,000 for that month compared with $68,500,000 in October a year ago. The November returns will probably show similar improvement.

While the business upturn is most encouraging, it would be a mistake to assume that the railroads are in a fair way to solve their problems because some hard-pressed carriers have been relieved of the fear of immediate bankruptcy. Even with traffic maintained at the existing high level the roads will not be in a position to attract the volume of business they enjoyed a decade ago. In the meantime, competing transportation agencies have encroached upon their field of operations.

Morover, deferred outlays for maintenance, repairs and improvements will necessarily absorb a considerable proportion of operating revenues as the demand for railway facilities increases

In spite of recent gains, the return on the roads' property investments, figured on an annual basis, averaged less than 3 per cent in October as compared with slightly less than 2 per cent a year ago, and 3.35 per cent in 1930. For the first ten months of the current year the annual rate of return on investment amounted to only 2.07 per cent. During this period, moreover, 16 roads failed to earn expenses and taxes.

When it is remembered that the net operating income is the amount earned before deductions for interest and fixed charges, it is evident that the roads as a whole have a long way to go before they will be in position to attract needed investment capital into the industry. Without the support of private capital, however, they cannot hope to survive as privately-owned and operated systems.

The problem of stabilizing the industry will not be solved simply by bringing roads out of the red. They must be not merely solvent concerns, but going concerns capable of financing themselves without appealing to Government lending agencies for aid in emergencies.

First Things First

Thomas E. Dewey's first speech as a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination had only a secondary connection with politics in the superficial sense of the word. If a few cutting references to the New Deal, a few bouquets to Minnesota Republicanism, had been left out, the address in Minneapolis would have been wholly detached from partisanship. It would not for that reason have been less important.

Because Mr. Dewey preferred a little timely philosophizing to outlining a program of particulars in this initial sally, some critics find his speech on Wednesday disappointing. It is argued that he should, even at this early stage of the campaign, have produced a more definite prescription for the cure of national ailments.

Such criticism is idle, not to say silly. The first step in any curative treatment is accurate diagnosis and that was what Mr. Dewey attempted in Minneapolis. The crisis in America, he concluded, is one of faith. This applies in many fields, but in that of economics it is primarily a question of faith in the system of private enterprise. The initial task as seen by Mr. Dewey is to eliminate unecessary discouragements to faith in this sphere. "Until we first make up our minds that this is our purpose, there is no use discussing particular problems."

Mr. Dewey is absolutely right in emphasizing first things first. The essential choice before the American people is whether they desire to continue a system in which the citizen, so far as possible, faces up to his own problems, or whether the alternative of an all-embracing, paternalistic, and therefore necessarily repressive, central government is desired.

That fundamental choice will be made largely on the basis of faith. Those who themselves lack courage or vitality will naturally prefer the socialistic to the individualistic approach. Those who dislike or cannot meet responsibilities will decry self-government in favor of the fuehrer principle. Those who give way easily to discouragement will naturally wish to be carried as comfortably as possible by society.

In emphasizing this line of demarcation, and asking the electorate to decide on which side it stands, Mr. Dewey raised the really vital issue. In his opening lines he has disclosed the theme of the forthcoming drama. It would have been more in accord with traditional politics if he had talked more and said less. But this Republican candidate, evidently, prefers to build his campaign on fundamentals.

Taking To The Airways

In contrast to curtailment of transatlantic shipping services resulting from the war, airway services are to be increased. President Trippe of Pan-American Airways says that within three months the first of six new clippers will be added to the New York-Lisbon run. As the others are completed, daily flights from New York will be scheduled.

The progress made in transoceanic air travel in the brief time since hardy aviators risked their liyes—and often lost them—trying to span the Atlantic seems miraculous. Even after intercontinental air travel had been placed on a comparatively safe basis, the day seemed far distant before it would become an effective competitor of the ordinary oceangoing means of transport.

But the war has offered the airlines an unexcelled opportunity to provide safer as well as much speedier transportation. They have grasped that opportunity, with the result that before long the daily crossing will doubtless become a commonplace event.

We don't know what the world is coming to, but we're still optimistic enough to hope it's coming to itself.

The King's Jargon

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

Once in a while we run across somebody who seems aggrieved and apprehensive because English is not widely spoken in this country and American is. Whether it is a good thing or not for this Nation to develop its own language, it is probably inevitable on the basis of differences in environment and experience, sports and pastimes. If you imagine you really understand English, see what you can do with the following excerpt from cricket notes in the London Times, the Thunderer, the model of conservatism. It says:

> Derbyshire were on the kill and in the mood they were in, they naturally enforced the follow-on. The total was only four when Copson produced what was to Fishlock a fast leg-break, and that was, not unnaturally, the end of him.

Sounds pretty brutal, but probably wasn't, and in any case it had as well be Greek to the most of us over here. A baseball story would be just as incomprehensible to the vast majority of Britons, and so it goes.

"What Democrats Need"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was somewhat amused in reading Mr. Claude Sutherland's letter in The Post of December 4, headed "What Republicans Need," criticizing John Hamilton, that "so-called leader of the Republican Party," because he did not agree with one of President Roosevelt's million ideas.

We know the President changed Thanksgiving Day, but he may not be allowed to change the date of the Republican National Convention. And we shall not argue as to the 1940 campaign, because there are others who have ideas also.

In another paragraph of Mr. Sutherland's article he says: "What the Republicans need is a man with some organizing ability who can bring the Hoovers and the Landons and the Vandenbergs and the Deweys of the country together to see as one man."

In answer to the above paragraph, may we not say that the Democrats may also need a man with some organizing ability to bring the Garners, the Wheelers, the Burkes, the Georges, the Glasses, the Farleys, and even the Maryland Tydings and thousands of other Democrats together "to see as one man," especially should F. D. R. insist upon running for a third term?

'Seemed More Provocative'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was intrigued with (by) the caption "Victims to Logic" which (that) you furnished for my letter printed December 4.

Was it critical, or just subtle?

Discussing the demonstrations by the students of Yale when Browder made his appearance there I suggested that, instead of being victims of Red logic, they were victims "to" violet logic (militant reactionary propaganda). I think, in this application, the word "victim" was a legitimate synonym for (with) "sacrifice." "To" seemed more provocative and correlative in the context.

Of course my rhetoric is not always 100 per cent.

New England Cooking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent reprint in your paper from a Birmingham paper, comparing the merits of Yankee and Dixie cooking, to the disparagement of the former, challenges me.

All comparisons are odious, particularly those applied to the culinary art, but the statement of the gentleman from Alabama that, "aside from the New England boiled dinner and a few things like that," the North has nothing to offer the gourmet to compare with the hot biscuits and Southern fried chicken, requires comment.

What about the famous clam bakes of New England, her clam chowder, fried clams, broiled lobster, yes, even her classic codfish cakes? What about her famous Boston brown bread and baked beans, her unexcelled pies and doughnuts, her toothsome maple dainties? Whose cook book has been for the past quarter of a century and still is a best seller? It is "Fannie Merrit Farmer's Boston Cooking School Cook Book."

What Southern toddy can excel New England's hot butter rum? A few quaffs of that and Mr. Chamberlain would have no Munich to regret, though he might have more gout.

Perhaps the Birmingham tourist, made painfully aware of the startling contrast between a lovely New England countryside, with its big white houses immaculate in their white paint and green shutters, and a not always romantic Southland, suffered a chagrin that took his appetite for New England specialties.

Your New Englander does not feel called upon to boast either of his lineage or his table. He rests in the serene knowledge that both are good. In closing, I salute the Southern ham, the spoon bread and the mint julep. Long may they wave.

"Unwarranted Attack"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article which appeared in The Post of November 29 under the title "On the Line With Considine" appears to be a very vitriolic and unwarranted attack on the football teams of the Army and the Navy.

Both Army and Navy have produced some very fine teams in the past. Likewise Princeton, Yale, Harvard and other leading universities have produced some poor ones.

If Mr. Considine knew the handicaps under which football is played at the two Government institutions he would not be so quick to criticize, but might rather wonder that they attempt to play at all.

The rigid discipline, exacting curriculum and long hours of studies and drills leave little time to develop athletic teams, which must practice at such limited periods as can be allowed them.

The purpose of the institutions is to educate, train and produce officers for our Army and Navy and neither athletics nor anything else can be allowed to interfere with this primary mission.

Candidates for the football team must give up part of their hard-earned leave and return ahead of time, to get in shape for the early games of the season. They show a fine spirit to do so.

Graduate coaching has been adopted partly for the reason that it is doubtful whether any first-class civilian coach, with his reputation at stake, would undertake the development of a football team under the conditions which it is necessary to impose at the Government institutions.

Under the circumstances, Mr. Considine's attack upon and ridicule of these two fine bodies of young men can be considered neither fair nor sportsmanlike.

In Traffic Court

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers for the woman who stood up for her rights in Traffic Court the morning of December 1.

I was an interested and sympathetic listener, and I believe, with her, that she has been treated very badly since coming to Washington two months ago. This woman discussed at length (too long for the judge and men present, I expect) her arrest by the officer and subsequent charges on two counts. Granted that she may have taken up too much time getting to the point, I agree with her that background to a story does play an important part in the picture and character witnesses aren't to be dismissed too lightly.

It seems to me that too large a percentage of people who are brought up in Traffic Court very meekly and humbly pay their fines without as much as presenting their side of the case; and they are not people who can afford to pay, but those poor, unfortunate people who can ill afford the expense who are made to part with their hard-earned money.

This woman appeared to have the better of the judge on one very important question which he dismissed lightly—that of whether her word was equally as good as the officer who arrested her.

Washington is receiving a very bad name due to silly traffic regulations and it's about time something definite were done besides conferences and study by a group of high-paid men who talk and talk, but yet get nowhere. MRS. A. E M.

Christmas Cards

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Christmas cards are retained by many persons from one year to the next. They could be utilized to bring joy this Christmas time to many shut-ins in hospitals, sanitariums and orphanages if they were pasted in books, on album pages, or even sent "as is" to institutions. I believe these beautiful cards would bring pleasure to many inmates. M. S. K.

Reforms Still Needed Here

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The unscrupulous oligarchy in Moscow, falsely labeling themselves Communists, expound the doctrine that might makes right and unsheath their bloody sword of imperialism in vengeance on a nation whose only crime is the initiative it has undertaken in its struggle for self-determination.

The irony behind such degradation is that great democracies the world over, who believe in and sympathize with the Helsinki government, can only be still, play the role of watchful waiter and issue the moral support and phraseology of "God bless you."

There are other problems and intricacies, however, beneath this invasion of the Finns that we in America must face with reality and high resolve. Many seasoned observers are predicting that this invasion will be a death blow to those who look with favor on a more liberal interpretation of governmental philosophy. These observers infer that now Mr. Dies can pack up his satchel and head for a vacation in Squedunk; that so far as America is concerned the Communists are a forgotten entity.

Let us hope in some respects that they are right. But before we become too egotistical about our own self-aggrandizement we must open our eyes to certain inherent weaknesses on our own part.

We in America are facing social and economic problems broad in scope and important in their relation to our very form of Government. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that here in this land of potential plenty there are some 30-odd millions of people who are not receiving proper nourishment, sufficient clothing and adequate medical care. We cannot close our eyes to the fact that there are still 12 to 14 million people who cannot find any means of livelihood.

We must face the reality of thousands of citizens in the prosperous city of Cleveland starving because of inadequate facilities for relief. But we do not, on the other hand, wish to continue this relief forever. It is an unhealthy growth in the tissues of the body politic.

What can we do, therefore, in the light of such conditions, to offset a more radical form of government from taking over that which we fundamentally believe to be the best form of government on earth? Here, in the opinion of this writer, is one of the most important questions that this Nation has had to face in the annals of its history.

We must either go back to a stricter interpretation of our economic problems, a laissez faire philosophy which we know did not work and to a great extent brought upon us the problems at hand, or we must go forward, planning progressively and conscientiously in the light of ever-changing conditions.

This, I believe, next to the war involvement question, will be the outstanding issue of the coming campaign. It is imperative that it be given definite and concerted action. It is hard to visualize, therefore, any possibility of defeating Mr. Roosevelt for a third term, regardless of whether the war in Europe is still in progress or not.

Trip To Otumba

Whenever you make your first trip to the great pyramids of San Juan Teotihuacan, northeast of Mexico City, you will know you have almost reached them when you come to an arrow which points to a left-hand road. The arrow bears the name "Otumba." The name is romantic; Otumba was the primitive town where Cortes defeated the Aztecs after they had almost ended his incredible adventure on that "sad night" in July, 1519. But don't go down the road to Otumba—unless you are a hardy soul or you want to meet Father Garibay.

Several new-found friends and myself decided that we wanted to do the second-named thing—meet Father Garibay. The pastor of the parish church at Otumba has a well-deserved fame in Mexican scholarly circles for his ability as a linguist.

Latin and Greek, familiar to him because of his calling, are more than mere necessities; he but recently published a very beautiful little book entitled "Aeschylus, Trilogy of Orestes," a splendid translation that Mexican classicists are hailing with delight. Previous to this publication his "Poem of the Trees" had been read and admired.

But our chief interest in his work was not poetical or classical; it was the fact that Father is one of the few people in Mexico who can read and speak the Nahuatl tongue, which is the mother of so many dialects in the central valleys and plains. Self-taught, the kindly gentleman of Otumba produced one of the really fine pieces of criticism of Aztec poetry in a recent short study entitled "Aztec Lyric Poetry." So even though we knew the road was bad, we anticipated an interesting afternoon—and we were not disappointed.

It took three hours of jolting and bouncing to reach the town of the magic name, for it is a magic name to anyone who loves the thought that on its plain and across its hills Spaniards and Aztecs were locked in a bloody battle that almost saw the end of Spain's first grand thrust into North America.

The town, however, is disappointing. On this fall afternoon it was so quiet, so dusty, so forlorn-looking that one was reminded of the "ghost towns" of our old West. Later we learned that the population had dropped from a bustling 6,000 to a bedraggled 1,200 since Madero sounded the death knell of the old way of life.

We were five. Our leader was Father Plancarte, young, another classical scholar with two doctorates from Rome, author of an exhaustive study of the influence of the poet Horace on four centuries of Mexican writers. Then there was Manuel Toussaint, middle-aged, handsome, camera in hand, known throughout artistic circles as Mexico's foremost authority on painting and architecture of colonial times.

Behind him came Edmundo O'Gorman, whose name explains his origin, also young, a lawyer, delver in the secrets of New Spain, director of the nation's archives. Last of importance in the group was Justino Fernandez, boon companion of O'Gorman, author of the first real attempt to summarize a century of Mexican art, "Modern Art in Mexico." Surely these men were fit company for Father Garibay.

We went first to the church gates. They were locked. We drove around the block and stopped before the entrance to a courtyard that could have been found in a thousand places of old Spain. Cobblestones, a stall, huge columns of stone carved from one piece.

The priest came down. He was an experience in himself. Dress: The conventional cassock, but on his head a high, round, black cap, suggesting Greek orthoxody; on his feet, woven sandals that are now factory-made in Mexico. A long, black beard showed above sunburned cheeks. Under his arm was a copy of "Time."

We went in. We talked. We ate. It was good talk and it was good food, the best the "padrecito" had to offer. We looked at his books, English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Greek, Latin, Portuguese, and, of course, Aztec manuscripts. Then we went walking, "seeing the sights."

Now our host wore brown trousers, a suede jacket and a cap. We saw his church, one of those beautifully simple structures that the Franciscans scattered so lavishly through Mexico in the sixteenth century. The pastor was proud of it; he loved it. He had been there—shades of Virgil, Horace, Euripides, Moctezuma—seven years!

There was a last treat. Otumba was the birthplace of the famous Jesuit painter, Father Carrasco. Some of his early work was still preserved by his relations in a big colonial house across the square from the church. Father got permission for us to enter. Yes, Fernandez said, the early work was so much better than the later pictures.

Here was an easy naturalness, grace, beauty, humanity, vigor. The old man died some years ago, his work of the latter period showing little originality, naturalness. He had not lived up to the promise of his youth.

The sun began to set. Otumba was drowsy in its dusty heat, its air of abandonment. The trees in the plaza rustled dryly, the monument to Father Hidalgo seemed to droop discouragedly. We talked some more, gave abrazos, said our good-bys.

As we drove away (to face a worse road than the one we came on) we all looked back and saw the bearded man at the door of the stone courtyard. For one bright moment he had enjoyed himself, talked freely, laughed and felt no older than his 42 years. Now he would be alone again in Otumba with 1,200 parishioners, with the dogs and the dust, with the memories of the great battle, with Horace and Virgil and Moctezuma and his library—and "Time."

On second thought, do take the left turn near the Pyramids. You will see a side of Mexico that very, very few tourists ever see—or know exists.

Religious Rackets

FEW OF US, apparently, appreciate the opportunities for profit, good living and power which await exploitation by a live organizer with a loud voice and a silent conscience. Religious and political freedom are so precious, and the rights of labor, as of even date, are held in such elaborate respect that molestation of any reasonably agile grafter were almost unthinkable. If he has a strain of demagogue blood in his veins, so much the better.

The revenue act is the one by which the Government nowadays is popularly expected to suppress all forms of vice to which no other laws apply o which local or State authorities, by reason of timidity or corrupt involvement, do not rebuke. This is long and wide, but it has its limitations, and so has the courage of the Federal Government.

Religious Rackets Appear Immune

IT SAYS that religious organizations need not file returns or pay taxes if no part of their revenues inure to the benefit of individuals and if they keep out of politics. However, most of the established and respected religious organizations do use part of their revenues to pay their clergy, and most of them do engage in political activity from time to time. So, actually, most of them forfeit their right to immunity from taxation and official inquiry, but are exempted, nevertheless, because any attempt to crack down would cause a terrible fuss.

Labor organizations enjoy specific exemptions, although the Government does have a legal right to examine their books, but political movements are thoroughbred sacred cows.

At present, a number of religious rackets are being operated—largely by mail, too—but as long as the operators avoid obscenity in their literature and keep within the State laws regarding morals they are safe. A God-man running a racket in the role of supreme prophet-priest or lama puts himself in sole, unquestioned charge of the money, and if he pays an income tax on the salary which he allows himself out of the kitty, he is all right with the law.

No Laws Against Mail Order Religion

HE MAY ALSO put his old lady on the pay roll as priestess, and pay his son a salary as the sacred God-child—and that will be legal, too, although, of course, if their income is big enough to be taxable they, too, must shower down. But the rest of the treasury is his also. He can draw upon it up to 100 per cent or split it three or more ways with his family, and if the personal income taxes are paid the racket is legitimate.

No authority can prevent imposition on bewitched old men and women, who may then be tossed aside in poverty, or forbid vicious racketeering on the poor in the form of payments for mail-order courses in religion. Religious freedom demands this, and if the cult also takes a political turn, advocating rubber money or war against Wall Street in a vague but clamorous way, the additional issue of political freedom may be raised. It is not necessary—in fact, it is inadvisable—that such a political group nominate or indorse candidates, it is wiser just to be against most things and most candidates and proposals and to remain without definite political form but retaining the religious form.

Quick to Cry Persecution

LABOR ORGANIZATION is such that one labor group may issue a charter to a purely imaginary subordinate union with the power to call strikes and with business agents or personal representatives of the president to call on employers and shake them down for graft, which will be called loans in the improbable event of their being discovered by the Internal Revenue. If a union holds meetings only at long intervals, and its inquisitive rank and file members get broken legs on the way home, curiosity as to the bank roll abates to nothing. And then, if the books unfortunately burn up or vanish, it is very difficult for any authority to trace the income.

It is also bad political taste to question union leaders too closely, for the racketeer in labor, like the gentler grafter in religion and political reform, is quick to cry persecution in the cause of the forgotten men whom he represents.

In California recently the ham 'n' eggs racket claimed 350,000 members at one time, paying 1 cent each per day. This would have indicated an income of $3,500 a day, and the promoters, with one-third of the voters of the State behind them, called themselves a voluntary association and claimed exemption from certain laws.

The Federals fixed them, though. The Federals looked over their treasury and looked over the men, and assessed them, anyway; but still they had the remainder and the political and financial power to rattle a great State as though an earthquake had struck.

On The Record

The German Psychological Dilemma

THE RUSSIAN attack upon Finland must have caused a psychological crisis in Germany, which, if imaginatively exploited by the Allies, might not be without effect on German internal affairs.

The Russian attack must stick in the throat of the German army for more than reasons of Baltic policy, for it was Germany, and Germany alone, that came to the aid of Baron von Mannerheim when he suppressed the Communist uprising in 1918.

The recollection of this story is important. On December 6, 1917, the Finnish Diet drew up a declaration of independence which, after centuries of struggle with Russia—as previously with Sweden—was held to mark the birth of Finnish freedom. On January 4, 1918, the new Bolshevist government in Russia, which enjoyed the confidence and sympathy of the Finnish Social Democrats, recognized Finnish independence and declared that it conformed to their own policy, whereupon Sweden and France also recognized it.

Then came Germany's treaty of Brest-Litovsk, which confirmed the Finnish independence and wrested from Russia the balance of her Baltic possessions.

Bolshevist Uprising Ransacked Country

THE FINNISH Social Democrats pinned their faith on the sympathy of the Bolshevist government to save them from invasion by Russia. But the garrisons, instigated by the Russians and reinforced by them, turned loose and ransacked the country in a Bolshevist rising. The hurriedly organized white army of civil guards, under Baron von Mannerheim, sought aid from Sweden. It was refused. But the Germans, also appealed to, sent immediately a division of 12,000 under Gen. Rudiger von der Goltz, who held the Red forces and thus helped Finland drive out the Communists.

Finland, of course, was asked to pay something for this aid. The Germans wanted Finnish military cooperation to help them capture the Murman Railway, which was held by the British. The allied offensive in the west, however, diverted Germany's forces. The armistice and the German democratic revolution followed, and German troops were conveyed back home.

At the close of 1919 Baron von Mannerheim sounded the allies on aid to the White Russian Gen. Yudenitch for his campaign against the Bolsheviks. But Mannerheim got no encouragement from Paris or London or from the moderate forces in Finland.

Thereafter the Finnish republic was established and a peace treaty was signed with Russia in 1921.

Germany Regarded Prime Double-Crosser

NOW THE HITLER government, in giving the Russians a free hand in the east, is wiping out a chapter of German history of which the German army is proud, and territory and policy for which German blood has been spilled. For the sake of rewriting the Versailles Treaty in the west—which was dictated by the victorious allies—Germany is unwriting the treaty of Brest Litovsk in the east—which was dictated by the victorious Germans! And, whereas in 1918 the Finns looked to Germany as their savior, in 1939 they look to the Allies, and are compelled to look upon Germany as a prime double-crosser.

And it is amusing that the Soviet government's organ here, the Daily Worker, referring back to the White and Red campaigns in Finland and the role of outside powers, avoids any reference to that played by Germany at the time. Then as now Great Britain is supposed to have been the villainous enemy of the Soviet Union!

What certain officers of the German command can think of all this is difficult to imagine. It is hard to conceive how any nation can win a decisive war in the prodigiously fortified west. And yet, unless the Germans intend to undertake such a war on the grandest possible scale, regardless of the price and in outright alien alliance with Soviet Russia, what they are doing in the east can find no explanation in reason.

Russians Gambling On Germany's Defeat

RIBBENTROP may be arguing along the old lines of the Von Schlieffen plan, which was for giving the Russians everything—letting them come, if they could, right down to Danzig. One school of military thought in Germany always held that Germany lost the last war in the west—the crucial battle of the Marne—because of the army corps diverted to the east. They argued that, victorious in the west, they would then have had no difficulty in turning around and throwing the Russians back again from the Baltic and the Black Sea. But such a plan would presume the chance of decisive victory in the west. Otherwise it is suicide.

On the other hand, the Russians certainly know this and must therefore be betting on a German defeat in the west. For a victorious Germany would certainly turn against the Soviet Union with absolutely cold-blooded cynicism. A defeated Germany, however, would let the Russians into Europe to the Rhine.

Reasonable human beings want neither.

A victorious Nazidom that first won in the west and then suppressed the Soviet Union and got control of its resources is a nightmare.

A Germany, sovietized in the midst of breakdown and despair, overrunning half of Europe, is the other nightmare.

German Allegiance Will Be Directed

BUT HOWEVER the Allies may feel, the reasonable forces in Germany must feel worse, for the former hope is a prodigious gamble; the latter is the end of Germany—the final irony in history—with Hitler, Europe's savior from Bolshevism, in the role of Europe's Kerensky!

This, then, is the German psychological dilemma which could, perhaps, be exploited.

If the Allies can help Finland, and help her notably, without endangering her position in the west, every German will be divided in his allegiance.

Except for the German Communists—whatever their number may be—every German will wish in one part of his divided soul that the Finns and the Allies will win—on that sector of the spreading front, if nowhere else.

And the creation of a divided allegiance inside the ranks of the enemy is a most important political weapon. So far it has been used most effectively by the Communists, who are past masters at spreading mental confusion.

The Nazis have used it fairly effectively also.

But this time Hitler himself has put it into the hands of the Allies, if they have the imagination to use it.

The TNEC Hearings

By Ernest K. Lindley

Protecting The Cost of Living

QUIET PREVENTIVE work seldom makes headlines but every wage and salary earner has a stake in the hearings on prices now being held by the Temporary National Economic Committee. Their purpose, briefly stated, is to find out what can be done to prevent excessive price rises, and especially a sharp increase in the cost of living as a whole, as a result of the European war.

The World War of 1914-18 raised our cost of living 25 per cent even before we got into it. At the peak, after we got in, the cost of living was 64 per cent above the prewar level, and would have been higher if the Federal Government hadn't fixed prices and many State and local governments hadn't put a ceiling on rents. By the middle of 1920 the wage earner's living costs as a whole were twice as high as in 1914. Food costs had doubled and clothing costs had trebled. Then came a collapse.

So far, prices as a whole in this country have behaved fairly well since the beginning of the European war. There was a small but sharp rise in foodstuffs, apparently due chiefly to speculative buying and to profiteering. But for several weeks the trend has been down again, until food prices are now lower than they were in 1937 and the early part of 1938.

28 Basic Staples Have Risen Sharply

THIS IS A QUIET war. Some of the policies of the Allies will tend to keep certain prices down in this country, even if the actual fighting becomes more severe. The British, for example, are taking 40 per cent of their imports from their own dominions and colonies, as against about 20 per cent during the World War. Industrially both Britain and France are far better prepared for war than they were a generation ago. Both nations are cutting down on imports of non-essentials and taxing heavily so their civilian populations will have less to spend than during World War I.

A few prices, however, have jumped sharply in this country. And the TNEC is looking ahead toward what may happen if the war lasts a long time, the fighting become more furious, and the destruction more widespread. Even now 28 basic commodities—several of them of great industrial importance—are about 20 per cent above the August price level. Zinc is up about 35 per cent, scrap steel about 23 per cent, copper about 20 per cent.

Dr. Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, told the TNEC that "what happened to prices at the beginning of the last war is, in a sense, being repeated, although in a much more limited degree today . . . I think it is very important that we watch these prices in order to avoid the consequences that we had to suffer during the last war."

Close Watch Keeps Prices In Leash

IT MAY SEEM strange to those who think the New Dealers are always plotting ways for the Government to get its hands on industry, but the whole emphasis in the TNEC hearings is on how to keep prices within bounds without formal Government intervention. The TNEC hearings themselves are one deterrent. Almost certainly the TNEC has prevented a rise in steel prices. The mere announcement, in September, that at the President's request it would watch price movements almost as certainly put a brake on various other price rises. The current hearings, although not widely publicized are being closely followed by the industries concerned. The New Dealers unquestionably hope that the cost of living can be kept within bounds by periodic hearings such as these, combined with intelligent self-restraint by businessmen—plus anti-trust prosecutions where they seem justified.

Several price mysteries already have been discovered. For example, the prices of silk products, and especially silk stockings, have gone up. But the branded types of silk products have gone up far more than the unbranded types. Why?

How the Federal Government, by its own buying methods, can cause drastic price increases, has also been revealed. A few months ago the Government Procurement Office asked for bids on 20,000 tons of hemp. This is about 50 per cent of our normal imports for an entire year, and many times the amount the Government has purchased at any one time in recent years. As a result the price jumped from about 5 cents to 13 cents in 10 days.

Figures Needed On Inventories

THE PROCUREMENT Office realized what it had done—finally—and withdrew the bids. The price of hemp fell back to 10 cents. Most of our hemp comes from the Philippines. The Procurement Office is bound by law to ask for sealed bids. This was a case when it surely could have done better by negotiating with the sources of supply instead of trying to buy an immense quantity all at once on the open market.

The imperative need for more accurate figures on inventories—stocks in the hands of manufacturers, jobbers, wholesalers, retailers, etc.—has also been brought out by the TNEC hearings. The existence of large stocks—if generally known—tends to hold down price increases.

The kind of economic preparedness the TNEC is attempting in its price hearings is just as important as military and naval phases in our efforts to insulate ourselves against the disorders of Europe and Asia.

Light On A Riddle

By Barnet Nover

Concerning Russia's Military Might

ONE OF THE most deep-seated beliefs of modern times is that the Russian army is a steam roller which through sheer weight alone is capable of overriding all opposition.

That belief has had more lives than a cat. It survived the disastrous defeat of the Russian army by Japan in 1904-05. It was again in full bloom when the first World War broke out a decade later. And despite Tannenberg and the collapse of 1917 it has long since resumed its place in popular thinking.

NUMBERS undoubtedly count in war, and Russia has numbers.

The statistics concerning Russian man power are impressive. At a pinch, Russia should be able to mobilize no fewer than 20,000,000 men, which is far more than all the men which Germany, France and Great Britain have under arms today. And while there are no accurate figures regarding the number of planes, tanks, guns, which Russia possesses, they are believed to be considerable.

But an army must be supplied. It must be fed. And it must be led. Without a properly functioning industrial and agricultural system behind the lines, without an adequate service of supply and without adequate leadership, numbers can prove a liability rather than an asset. In other words, a steam roller is only a dead weight if it has sand in its bearings.

IN WAR AFTER WAR the bravery of the individual Russian soldier has been abundantly demonstrated. But Russian governments have rarely given their armies a fair chance to demonstrate their fighting ability, and their leaders have more often than not proved to be ruinously incompetent.

Whether this is again true, as it was in 1904-5 and again between 1914 and 1917, the war in Finland may reveal. That war is only a little more than a week old. In the first test the Russian forces have clearly come off second best. But the real test may still be ahead.

FAR MORE THAN the fate of Finland is involved in this test. Russia, as Winston Churchill said early in the war, is a "riddle in a mystery wrapped in an enigma." Because that is so, her potential role in the European war has created great expectations on the German side and aroused considerable fears in Allied countries.

These reactions have resulted from two beliefs. The first is that Russia is a land of vast resources which, if placed at Germany's disposal, would enable the Reich to defy the Allied blockade from now to Doomsday. The second concerns the Russian steam roller.

IT IS NOW fairly clear that Russia can do very little for Germany in an economic way because she has not yet even begun to satisfy her own needs and has little to spare for the Reich. That is particularly true regarding such indispensable raw materials as oil.

Could Russia help Germany in a military way?

No one can say with any certainty whether Stalin has any intention of getting into the European war on Hitler's side. It is doubtful if he wants to. But the joint Russo-German partition of Poland, the Finnish war and the ominous indications that Russia may before long thrust out in the direction of the Balkans do suggest, however, that the force of circumstances may drive Russia and Germany into a temporary military partnership.

Should that happen, the question of Russia's military potential would be of enormous practical importance to all nations on the firing line.

IF THE FINNISH war proves that the Russian army is in actuality a formidable steam roller, that development would be certain both to encourage and frighten Germany—to encourage her because it would frighten the Allies; to frighten her because it would make the task of ultimately checking Russia so difficult.

On the other hand, if the fact is proved that the Russian Colossus has feet of clay not only the Allies but also the neutrals will be able to breathe easier. For it would then be possible to discount the weight which Russia, as a possible German ally, would be able to throw into the balance.

This may be one reason, if not the only reason, why the Finnish cause is receiving more than moral support in so many quarters. Italy, fearful of Russian occupation of the Balkans, is reported to have sent planes to Finland; the British government has openly admitted that it is permitting the dispatch of a "considerable quantity of war materials" to the Scandinavian democracy. The United States plans to help with more than professions of sympathy.

A Russian failure in Finland or even a prolonged setback might not only inhibit Moscow from indulging in further aggressions for the time being; it would also tend to deflate the vast fears arising out of the possibility that Russia and Germany will some day decide to fight together. That is why the Russo-Finnish war may prove to be, in a very real sense, a great turning point of the present European struggle.

Dark-Horse Team Defeats Jacoby Duo

Pittsburgh, Dec. 7 (AP).—A dark-horse team of Florence J. Stratford, Cleveland, and Lewis H. Fremont, Detroit manufacturer, tonight won by a wide margin over Oswald Jacoby, New York, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Wainwright, of New York, in the mixed pair championship of the National Contract Bridge tournament here.

The Cleveland-Detroit duo had a lead of 469½ match points for the three sessions to 453 for the runners-up. Third place in the field of 32 duos which had been cut from the original 72 early this morning, went to Mrs. George Guthrie, Columbus, Ohio, and Harry Feinberg, Cleveland, who had 434.

London, Dec. 7.—Two Polish submarines, the Wilk and the Orzel, have joined the British fleet. They escaped through the Baltic.

The Orzel was at Gdynia when Poland was attacked and sought refuge at Tallinu from where she escaped later.

Pennsylvania May Appeal on Alien Law

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 7 (AP).—Gov. Arthur H. James indicated today the Commonwealth probably would appeal a Federal court ruling that Pennsylvania's newly-enacted law requiring registration of aliens is unconstitutional.

"A lot of people are wondering," James commented, "what this divided loyalty is—if there is such a thing."

Snow Removal Parking Ban Goes Into Effect Dec. 15

District motorists who make a habit of parking their automobiles overnight on traffic arteries have just seven days to hunt up other places to store their machines on winter nights.

For, according to Traffic Director Van Duzer's office, the yearly snow-removal, no-parking ban will become effective December 15 for three months.

More than 5,000 signs prohibiting parking between 2 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. on many miles of streets are being placed by the Traffic Department.

Miss Ann Kiess Makes Song Debut in New York

New York, Dec. 7.—Miss Ann Kiess, of Washington, daughter of the late Congressman Edgar R. Kiess of Pennsylvania, made her debut as a singer tonight with Richard Himber's orchestra in the Corinthian room of the Pierre.

Among those dining there and hearing the artist were Mr. and Mrs. Severein Bourne, jr., whose guests were Miss Elise Van Siclen, Miss Margaret Warner Work and Mr. Robert Morgan, Mr. Frank J. Hale and guests, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Durham and Mr. Neil Andrews. Miss Kiess joined this party during the evening.

Stefanie, Hitler Friend, Quits England for Italy

London, Dec. 7.—Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe-Waldenburg, friend of Adolf Hitler and described on her own behalf in her recent unsuccessful action against Lord Rothermere for an alleged breach of agreement for her services as a "personal ambassadress" to the Feuhrer and other European statesmen, has left Britain, it was disclosed tonight. She was bound for Italy and Capri.

Sir John Anderson, minister for home security, was asked in the House of Commons tonight if he were considering her deportation. He replied that she "would be sailing in the next few days."

City Fathers Balk At $65 Bill for Dinner in N. Y.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—That caviar, pressed duck and Burgandy dinner and peaceful sleep at the Waldorf which Mr. and Mrs. James C. Lewis, the noise-haters, had "on the town" recently at a magistrate's suggestion and at a cost of $65.32 had a depressing effect today on the Board of Estimate.

Six of the eight members were cold to the cheerful suggestion of City Council President Newbold Morris:

"Let's all chip in and pay the bill, and not be like Magistrate Curran who had all the pleasure of being host without paying the bill."

The bill, incidentally, was paid several days ago by Walter D. Binger, Commissioner of Public Works, after the Lewises reported on the night they got away from city construction noises outside their apartment. At that time the belief was that an "unknown benefactor" would provide the cash, but today it seemed maybe Binger was holding the bag.

Persian Mission Here To Buy War Planes

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Shah of Persia, reported to be alarmed over Russian threats to neighboring countries, has sent an aviation mission to the United States to purchase pursuit planes and light bombers, it was disclosed today when the Persians appeared in New York City.

The commission of military pilots, Col. M. Khosrovani, Maj. Shalchi, and Capt. A. Afkhani, are visiting airplane factories in the New York area.

Hunger May Drive Out Winnie Ruth Judd

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 7 (AP).—Baffled searchers waited impatiently tonight for cold and hunger to drive Winnie Ruth Judd from her hiding place.

The mad murderess has been away four days and night since the second time she walked out of a ward at the asylum, and Deputy Sheriff Ernest Roach said he was confident the fugitive could not long endure inadequate nourishment.

U. S. Offers 700 Flying Scholarships

Courses Are Open To Americans Not Attending College, CAA Announces

A chance to win a flight scholarship was offered yesterday by the Civil Aeronautics Authority to 700 Americans not attending college.

Ground courses will be established in 70 cities and 10 students in each community will be selected for additional flight training when the ground courses have been completed, the authority said. Washington is one of the cities selected for the training.

"In all respects," the announcement stated, the training "will be the same . . . provided for in the colleges under the civilian pilot training act." The act required that at least 5 per cent of students trained be chosen from citizens not attending colleges.

Selection of students for the courses will be made by local groups, but all enrollees will have to meet requirements established by the CAA.

Women will be admitted without restriction in the ground courses, but only one will be permitted in each flying class of ten, officials said.

Finnish Attaches Quit Soviet After Seven-Day Ordeal

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Dec. 7.—Members of the Finnish legation finally received laissez passes this afternoon and were able to leave for Berlin this evening, thus bringing to an end their seven-day ordeal of having to remain in Moscow after their country was attacked awaiting the arrival of the Russian legation of Helsinki in Tallinn. From Berlin they hope to reenter Finland via Denmark and Sweden.

The activities of the German ambassador on orders of Berlin against the Finnish legation staff has excited considerable indignation in the diplomatic corps. Although the Finns deny all knowledge of it, it is established from other sources that Ambassador Schulenburg has been sending the embassy's second secretary, Dr. Gebhardt von Walther, around to many embassies and legations, especially those of the small neutrals, telling them not to go to the station tonight to bid farewell to the Finns, as it would be an anti-Soviet act.

Defense Calls Maverick Trial 'Persecution'

Prosecution Charges Blow at Democracy In Final Argument

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 7.—Prosecution of Mayor Maury Maverick was labeled by his attorney today "the most damnable case of political persecution in the annals of American jurisprudence."

The state on the other hand told the jury trying the former New Deal Congressman on charges of conspiracy to pay another's poll tax that the crime with which Maverick is charged "strikes at the very foundations of democracy."

Defense Attorney A. J. Wirtz and Assistant District Attorney M. D. Jones delivered the final arguments. The case was expected to go to the jury late tonight.

"When a person buys a poll tax receipt for another," Jones said, "he controls that vote. Such a condition is foreign to a democracy, which survives because the vote of one man counts as much as that of another."

Revenge Claimed

Wirtz, a former State Senator, replied:

"Maury Maverick is making a fight not only for himself but for the political liberty of the citizens of San Antonio. This whole thing arose in the mind of Maxwell Burket (San Antonio attorney) because the mayor wouldn't turn the San Antonio police force over to him to do with as he saw fit."

Burket and his client, Miss Rebecca Taylor, head of the San Antonio local of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, were two of the principal witnesses against Maverick. They said he proposed in a conversation with them last January 27 that money be advanced to union members unable to pay their poll taxes.

Conspiracy Charged

A poll tax receipt is a voting requirement in Texas.

The charge against the mayor alleged specifically that he conspired with an assistant secretary, Dick Jeffrey, Miss Taylor and George Glass, former business agent of the San Antonio local, to pay the poll tax of R. L. O'Brien, a union member.

District Judge Bryce Ferguson instructed the jury in effect that it must acquit Maverick unless it found that O'Brien was acting as an agent for the claimed conspirators at the time he went to the collector's office and paid his tax. Even though O'Brien was "given" $1.50 as an inducement for him to pay his poll tax Maverick could not be guilty of more than a misdemeanor, the judge said.

Lasting Peace Waits on Fall Of Trade Barriers, Grady Says

Economic Interdependence of All Peoples Must Be Recognized to Improve World Relations, Hull's Aide Declares

Obstacles to international trade must be eliminated to gain lasting peace and economic co-operation between nations, Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, asserted last night.

"We must seriously set about the business of removing restrictions to economic intercourse between nations," he told members and guests of the University Club, 1135 Sixteenth street northwest.

Grady paid tribute to the "tradition of neighborliness" in the Western Hemisphere and said it is the basis for the lack of fortifications and the low state or armaments in the Americas.

"Armament is low and would be lower on this side of the Atlantic if relations between the American nations were the only causes for it," he emphasized. "What armament there is largely has been caused by fear of aggression from abroad."

Although the "picture is fundamentally bright," so far as peace in the Americas is concerned, there are still problems to be settled, Grady pointed out.

"There is little point," he added, "in talking about improved relations unless we recognize the economic interdependence of all peoples."

Tariffs, currency restrictions and sanitary conventions, intended to aid one nation at the expense of another, must be lowered, if not removed, to gain improved relations, he continued.

Urging the importance of a "realistic view" in international affairs, Grady declared the trade agreements are an attempt to translate into action the desire of the United States for greater cooperation with other American nations.

"I hope we are developing a public opinion friendly to this singularly realistic approach" to our economic problems, he said.

"Although we have tremendous enthusiasm for Pan-Americanism at the present time, we have a great deal less support for the methods by which it can be accomplished," he admitted.

These conflicting opinions, Grady asserted, are typical of our "boom psychology."

Americans, he remarked, "talk a lot about problems, but do little to solve them."

Members of the panel for the discussion which followed Grady's address were George Maurice Morris, former chairman of the American Bar Association house of delegates; John P. Vance, law librarian of Congress; John P. Gregg, executive secretary of the Tariff Commission trade agreements committee, and Richard W. Flournoy, assistant legal adviser of the State Department. Roy Vallance, assistant legal adviser of the State Department, presided.

Germany, Russia To Move 600,000

Berlin, Dec. 7 (AP).—A German-Russian commission tomorrow will start the task of exchanging populations—approximately 600,000 persons in all—as the result of the partition of Poland by Germany and Soviet Russia.

Germans estimated that about 100,000 Germans would be brought westward from regions annexed by Russia, chiefly Wolyn (Volnynia), eastern Polish province.

They said possibly 500,000 Ukrainians and others would choose to move eastward into Russian territory.

Navy Trawler Sunk, Eight Britons Die

Netherlands Ship Torpedoed After Contraband Call

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 7.—Great Britain today suffered the tenth naval loss of the war in the sinking by a mine of the 209-ton navy trawler Washington. Eight men aboard her died.

Today's sea war toll included the 8,159-ton Netherlands motorship Tajandoen, torpedoed and burned in the English Channel after calling at a British contraband control port en route to the West Indies. Six of the crew were missing. It was the eighth ship lost in the war by the Netherlands, the second by submarines.

The 6,214-ton Norwegian tanker Britta sank off England's west coast last night after an explosion, it was learned when survivors were landed. Six missing were believed to have been killed by the explosion. The crewmen said they did not know whether the explosion was caused by a torpedo or a mine.

British accounts of the sinking of the trawler Washington said she was the first victim of "mines dropped from the air by German planes" which flew over the Thames estuary yesterday.

Mrs. May Grimmer, resident of a coastal village, gave the following word picture of the Washington mining.

"I saw the trawler come from the south. There was a great explosion which shook my house. One minute the trawler was there, and the next it was gone. It was horrible."

An Amsterdam message said the Belgian steamer Louis Scheid landed 28 crewmen and six passengers—all Netherlanders—at Weymouth, England, but a later Rotterdam message reported the Louis Scheid was aground south of Dartmouth. This message said the Belgian ship carried 34 of the Tajandoen survivors.

Sinking Off Canada

Ottawa, Ontario, Dec. 6 (Canadian Press.)—Naval headquarters tonight announced that nine lives were lost in the sinking of a British merchant ship in a collision off Nova Scotia. Earlier it had been reported that the 5,989-ton Manchester Regiment had been rammed and lost with an unknown number of her crew.

Battle Off Norway

Oslo, Dec. 7 (INS).—A report of a large-scale naval battle this afternoon off Bergen was published by the Norwegian newspaper Dagbladet tonight. Fishermen said they saw at least three battleships and several foreign warplanes in action, the newspaper said.

Phone Firm Seeks Beginnner Permits

By International News Service

Most girls have rigid jaws, stiff lips and lazy tongues—in the opinion of Mrs. Mayme Workman, traffic supervisor of the Illinois Telephone Association.

Testifying before the wage-hour division of the Labor Department yesterday, Mrs. Workman said these are the three things telephone companies must overcome in training operators.

She was the principal witness of the Independent Telephone Association which applied for certificates to employ beginners at wages less than the minimum prescribed by law. One year of training is necessary, she said.

At Long Last, Juliet Is Free To Wed Romeo

Judge Rules Against Parents; Couple May Take Vows Today

By Thomas C. Cluck,
United Press Staff Writer.

Riverhead, N. Y., Dec. 7.—At long last, in the words of a King who gave up his throne for love, Eileen Herrick and George Lowther 3d got a green light on the rocky road to matrimony tonight.

Judge L. Barron Hill sustained a writ of habeas corpus which freed the post-deb Juliet from the "virtual imprisonment" in which her society Romeo contended her parents had held her for a month.

After the case of thwarted romance had floundered about the county courthouse for more than four hours, Judge Hill emerged tonight from a long conference with the principals and announced:

"Eileen Herrick is free to leave the home of her parents."

That meant, Lowther's lawyer interpolated jubilantly, that the couple would be able to meet, and would do so, around noon tomorrow.

"Will they be married then?" the lawyer, Eli Johnson, was asked.

"I don't know," he replied. "It is extremely likely, though, that they will be married in a few days."

Both Willing

The likelihood was supported by the tale of true love which the daughter of a former New York park commissioner and her persistent suitor poured into the ears of the judge. They told him, in fact, that they were eager to be married on the spot. Then somebody remembered that they had no license.

Accompanied by a private detective employed by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Herrick, the light of Lowther's life arrived at the courthouse weeping gently. She left the judge's chambers smiling radiantly.

The court proceedings grew out of a similar habeas corpus action in the Manhattan supreme court. Justice Isadore Wasservogel of that tribunal compromised by declaring a ten-day truce—a trial separation after which the lovers should meet at will.

Juliet's parents put her in a hospital to recuperate from the strain of unrequited love. Just before the ten days expired, they hustled her out to the Long Island sanctuary and posted guards about the place to see that Lowther did his loitering elsewhere. One of them even ejected him from the Herrick premises on one occasion, he complained indignantly today.

To put a stop to that he sought—and got—the new writ in the court having jurisdiction in the domain to which Miss Herrick had been spirited away.

Johnson, in the private hearing, read the judge a letter which Eileen had smuggled out to George, just so his honor would be satisfied how things stood. In it she assured him of her undying and infinite love, confirmed his dark suspicion that her parents were conspiring to keep them apart, and wound up:

"Good-by, my sweet angel. I love you and always will, remember that. I'll go through hell for you and I have. They'll never keep us apart, unless they kill me. All my love, my darling angel."

As for the parents, they told the judge without quibbling that they disapproved of the way Eileen had been acting. They did not want her to marry Lowther, they said, and would do everything in their power to keep her from him.

But the judge's ear was tuned to the romantic opposition. After he had approved the writ and the meeting of the lovers tomorrow had been arranged, Lowther's attorney asked Hill:

"What if they don't meet tomorrow?"

"If that meeting is prevented, come back to court," His Honor replied ominously.

A Correction

On The Post Picture Page Wednesday, November 29, complimenting the Community Chest on its good job in the 1940 drive for funds, it was incorrectly stated that the suburban unit, headed by Donald L. Chamberlin fell 72 per cent short of its goal.

Mr. Chamberlin's group collected $37,767, or 72.63 per cent of the $52,000 quota. Reports received yesterday showed that the suburban unit had climbed to 82 per cent of the goal.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little PASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get PASTEETH at any drug store. (Adv.)

Enjoy the SCOTCH WITH A STORY

Ten years ago a handful of men were pioneering the airways of Africa. One of them was Captain White. Among the others was a famous war ace and stunt flier, who decided to fly a tricky monoplane from Eastern Africa to Central Europe. But he cracked up on an uncharted African island. Captain White's old friend and fellow explorer, T. Campbell Black, who later won the Melbourne Cup, set out in search of the missing pilot. Black spotted the wreck but could not bring his ship down on the tiny strip of land. He radioed for help. The disabled flier was snatched from a horrible death. History doesn't record this incident, but it should. For the flier saved that day is now the key man in German aviation. And he was saved by a British Royal Air Force plane. Ten years can bring many changes in the relationship between men, but through the years the quality of White Horse remains steadfast. This famous Scotch continues to hold old friends and make new ones. Why not try White Horse today? You will find it everywhere, but you will never find its equal. Match it if you can!

Captain Harold A. White, explorer and world traveler, relates his fascinating experiences in this White Horse series. Follow it week by week.

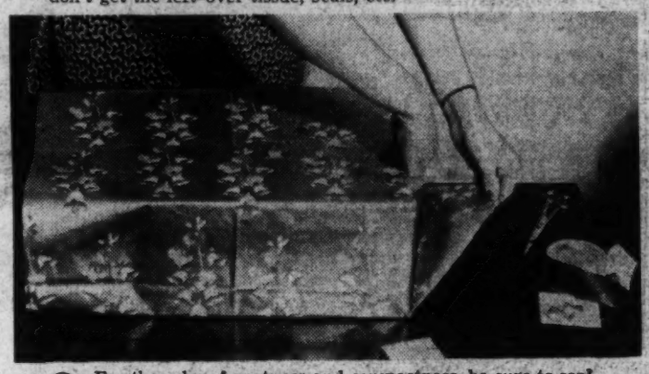
Yule Payoff—Uncle Sam played Santa Claus yesterday to begin distribution of $400,000 to some 11,000 depositors of the Park Savings bank. This 12½ per cent dividend—the third issued since the bank closed six years ago—brings to 37½ per cent the total of payments to date. Happy to get checks before Christmas were Ruth Brashears (left) and Mrs. Joseph Brashears, of 1605 Kenilworth avenue northeast. Right—They had to wait in line for the payoff but none minded it a bit

It's an Art

This Gift Wrapping

1. Wrapping a Christmas gift attractively need be no bugbear if you proceed as shown here. De luxe equipment for this lamp consists of tissue (10c), box (10c), ribbon (25c), decorative wrapping paper (25c), seals (10c) and card (10c), most of the material being sufficient for two or more gifts. First, line the box with tissue . . .

2. Next, the lamp and shade are wrapped separately in tissue and fitted snugly within the box. Be sure to do your gift assembling on a flat surface, not on a bed or rug. If prices of materials seem high, remember that a wrapped-to-order job such as this one will cost you 75 cents and you don't get the left-over tissue, seals, etc.



3. For the sake of neatness and compactness, be sure to seal the top of the paper before folding the ends. If you're expert at this thing, about three minutes of your time has been consumed up to this point. If an amateur, it may take you 15 minutes to get this far. But don't try to go too fast

4. And here is Mrs. Arthur J. Martineau, wrapping specialist in a downtown gift store, shown with the completed package. In tying the carton and making the bow, she uses three lengths of ribbon. The longest is for the tie, then the bow is fashioned separately, finally a short length is used to secure it to the knot. Simple, isn't it?

GroupNamed On Parochial Study Plan

Monsignor Corrigan Appoints Advisory Committee to Press Program of Pius XI

A new advisory committee of outstanding Catholic and non-Catholic educationwas named by Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, yesterday, to advance the American education program inspired by Pope Pius XI.

This group, Mgr. Corrigan said, will assist the commission on American citizenship announced November 30. Under auspices of Catholic University, the commission, of which the rector is president, will promote better citizenship throughout America and teach the responsibilities of living in a democracy.

The advisory committee named yesterday will have the specific task of preparing a civic education program for parochial schools. Material prepared is expected to be published for use in these schools next September.

Fulfils Pope's Request

In this manner, Catholic University will carry out a request made by Pope Pius XI in a message to the school at the beginning of its golden jubilee celebration in October, 1938.

The Pope, speaking a few months before his death, pointed to the attacks that were being made on Christian doctrine and Christian morality in several quarters.

He denounced civic philosophies that would "degrade man to the position of a soulless pawn in the sordid game of power and prestige," or that would "set him at the throat of his fellows in a blind, brutish class struggle for existence."

Christian Teaching Asked

Christian teaching alone, the Pope said, "can give full meaning and compelling motive to the demand for human rights and liberties because it alone gives worth to human personality."

Responding at once, the hierarchy commissioned Catholic University to organize an educational program to meet the Pope's request.

Members of the new advisory committee are:

Herbert C. F. Bell, professor of history, Wesleyan University; Franklin Dunham, educational director, National Broadcasting Company; Charles G. Fenwick, professor of political science, Bryn Mawr College; James L. Hanley, superintendent of schools, Providence, R. I.; F. Ernest Johnson, professor of education, Columbia University; Jerome G. Kerwin, professor of political science, University of Chicago; David A. McCabe, professor of economics, Princeton University; Henry C. Taylor, director, Farm Foundation and Howard E. Wilson, professor of education, Harvard University.

A professional staff under the direction of Mgr. Francis J. Hass, the Rev. Dr. George Johnson and Robert H. Connery, Ph. D., the executive committee of the commission, is preparing a statement on the ethical principles underlying civic obligations, a course of study for elementary schools, and an outline series in social science for colleges. This material will be published next spring and will be available for use in parochial schools next September.

Needy Victims Of Paralysis To Get Funds

Foundation's Local Branch Has $26,000 To Be Distributed

Col. David McCoach, jr., chairman of the local branch of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, announced yesterday plans for the distribution of funds to aid indigent sufferers of the disease.

The District has some $26,000, as a result of the 1938 President's Birthday celebrations. McCoach said it would be the policy of the organization to distribute its funds through recognized agencies by the executive committee or directly to individuals.

The chairman will have the power to approve disbursements to agencies or individuals in amounts not exceeding $100 but approval of the executive committee must be had for amounts in excess of $100.

Expenditures will be made on certification by physicians that the beneficiary is suffering from infantile paralysis and on reasonable showing that such person is without funds to procure adequate medical attention, hospitalization or necessary equipment.

In addition to Col. McCoach, the officers are Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, vice chairman; Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, treasurer, and James L. Martin, secretary of the P. U. C., secretary.

Capital News In Brief

Police Decoyed

Washington police went hunting last night for wooden ducks.

At headquarters Douglas E. Bullock, 1022 Seventeenth street northwest, reported 100 decoys had been removed from his garage in the 2700 block of Twenty-eigth street.

Bullock said he estimated his loss at $250, but told police he was more worried about the real ducks that may be shot as a result of the robbery, than he is about the missing wooden specimen.

What! No Cream?

Sergt. Mark H. Raspberry, of the United States Park Police, last night brought in the blackberries—48 jars of them.

The sergeant was patrolling his beat through the Mall between Adams and Madison streets near Third street northwest, when he met a colored man carrying a huge cardboard box on his shoulders. The colored man, upon seeing the sergeant, dropped his box and fled. Raspberry chased him, but unsuccessfully.

An investigation of the box proved most fruitful. It was full of blackberries.

Sergt. Raspberry picked up the blackberries and took them to his headquarters.

Seal to Keep Post Until Bill Is Introduced

Author of Plan to Revamp D. C. Setup Again Defers Quitting

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, author of the latest plan to revamp the District government, will not resign at the end of this month, but will continue in office until a reorganization bill is introduced in Congress, it was disclosed yesterday.

Commissioner George E. Allen has insisted that Seal remain until the bill to streamline the District government is started through Congress.

Several months ago the corporation counsel announced his intention of resigning, but deferred action at the insistence of the Commissioners, who asked him to draft the legislation for revamping the municipal setup.

In the meantime, Seal and his colleagues of the Commissioners' "Kitchen Cabinet" are busy rewriting the original Seal plan to include suggestions offered by the commissioners as a result of the recent public hearings.

One week from today the Commissioners must have a reorganization plan together with their criticisms of the Griffenhagen plan in the hands of the Reorganization Subcommittee of the House District Committee, of which Representative Kennedy, Democrat, of Maryland, is chairman.

Kennedy last week attacked the Seal plan. A bill which he introduced, is based on the Griffenhagen findings.

Paper Ship Docks At Alexandria

The Canadian steamship Markland, from Liverpool, Nova Scotia, docked at Alexandria, Va., yesterday, bringing its second cargo of newsprint for The Washington Post. A cargo of 1,500 tons of newsprint is being discharged at the Robinson Terminal Warehouse, and the vessel will probably begin its return voyage tomorrow morning.

Police Appoint 16 To 'Shoplift Squad'

Formation of a 16-man Christmastime "shoplifter squad" to protect downtown merchants from the light-fingered gentry was completed at Police Headquarters yesterday.

Personnel for the squad was chosen by Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, who also selected Lieut. Clement P. Cox as supervisor. Cox headed the group in previous years and has always accounted for at least 50 shoplifters.

Virginians Hear Plea For Bridge

State Society's Head Tells of Taking Over Hour to Get Into City On Present Spans

Need for an additional bridge across the Potomac River here was stressed last night at the meeting of the Virginia State Society by Col. Christopher B. Garnett, new president of the organization.

Drawing attention to frequent traffic jams at brideheads of the Arlington, Key and Fourteenth street bridges, he pointed out it sometimes requires "20 minutes to get on the bridges after being held up by the jams."

On Sunday afternoon, he added, it has taken "1 hour and 10 minutes" to get from Arlington County to downtown Washington.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, gave an illustrated lecture of historic scenes in northern Virginia.

A principal purpose of the talk, which included "shots" of traffic conditions at the bridges, was to arouse support for a demand for another bridge over the Potomac River, I. Chance Buchanan, secretary of the society, asserted.

Officials Attend

The function, celebrated as "Northern Virginia Night," was attended by chairmen of the boards of supervisors of Arlington, Prince William, Fauquier and Loudoun counties, and mayors of Virginia towns near Washington. Music was furnished by the Washington and Lee High School, Arlington, Va.

Besides Col. Garnett and Buchanan, new officers installed at the function were District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Representatives Schuyler O. Bland and Dave E. Satterfield, jr., of Virginia, vice presidents; Fred P. Myers, treasurer; George P. Grove, J. A. Somerville, Mrs. Richard A. Allen, Col. Edwin A. Halsey and Dr. Larry Arnette, members of the executive committee.

Honor guests were: Carl L. Budwesky, city manager, Alexandria, Va.; F. Freeland Chew, chairman, Arlington County Board, Arlington, Va.; Charles R. Fenwick, East Falls Church, Va.; Thomas B. Glascock, Upperville, Va.; Frank C. Hanrahan, county manager, Arlington, Va.; Stilson Hall, Leesburg, Va.; State Senator William D. Medley, Arlington, Va.; Francis Pickens Miller, Fairfax, Va.; F. P. Moncure, Stafford, Va.; Lucas D. Phillips, mayor, Leesburg, Va.

State Delegate Maurice D. Rosenberg, Alexandria, Va.; State Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, Va.; J. Murray Taylor, chairman, Board of Supervisors, Prince William County, Manassas, Va.; H. C. Thompson, Hillsboro, Va.; L. W. Trenis, chairman, Board of Supervisors, Fauquier County, Catlett, Va.; L. L. Triplett, Marshall, Va.

Also invited but unable to attend were R. R. Farr, mayor of Fairfax, Va.; W. P. E. Reid, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, Fairfax County; Richard L. Ruffner, mayor of Alexandria, Va.; M. H. Whitmore, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, Fairfax County, Va., and William T. Wilkins, of Alexandria, Va.

Self-Help Exchange Finds Work for 34

Twenty-three additional persons received work at the Self-Help Exchange this week and jobs were found in private industry for 11 participants in the cooperative organization, Hugh H. Cobb, production manager, reported yesterday.

In the same period, he said, the exchange dining room served 2,603 meals, the bakery produced 4,446 loaves of bread, the sewing department manufactured or renovated 466 garments and the shoe repair shop repaired 90 pairs of shoes.

'Oldest Inhabitants' Urged to Heed the Future

JOHN CLAGGETT PROCTOR, Vice President, Association of Oldest Inhabitants
COL. DAVID McCOACH, District Engineer Commissioner
EVAN TUCKER, Of Northeast Washington Citizens Association

Speaking to the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, celebrating its seventy-fourth anniversary last night, District Attorney David A. Pine said, "We should, as your constitution admonishes, be alert, not to resist change because it involves some adjustment in our lives, but welcome all suggestions for change with an open mind and with a conviction that while the old days may have been good, they were, and the present days are, susceptible of improvement." Theodore W. Noyes, the association's president, presided at the anniversary banquet at the Raleigh Hotel

46-Mile Wind Imperils 3, Smashes Auto

Two Saved From River; Man Escapes by Inches As Tower Falls on Car

Wind which reached 6 miles an hour last night put the lives of three men in peril, toppled a 60-foot construction tower to the street, demolished an automobile and played havoc with parking signs and street light globes.

Two men were rescued from a mud flat opposite Alexandria, Va., in the Potomac River where their rowboat was blown while tending lines on the steamer Sword at the dock of the American Agricultural Chemical Co. at Alexandria. They were rescued after an hour by Harbor police.

They were Kayer Fred, 37, and Walter McClenton, 28, both colored and both employes of the chemical company. After they were taken from their perilous perch in mid-river by Sergt. E. K. Shelton and Privates W. E. Davis and T. D. Bailey in a police boat, their own craft was lost when the painter parted while being towed through the rough water.

James Lyles, of 324 Third street southwest, escaped death or serious injury by seconds when a three-story construction tower was torn loose from the new Social Security Building at Third and D streets southwest and flung across his parked automobile. Lyles had just stepped from the machine when the huge tower crashed to the pavement. The automobile was demolished.

Throughout the city, parking signs were blown over and rolled into the streets by the wind. Scores of globes on street and bridge lighting standards were torn from their moorings and shattered.

Holdup Old Joke to Grocer; So, He Chases Real Robber

Friends Have Cried Wolf Often, but He Kept Pistol Handy

ROBERT D. SHRIER, a good grocer but a poor marksman

Friends of Robert B. Shrier have liked to drop in at his grocery store at 734 Third street northwest and surprise him with the greeting: "Stick 'em up."

The 50-year-old groceryman, who might be up on a ladder at the moment stacking cans of goods, or in the back of the store unpacking cartons, didn't mind. It was all in fun, and he was used to the "hold-ups"—all fake.

So last night when he was reading a newspaper and listening to his store radio—and some one said "Stick 'em up," Shrier didn't even look up. He continued his reading.

Then he saw the tip of a revolver appear over the top of his paper, and a voice repeated:

"Stick 'em up. This is a hold-up."

Looking up Shrier saw, behind the revolver, a colored man "about 6-feet-2, and 40 years old."

"I knew he wasn't kidding," reported Shrier, "and I asked him 'What do you want?'"

"Your money," said the intruder.

Shrier thought of the $50 in his cash register, and of the $100 more in a tin box undereneath the counter. He also thought of the revolver he always keeps handy.

Pretending to get the money, he reached for his gun instead. But he couldn't locate it. For a moment of panic, Shrier fumbled—and delayed, until he felt the pistol under an old newspaper on the radio.

He pulled it out and pointed it at the robber, who was so surprised he turned, and fled. Shrier pursued him, and outside his store fired a shot into the air.

Late last night police were looking for the frustrated gunman.

Veterans Get More Jobs in Exempt Class

Survey on Hearing Eve Shows Greater Per Cent Hired Out Of Civil Service

Veterans fare better in obtaining so-called "exempted" Federal jobs than civil service positions carrying special veterans' preferences, it was learned yesterday, on the eve of hearings before the President's committee on civil service improvement. The hearings will cover special benefits in Federal employment for former service men.

The disclosure came in the form of statistics on veterans' employment in the Federal service, compiled from Civil Service Commission records. They revealed that in 1938 not quite 20 per cent of the appointments made to all jobs carrying veterans' preferences were filled by veterans.

The number of veterans in legal posts, however, where the preferences do not apply, ranged from 23 to 36 per cent in all Cabinet departments except Commerce, which employs only three lawyers, and Agriculture and Interior, with 11 and 1[illegible] per cent, respectively, of the legal jobs filled by veterans.

Justice Reed to Preside

The hearings will begin at 9 a. m. today in the Supreme Court Building. The committee, under the chairmanship of Supreme Court Justice Reed, also will hear three executives in Federal legal positions discuss proposals for recruiting Government lawyers through competitive examinations.

The hearings were scheduled at the request of veterans' organizations following testimohy a few weeks ago before the committee urging that existing veterans preference provisions be reduced drastically.

The committee is known to favor elimination of provisions:

Placing disabled veterans who pass civil-service examinations at the top of the list of eligible candidates;

Waiving age limits for applicants in the case of veterans; and

Showshoppers Promised Pretty Yule Presents

Christmas Week One of Notable Bookings; Famous Storm-Center Returns to Hollywood; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

CHRISTMAS WEEK—if that is not looking too far ahead—will be a busy one for the segment of Washington theatergoers who like to be among the first to see first things first. That can be translated into the statement that there will be more than one important source of entertainment on tap locally, come Yule Day.

It was disclosed here yesterday, I think, that the Shuberts are bringing their musicalized "Cyrano de Bergerac" to the National Theater on Christmas night for its premiere, under the title of "The White Plume." This romantic operetta version of the famous Edmond Rostand play, in which Walter Hampden achieved one of his most memorable successes, will be in direct competition with at least one of the cinema season's most pretentious offerings. This will be the RKO-Radio production of Victor Hugo's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," filmed at a cost that runs somewhere up in the millions, with Charles Laughton starred in the title role of Quasimodo.

BELL

This is very fresh and positive in my mind because genial representatives of the RKO-Radio crew have only just this minute left the desk after having buried it deep under a multiple-layer of photographs of important scenes from the picture and enough editorial to last five years!

The first impression, after a cursory examination of all this ammunition, loried to the drama desk by S. Barrett McCormick, from New York, is that those who remember the late Lon Chaney's performance in the title role, in the prodigious silent film Universal made of the Hugo story, will encounter a vastly different interpretation of the part when they see Laughton in it. Mr. Laughton's Quasimodo, except for the hump on his back, will offer few reminders of Mr. Chaney's grotesque conception of the character.

It was impossible to detect any vestige of Lon Chaney through the back-breaking make-up he wore for the part of the deformed bell-ringer of Notre Dame. This column viewed the silent film many times in an effort to detect some sign that it really was Mr. Chaney who was all strapped up like that, with eggs where his eyes ought to be and a viciously fanged orifice where there should have been a mouth. Mr. Chaney never showed up.

Just what the impression and impact of Mr. Laughton's performance will be remains to be seen. It is highly probable that his interpretation of the pathetic figure of the cathedral will lay heaviest emphasis upon those aspects of the role to which Mr. Chaney paid least attention.

However that may be, there is a growing conviction that Christmas Day will bring the judicious showshoppers more gifts than they will find in their stockings—with one or two trifling exceptions—or on the Christmas tree.

Erich Von Stroheim, monocled arch-villain of many a First War motion picture—"The Unbeliever" was the first one I remember—yesterday returned as an actor to the Hollywood studios he departed some three years ago as a director. Von Stroheim, in the meantime, had been appearing in a considerable grist of French films, many of which have been seen on Washington screens. The notable "Grand Illusion"—spoken in three languages—was the foremost of these. Mr. Von Stroheim, Vienna-born, but an American citizen, observes laconically, "I came back to Hollywood to prove that the producer was wrong who said, three years ago, that 'as far as the movies are concerned, Von Stroheim is dead.' Somehow, I do not feel dead." The idea must have spread, for the bullet-headed, close-clipped-as-ever Erich has been signed to play the role of a cruel French officer in a picture starring England's Richard Greene and Norway's Vera Zorina. That ought to be done in three languages, too.

If it is a little extra holiday shoplifting money you are after, Loew's Capitol Theater might be a nice place, beginning next Monday night, at approximately 10 of the clock, and continuing each Monday night thereafter until further notice. I mean to say that beginning and continuing as stated, the Capitol is inaugurating a new added attraction in the form of a "Double or Nothing" radio program, based on the familiar "Dr. Quiz" formula, but with new variations.

Walter Compton, of WOL, is the lad responsible for cooking this one up, with the connivance of Division Manager Carter Barron and his executive associates. The idea is that a quiz program will be presented, at which the audience may take a whirl at answering puzzlers through a system of roving mikes. It is a progressive game, by which a considerable winning can be piled up, provided you guess right. Then comes the trick that is in it. You are given a final chance at a tough question, upon the proviso that if you answer it correctly you get double your winnings; if not, you get a lapful of nothing whatsoever. It's a fielder's choice. You can keep what you've already won—if anything—or gamble on your wits. Prizes will aggregate $100—or so I am told.

"Four Wives," Warner Brothers holiday release and a sequel to the same company's "Four Daughters," will be given a special trade showing in the Ambassador Theater next Tuesday morning at 10:30. All exhibitors in the District, Maryland and Virginia have been invited to come to Washington and preview the subject at that time.

And-You-Should-Complain Note

Two Generations of Vaudeville

CHARLES WINNINGER AND MICKEY ROONEY as they appear in the roles of the father and son troupers in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the musical comedy, "Babes in Arms," now playing a repeat F street engagement at Loew's Columbia Theater. Judy Garland is costarred with the versatile Rooney

Columbia

No babe in arms of the entertainment world is what Mickey Rooney proves himself to be in "Babes in Arms," which yesterday began a third week on F street at the Columbia Theater.

That versatile carrot-top brings much of the ginger to this musical frolic through the variety with which he infuses his work. Whether he is impersonating Clark Gable and Lionel Barrymore at one and the same time, whether he is talking over serious matters with Charles Winninger, his dad, or kicking up his heels in a minstrel-man's buck and wing, Rooney shows that he is one of the most infectious and gifted of our screen's players.

Adapted from the Rogers and Hart stage success, "Babes in Arms" is a story of vaudevillians who are passe, and their offspring, who are ambitious. To keep the homes the palmier days their parents have made and to maintain their freedom from a meddling old maid who sees no good in their joyous activities, the youngsters work up streamlined variety of their own.

Judy Garland contributes her own song and dance as Mickey's partner in the enterprise and June Preisser etches a mean portrait of the spoiled "baby star," whose present adolescence is but a prelude to further stunning glory as a screen siren.

Charles Winninger, Grace Hayes, Guy Kibbee, Margaret Hamilton and Henry Hull are the chief adult performers, and Betty Jaynes, Leni Lynn and Douglas McPhail represent the younger generation in a film that is bound to please.

Operatic Gift

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 7.

The country has been hearing plenty lately about the world's greatest cowboy star, Gene Autry. But I don't think many of you have heard much of Gene's private life. His pretty brown-haired wife, Ina, was going to school in Springfield, Mo., when Gene met and fell in love with her. And here's something that seems impossible to reconcile with that rootin' tootin' singing star. Gene's and Ina's bedroom is done in peach color, soft and feminine, with beds covered in peach satin. But it was her idea, not his—he'd rather have a bed in his harness room than take the kidding that goes with the satin. But the exterior of their ranch house, which is set under towering eucalyptus trees, is surrounded with rustic fences, winding brick walks—and there's an old well to remind Gene of his birthplace—a log cabin back in the hills of Grayson County, Tex. And his favorite food is baked ham, boiled army beans and buttermilk. He's a swell guy.

HOPPER

Wallace Beery paid $6,000 for a bus especially equipped for hunting trips. After using it twice, he gave it to the McKinley School for a bus. One of the first expeditions the bus made was to visit Wally at Sherwood Lake, where he is playing in "Arouse and Beware." Forty picked boys made their first visit to a motion picture set—and if you think Wally Beery isn't their hero, then you don't know boys and you don't know Beery.

Just before Alexander Korda left he was taking a walk with his wife, Merle Oberon, on the Warner lot, when they dropped in on the "Virginia City" set. Mike Curtiz caught one look at his fellow Hungarian and rushed over to him, and kissed him on both cheeks. Mike will never hear the end of that from the cowboys who know the ace-director as one of the roughest hombres in the business . . . I was interested in hearing that Stanton Griffis, big Paramount executive, said that in his opinion there's no doubt that the Neely bill, which Hollywood has fought so long, will go through. This means the end of block booking and double features. But Mr. Griffis doesn't think it will have a detrimental effect on the movies at all, which gave me quite a lift.

Speaking of a lift, I just got a letter from the dancing Hal Le Roys telling me their neighbor in Hackensack, N. J., Jessie Simpson, is going to be married to James Stewart (not the actor) on Friday, January 19. Now off-hand this might not mean a thing to you—because Jessie Simpson isn't what we call a big name. Yet she's quite a symbol, and though I've never met her the news of her marriage is a bright spot. Jessie Simpson was once one of the most photographed models in the country, but through a train accident in 1937 both legs had to be amputated. Unlike most of us, she refused to be defeated. And after many mo ths she learned to walk on artificial legs, even took walks for exercise. Opened her own beauty parlor, which prospered. Now on January 19, she'll marry.

The same sort of courage sent such a thrill up your spine when you read of the heroism of an airplane hostess named Nellie Granger who, hurt in a crash, nevertheless ran for help many miles away so that those who survived the crash could be given medical attention. This was in 1936, and her heroism has long been forgotten except by those who still live because Miss Granger was true-blue to her uniform . . . Amelia Earhart, Ruth Nichols and Ruth Elder proved that courage isn't confined to the male sex.

Gertrude Ederle licked the English Channel . . . Nellie Revell showed another kind of spunk when she wrote stories for years while hanging from chains rigging above her bed—a broken back couldn't break her spirit. Florence Nightingale, Edith Cavell both wrote history. Seems to me a woman named Joan of Arc did all right by her sex, too, long before we won the right to vote. And now our women are turning their efforts trying to prevent our going to war. I've been criticized by many friends for even mentioning this—they tell me it has no place in a movie column. They're right, of course, but I was a mother long before I was a columnist. And I'd sacrifice that and everything else if I thought any words of mine could help keep us out of war.

Looks like Cecil DeMille has a "Scarlett O'Hara" search on his hands for "Northwest Mounted Police" and that organization (in the picture, at least) will have to "get their woman" . . . She's "Loupetta" (which means little wolf), a half-breed French and Indian girl. Well, that sounds like a big order, even for Cecil B. DeMille. But don't be too surprised if she turns out to be Marlene Dietrich—a new discovery . . . Howard Hughes' new discovery may turn out to be Margaret Marlo from Max Reinhardt's workshop. She's had no picture experience whatever, and his first story has a war background.

Ex-Sheriff Returns $3,910 to County For 'Excess Fees'

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 7.—It was a pleasant surprise for the board of county commissioners when former Sheriff Max C. Malott, who retired a year ago, walked into the county's office yesterday and presented the commissioners with a check for $3,910.94. The amount represented excess fees he had collected since he left office, the first time any sheriff had paid these fees after leaving office. Mr. Malott also sent a check for $312.28 to the State as its share of the excess fees.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 7.

ERROR: Mayor LaGuardia interviewed a number of people he believed qualified to be director of the new Information Center which the city is sponsoring . . . Ethel Aaron was one of those called to the Mayor's office. Fiorello asked her where the Museum of the American Indian is located . . . "Broadway and 155th street," was the reply. . . . "Haw!" said the Mayor, triumphantly, "You're miles out. It's in The Bronx" . . . Miss Aaron's answer, however, was correct. "But I didn't dare argue with LaGuardia," she explained later. "He might have moved it when no one was looking."

PRIZE: Last week-end the customers at Reuben's participated in the weekly drawing for prizes . . . A card bearing the name "T. Corcoran" was drawn as the winner of six pairs of ladies' hose. The head waiter approached the table of the winner—a table occupied by a gentleman and a lady. "Whose name is Corcoran?" the waiter asked . . . "This lady is Miss Corcoran," the man informed. . . . But the lady's name was not Corcoran. Her escort, who disclaimed—for himself—the prize of six pairs of ladies' hose, was Tommy Corcoran of the White House staff.

DANCE: During the rehearsals of "Swingin' the Dream" Agnes de Mille, the dance director, encountered difficulty in one of the jitterbug numbers . . . She summoned her agent, who watched the rehearsal for the next two hours and then departed with a reminder: "Let me know if anything goes right."

SWANK: Geraldine Spreckels of the sugar family has been seeking an apartment, and yesterday found the one she felt was most suitable. . . . It was an eight-room penthouse in the Murray Hill sector, complete with bar, ample terraces and special sun decks. Then she sent her friend, Randy Burke, to inspect it before signing the lease . . . "This is all very nice," Burke told the renting agent, in canceling the deal, "but the Murray Hill section is not fashionable enough for Miss Spreckels" . . . Geraldine Spreckels opens tonight in the new Buddy de Sylva show. Her role is practically a walk-on.

REUNION: Charles Bedeaux, jr., has secured his passport and visa and will embark on the Clipper this week . . . He will fly to Europe to assist John Ringling North, the circus man, in signing new talent for the Ringling show . . . In France he will be reunited with his father, at whose villa the Duke and Duchess of Windsor lived. That villa now has been converted into French staff headquarters.

ENTERPRISE: Greenwich Village's new cafe, the Cinderella Club, offers a bottle of champagne each night to the lady whose foot is the smallest . . . Tommy Manville escorted a young lady into the club, but was notified that his new girl was ineligible . . . Tommy had brought a midget.

CHATTER: Ursula Parrott has completed her first play. Her former husband, John Wildberg, is agenting it. The Group Theater now is considering it . . . While Lepke is being tried in the Federal Court here, his associate, Gurrah, has been isolated at the penitentiary in Atlanta. He is not permitted to send or receive mail, and demands an investigation . . . The first fan letter Moss Hart's father received upon the publication of his first song, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," was from another song writer, Cole Porter.

AT TIME BUILDING the talk is of a new paper, which Henry Luce may publish, similar to the proposed P. M., but reaching the stands first . . . Larry Hart is amazed that Universal bought "Boys From Syracuse," because the plot on which it is based, Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors," is in the public domain. Jimmy Savo expects to appear in the movie.

ENTERPRISE: Jack Kirkland, who dramatized Erskine Caldwell's "Tobacco Road," is surprised at the reports that Darryl Zanuck will buy the movie rights . . . Kirkland wants $300,000 for those rights. "If 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois' got $250,000, my play is worth more," he states. "Right now Jeeter Lester is more important than Lincoln" . . . Kirkland met Zanuck only once—seven years ago at a cocktail party in London. They had a fight then—and Zanuck cracked Kirkland's nose. Jack had to wait for that crack to heal before he could continue writing the play on which he then was working—the play which became "Tobacco Road."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 7 (INS).—Charlie McCarthy checks into the hospital any day now for a complicated eye operation so his fascinating orbs will move up and down and sideways. Charlie needs all this new expression because next year she's going into the role of his life. Universal is going to produce "The Life of Edgar Bergen," with McCarthy, of course, giving one of his sterling "wooden" performances in support.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The film will highlight the way Edgar worked his way through college with Charlie on his knee; the time he made his professional debut without getting a single laugh—and didn't find out until days later that the audience didn't speak English. And then there'll be the heart-touching sequence when Bergen almost abandoned Charlie for life while trying to get a job as a "gag" writer in Hollywood. I can just see the tears in Charlie's new eyes when they film that touching moment.

Fans who wrote me they were disappointed when Nelson Eddy didn't get "The Desert Song" can cheer up. M-G-M has just bought the equally popular "Vagabond King" from Paramount for Nelson as a solo starring venture. According to M-G-M Jeanette MacDonald won't be in it, because the femme singing role is not strong enough. Maybe they've forgotten that Jeanette and Dennis King made the Rudolf Friml operetta in 1930 for Para—but Jeanette wasn't as big a star then as she is now. Last year Paramount remade it, minus the tunes, with Ronald Colman starring.

The studios are certainly on a borrowing spree trading players back and forth. Wayne Morris is the latest to go visiting, checking in on the Universal lot from Warner Brothers for "The Devil Is Yellow." Margaret Lindsay and William Gargan have already been announced for this mystery melodrama by Frederick Davis. Isn't the word "devil" cropping up in a lot of titles lately? Ty Power and Dorothy Lamour are doing "Dance With the Devil" and Republic has a little number, "The Devil Sees it Through."

Snapshots of Hollywood and Pittsburgh collected at random: Lee Bowman's latest heart interest is Irina Baronova, who, they say, is a sensation in "Florian;" every time we walk into the William Penn Hotel the orchestra gives us "California, Here I Come," and after the lavish hospitality given us I shouldn't say it makes us homesick—but it does; June Preisser, who is the darling of the college kids, taught 150 guests the La Conga—and how she dances it; Joy Hodges and Arleen Whelan were guests of the Pittsburgh Symphony between shows, while Susan Hayward had pictures taken with some of the big bridge experts who are in town. Ely Culbertson, who once played at my home with Bebe Daniels, Joseph Schenck and Chico Marx, is here for the big tournament.

Went to the Sun-Telegraph, the Pittsburgh paper that carries my column, to visit Royal Daniels and Harrry Bitner. Billy Seymour is taking Lupe Velez places in Hollywood. Billy Wilkerson is titling his swank new Hollywood night spot "Cerpo's." Jimmy Stewart and Marlene Dietrich talking across tables to Kay Francis and Louis Bromfield at the Beverly Derby. Just heard that my favorite Hollywood waiter, Benny Massey, is the proud papa of a baby boy. The biggest advance sale of tickets ever known in Los Angeles has been reported for "Gone With the Wind," which opens at the Carthay Circle December 28. Joe E. Brown in the hospital in a room next to his little daughter, as result of automobile accident.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

State Awards Fairfax County Road Contract

Warrenton Firm Gets $93,410 Job Near Falls Church

Special Dispatch to The Post

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7.—The State Highway Commission announced today the award of a Fairfax County road improvement contract. The Blackwell Engineering and Construction Co. of Warrenton was given the work on a low bid of $93,410. The job consists of waterbound macadam surface treatment of 2.87 miles on Route 7, near Falls Church.

Three other contracts were awarded on the basis of low bids received November 30:

Route 250, Nelson and Albemarle Counties, relocation of the highway for a distance of 1.9 miles and a Chesapeake & Ohio Railway underpass, Walters & Prater, Morristown, Tenn., $186,029.50.

Route 141, Dinwiddie County, 0.41 mile overpass and approaches at the Seaboard Air Line Railway at Dinwiddie, Spear-Jones & Co., Inc., Dover, Del., $17,449.93.

Route 460, Dinwiddie County, 10.7 miles of soil surface treatment near Ritchie's store, W. M. McIntosh, Inc., Richmond, $90,103.41.

The commission rejected all bids for the construction of a proposed 947-foot bridge over the Dan River at Schoolfield on the ground that they were too high. The lowest proposal totaled $151,178.96.

Christmas Desserts Popular With Recipe Contributors

The happy expression of Mrs. Lyne (right), winner of first prize in The Post recipe contest, may be due to her having planned fruit cakes on her Christmas list as a sure-fire recipe for avoiding Santa Claus blues. Evidently she has baked her cakes, dressed them in cellophane, holly and gay ribbons and is now sitting back enjoying her favorite book

Recipe Contest

These Sweets May Be Wrapped as Presents

By the Post Food Editor.

HOLIDAY DESSERTS, such as fruit cake, plum, prune and suet puddings, are as much a part of the holidays as bright holly wreaths or glistening Christmas trees. Culinary artistry such as displayed by The Post recipe contestants was practically unlimited in its scope. If the hundreds of recipes submitted may be used as a measuring stick,

Canaan Sweetmeat

Mrs. J. J. Lyne, Shenandoah Junction, W. Va., wins the first award of $3 with her excellent recipe for an unusual fruit cake that she calls Promised Land Cake. Mrs. Lyne writes that this recipe is one that she has long used for her Christmas cakes and has always had fine results. Mrs. Lyne's recipe follows:

Promised Land Cake

Cream 1-3 pound of butter and 1 pound sugar and blend well. Add 6 eggs, one at a time, and beat well after the addition of each. Chop ¼ pound each of pecan, hickory, almond and walnut meats, and ¼ pound each of assorted fruits as follows: orange, grapefruit and lemon peel; cherries, pineapple, citron, dates and figs. Ddedge with flour. Add 2 teaspoons nutmeg to 1 pound sifted flour. Add fruits and nuts to batter; then the flour and ½ glass wine or brandy alternately. Blend well. Place in well greased and floured tube cake pan. Steam for 3 hours; then place in slow oven, 275 degrees, and bake for 1½ hours, until the top of the cake has browned. Ripen in cloth dipped in wine or brandy and place in a tightly covered container for several weeks.

Prune Goes Hi-Hat

A delightfully rich and nourishing dessert which may be used at the holiday season is the Prune Shortcake as made by Mrs. Andrew G. Weaver, 3914 Fifth street northwest. It is not as heavy a concoction as the usual pudding but is equally delicious. It has further merit in that it can be made hours ahead of time and be stored in the refrigerator, which is a thing to be considered at the holiday season. Mrs. Weaver wins an award of $2 for her recipe which is as follows:

Mrs. Weaver

Prune Short Cake

Have ready one 2-layer sponge cake, about 8 inches square. Trim crusts from sponge cake and spread about ½ inch layer of prune mixture, then ½ inch layer of stiffly whipped cream, using ½ pint whipping cream. Repeat on the second layer, then use remaining cream as icing for all sides of the cake. Store in refrigerator for several hours to ripen in flavor. To make the filling, use 2 cups prune pulp, either canned or home-prepared; cook the pulp with 1 cup sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon each of lemon and almond flavoring. Cook in saucepan over slow heat until thick as jam. Set aside until cold. Serves 6 to 8.

Celestial Finale

The refrigerator competes with the range to make a holiday dessert according to the fancy of Mrs. Hilda Urban, 308 Seventh street northwest. Mrs. Urban wins a $1 award with her Heavenly Frozen Fruit Cake. All who make a dessert from this recipe will agree that "heavenly" is the correct word with which to describe it. The recipe follows:

Mrs. Urban

Heavenly Frozen Fruit Cake

Rinse and dry 1½ cups sliced seedless raisins. Slice fruits and peels with scissors, using 1 cup candied cherries, quartered; 1-3 cup each of minced lemon and orange peel and ¾ cup minced citron. Add 1½ cups prune plup puree and 1 cup each of apricot pulp puree, orange juice, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg. Let stand 2 hours to blend. Soak 4 tablespoons granulated gelatin in 6 tablespoons cold water for 5 minutes. Heat the fruit mixture to boiling point, remove from heat and disolve softened gelatin evenly throughout hot mixture. Cool and add 1 tablespoon brandy. Whip 3 cups heavy cream to custard consistency and fold into chilled fruit mixture. Sprinkle 1 cup minced walnuts evenly over bottom of 10-inch tube pan which has previously been oiled with tissue. Pour in cream mixture. Set in refrigerator for 12 hours, without moving. Unmold on lace or silver lace paper doily and top with spray of holly. To serve, slice in wedges, top each with red tinted star of whipped cream or whole candied cherry. Serves 20.

Edible Tree

Mrs. E. E. Smith, 686 Park avenue, Baltimore, has long been a contributor to The Post recipe contests. Her recipe for an edible Christmas tree is as unusual as it is delicious. For this novel dessert, Mrs. Smith wins a $1 award. The following is her winning recipe:

Mrs. Smith

Christmas Tree Cake

Put 3 egg yolks and 3 whole eggs in a bowl and beat until thick, then add 1½ cups sugar gradually while beating constantly. Sift 3 cups flour and 4 teaspoons baking powder together and sift again and add alternately with ¾ cup milk to first mixture and then add ½ cup melted butter. Beat well and add ½ teaspoon flavoring extract. Divide into 3 portions. To one portion add red coloring, to another add 1 square melted chocolate and 2 tablespoons milk, leaving third portion the plain batter. Put alternate spoonfuls of cake mixture into a well-greased sheet pan measuring 10 by 15 inches. Bake 25 to 30 minutes in moderate oven at 350 degrees. When done remove from pan and let cool. Cut cake into 5 circles that are 6, 5, 4, 3 and 2 inches in diameter. Use the largest circle for the bottom layer and the smallest for the top. Put together with thick strawberry jam between layers. Since each circle is smaller than the one below, do not let jam cover entire lower layer of cake. Cover whole cake with green frosting.

Ye Old England

Mrs. Smith

Grandmother's Suet Pudding

Beat 2 eggs until light. Add 1 cup brown sugar (packed firm) but white sugar may be used if preferred. Add 1 cup (½ pound) suet, chopped fine. Mix well. Sift together 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon powdered ginger and 1 teaspoon cinnamon, and ½ teaspoon allspice. Add 1 cup dark molasses to first mixture alternately with 1 cup sour or thick buttermilk (buttermilk makes a richer, moister pudding). Mix in 1 cup seedless raisins, 1 cup dates, stoned and cut fine, which have been shaken with flour, so they will not settle to bottom. Add 1 teaspoon brandy if desired. Fill 2 well-buttered and flowered pudding molds or No. 1 coffee cans, 2-3 full. Buttered paper or cloths should be tied on tightly or lids used which fit snugly. Place on steamer rack and steam over boiling water for 2¾ to 3 hours. If individual molds are used, use 12 small tin aluminum or baking powder cans for molds and steam for only 1¼ hours.

Entrecote Champennoise, Featured at L'Escargot in Champs Elysees Atmosphere

Distinctive recipes of eating places about Washington are given weekly in this column.

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

Martha Ellyn

THE FRENCH have an inborn appreciation of good food and an almost reverent attitude toward it. To them, eating, like love, is not a mere physical function, but intellectual and esthetic as well. There is always an unfailing sense of balance and proportion and delicacy of touch in French cookery.

An exponent of the French cuisine at its best is L'Escargot on Connecticut avenue, owned by Mme. Lily Santmyers. Here is re-created the atmosphere of Parisian restaurants by means of long tables and murals of Parisian scenes, such as Le Triomphe and La Rotonde of the Champs Elysees. The bright colored wine advertisements on the walls are evidence of the French idea that "a meal without wine is a day without sunshine." Marcel Colin, a Parisian, well-known in Washington for his murals, decorated L'Escargot. In the summer, delectable French food may be enjoyed in an out-of-door garden. And very soon a supper dancing room will be opened—the LaSalle Versaille—featuring a continental orchestra in continental atmosphere.

Much of the success of L'Escargot is due to the efforts of Jack Varela, manager of the restaurant, and genial Leo, the maitre d'hotel. But the honors for the delicious food served go to Chef Aime Roger, born in Rheims. Before coming to Washington Chef Aime presided over the food at the Ritz Carlton and the Benjamin Franklin, Philadelphia and at the Traymore at Atlantic City. Chef Aime says that in France a chef must pay to learn to cook, but in America the chef is paid to do the cooking.

To choose some representative dishes in the repertory of French cookery is a formidable task, something like finding a needle in a bundle of hay. But here is a French menu chosen from the many excellent dishes offered at L'Escargot.

French Dinner Menu

Hors d'Oeuvre a la Parisienne
Soupe a L'Oignon
(Onion Soup)
Pommes Rissoles Carrots Vichey
(Potatoes Browned) (Buttered Carrots)
Salade de Saison
(Mixed Green Salad, French Dressing)
Entrecote Champennoise
(Sirloin Steak, Garnished, and Bordelaise Sauce)
Nuits St. George
(Red Burgundy)
French Bread
Baba au Rhum Demi Tasse

The following is the recipe for the piece de resistance of the above menu—Entrecote Champennoise, as given by Chef Aime.

Entrecote Champennoise

To serve three people buy a sirloin steak of approximately 36 ounces. Dip in cooking oil, and broil according to degree of doneness desired. Garnish with stuffed mushrooms. To make stuffing, chop some mushrooms, add parsley, garlic and salt and stuff large mushroom caps. Put under the broiler after the sauce has been poured over and broil for about 2 minutes. Broil halves of tomatoes, sprinkled with garlic, parsley and butter, and garnish the steak with them.

125 Say Farewell to Frank Morrison

FRANK MORRISON WILLIAM GREEN

Frank Morrison, 80, retiring secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, was given a testimonial dinner last night, did a round of dancing and was told by William Green, president, that he had not an enemy in the whole federation. Then Morrison, who wore a flaming carnation in his lapel, said that he loked back on his 43 years of service with gladness; that he remembered the federation had only 256,000 members when he became secretary; that he wanted to be in the service when a million members were realized. More than 125 employes in the A. F. of L. headquarters tendered the party, in the Willard Hotel. Irving Bucklin was master of ceremonies

Citizens Form Unit to Guide Yule Giving

Plan to Safeguard Self-Respect of Aid Recipients in D. C.

A new citizens Christmas committee to "guide Christmas giving" was formed yesterday at a meeting at 701 M street northwest under auspices of the Washington Council of Social Agencies.

Its theme "Wise as Well as Generous Giving," the committee decided it would stress "not only acute need, but the proper approach in giving help." This, it was explained, would assure everything possible being done to guard the self-respect and privacy of families receiving aid.

Instead of baskets of food and other bulky gifts, funds will be given to needy families, so they might do their own Christmas shopping. The committee emphasized the care which will be exercised in ascertaining the actual need of recipients of this help and pointed out that 6,000 persons already have been certified to the council for whom there are no WPA jobs.

"This knowledge," it was explained, "should discourage begging letters and last-minute appeals."

Briton Says Island Will Fight Until the World Has Security

London Educator One of Three Speakers On Allied War Aims at Forum Of George Washington University

Great Britain will not "lay down her arms until she has absolute security, until she has assurance that the people of Europe may live their own lives untroubled," Dr. Brinley Thomas, of the University of London, told the Student Council Forum of George Washington University last night. He was one of three speakers on "The War Aims of the Allies."

Others were Count Anthony Tarnawski, of the Polish Embassy, and Leon Dostert, acting chairman of the department of modern languages at Georgetown University. They were questioned by a panel consisting of Dr. Warren Reed West, George Pugh and John Daugherty, and answered questions from the floor.

Count Tarnawski, declaring "Poland is not a creation of Versailles," said the actual aggression practiced on his country "is not only Hitlerism, but is the old Prussian imperialism which has precipitated many wars." Poland, he said, "will never accept the present condition" and is simply "trying for her rightful place."

Asked from the floor why Poland did not go to the aid of her treaty ally, Czecho-Slovakia, instead of taking part of that dismembered nation for herself, he said Poland only took what was taken forcibly from her while she was fighting off the threat of bolshevism to the western world. Further, he pointed out, "Poland could not battle Germany alone and perhaps bring on a World War when she saw the Czechs would not fight."

Dostert, reminding his audience that the Treaty of Versailles has been "the one apparently inexhaustible source of evil" in the postwar world, pointed to numerous instances in which its provisions were lightened voluntarily by the Allies and said "many of its 440 articles became a dead letter."

4 Killed, 2 Hurt In Auto-Rail Crash

Canonsburg, Pa., Dec. 7 (AP).—Four were killed and two critically injured tonight while returning home from a prayer meeting, their automobile being struck and demolished by a Pennsylvania freight engine near McDonald, Pa.

The dead were Mrs. Charles Dickinson, Mrs. Elizabeth Hookey, Thomas Lewis and Charles A. Hainaut, jr., all of McDonald.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hainaut were brought to a hospital here unconscious. F1

Cook's Library

By MARTHA ELLYN

"DELECTABLE DINNERS" by Anna J. Peterson and Nena Wilson Badenoch, is a practical cook book for modern homemakers. Planning meals becomes a pleasure and preparing them not an unpredictable series of chance shots but an absolute certainty as to results when the instructions in this book are followed. The meals in this manual are planned for the average family so that young or old may participate in eating them. This is not a general cook book of individual recipes. It undertakes to do much more: it not only explains and teaches, but plans recipes into menus to answer that insistent question, "What shall we have for dinner?"

The menus are planned for four courses. They may be simplified according to individual choice by omitting soup, bread or potato, salad or dessert. The menu charts preceding each section show at a glance the food and flavor combinations. The recipes are measured for serving six persons. Individual recipes are readily available through the classified index. The instructions are complete, including time and temperature. The publishers are E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc. Price $2.50.

"HOW'LL YOU HAVE YOUR EGGS?" by Ann Fraser, a Washingtonian, is a cooking manual of 200 new recipes, the result of many years of experimentation. All recipes are original. Cooking has been Ann Fraser's career and eggs have been her hobby. She has spent 40 years in kitchens, both in the United States and abroad, devising new ways of making tempting and appetizing egg dishes. The author has given many new and tempting recipes for cooking and serving eggs—the greatest single item in our national diet. If you like eggs, this simple, easy-to-follow cookbook will bring new delights, and if you don't like eggs, you will soon if you try some of these appetizing dishes. There are recipes for any taste, any meal, any occasion. The cloth cover is washable and greaseproof. The type is very clear and readable and the topography as modern as the most up-to-date kitchen equipment. The publisher is Loker Raley. Price, $1.

"THE SOUTH AMERICAN COOK BOOK," by Cora, Rose and Bob Brown, is a unique cook book giving the cream of South American and Latin American dishes, from the Rio Grande to Tierra del Fuego. The authors have spent years in South and Central America, Mexico and the Caribbean learning the native cooking; they have absorbed lore about the strange roots and vegetables which flavor some of the dishes given; and particularly, they have learned how to substitute American garden vegetables for the exotic tropical fruits and vegetables not available in the United States. Besides coverning food from soups to nuts, food beverages, alcoholic drinks, notes on National cuisines and table decorations are given. The publishers are Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc. The price is $2.50.

Menus Are Too Standardized

There is a growing tendency against the standardization of breakfast menus now-a-days. In fact, the more variety that can be achieved in breakfast menus, the more likely breakfast is to become an important meal in the day.

Among meats for breakfast, there is considerable variety. Any meats which are quickly prepared are suitable choices. Bacon and ham are popular favorites because their smoky flavor is very effective in whetting that early morning appetite. Canadian style bacon, little link sausages or sausage patties, broiled or panbroiled ground beef patties, lamb patties, and sweetbread crisps are other suggestions for meats to serve for the hearty and satisfying breakfast.

Creamed meat with toast or baking powder biscuits makes a good breakfast dish. Any kind of already cooked meat may be used for this. Creamed ham is very good, especially when served on toast.

Mother and 2 Sons, All Clerics, Help Ordain Another of Family

Rev. Paul Wesley Yinger, Whose Father Also Was a Clergyman, Installed as Pastor Of Cleveland Park Congregational Church

Last night was a royal occasion for the preaching Yinger family, as a mother and two sons—all three ministers—helped to ordain another son and brother.

Flying here from her home in Lansing, Mich., the Rev. Mrs. Emma Yinger, gray-haired widow of a clergyman, read the Scripture at induction rites for the Rev. Paul Wesley Yinger, new pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, Thirty-fourth and Lowell streets northwest.

Garbed in black clerical robes, she marched in the opening procession with white-gowned singers and other participating clerics, and then looked on proudly from the platform as the Rev. G. Dempter Yinger offered the invocation.

Brother Gives Charge

Pastor of the First Methodist Church, Albion, Mich., that son expressed Divine thanks for the loving home in which we have been nurtured, and the father whose spirit is still with us."

Later in the service, the Rev. Clement B. Yinger, of Haverhill, Mass., gave the charge to his brother; the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, this city, offered the prayer of ordination and installation, and Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, delivered the charge to the church.

The newly ordained minister, who gave the benediction, received the "right hand of fellowship" from Dr. D. Butler Pratt, former dean of the school of religion, Howard University.

Bringing the principal message at the rites, held in the Cleveland Park Church auditorium, was Dr. David E. Roberts, dean of students at Union Theological Seminary, New York, of which the candidate is a recent graduate. The Rev. Mr. Yinger was called to the local post on October 7.

In the audience were representatives of 13 local and nearby Congregational churches, whose ministerial and lay leaders earlier in the day constituted an ecclesiastical council which examined the candidate.

William Carl Ruediger presided at the ordination dinner, when greetings were brought to the Rev. and Mrs. Paul W. Yinger by George B. Kennedy, on behalf of the Cleveland Park Church; from G. H. Collingwood, Congregationalists of Washington; Mrs. David E. Brown, the Middle Atlantic Congregational Conference, and the Rev. G. Dempster Yinger, "from good and friendly people everywhere."

The Rev. Homer Yinger, another brother, of Minneapolis, was unable to attend.

Communist Faces Loss of Citizenship

San Francisco, Dec. 7 (AP).—A former Communist testified at the citizenship trial of William Schneiderman today the party taught its members ...at capitalistic governments should be overthrown and abolished by force and violence.

The witness was Miles G. Humphries, former union business representative, now unemployed, who testified he joined the Communist Party in 1924, went to Russia in 1926 on an eight-month trip, but had not paid dues since 1936.

The Government filed the civil action against Schneiderman, State secretary of the Communist Party, in an effort to prove that by belonging to the Communist Party at the time he was naturalized in 1927, he could not uphold the Constitution of the United States.

United States Attorney Frank Hennessy said Schneiderman concealed the fact he was a Communist when he became a citizen.

Sugar Discussed At White House

By the Associated Press

Some observers said yesterday the possibility of a change in the Administration's sugar policies, after a White House conference participated in by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Assistant Secretary of State Welles.

In some quarters, it was said that a proposal to lower the import duty on Cuban sugar had been discussed. Since President Roosevelt suspended marketing and import quotas on sugar when consumer prices advanced sharply in September, imports of sugar from Cuba have declined.

Under provisions of the Cuban-American trade agreement, the duty was automatically raised from 90 cents to $1.50 per 100 pounds when the quotas were suspended. The higher duty has been blamed for the reduction in imports.

Other quarters suggested sugar control policies for the 1940 crop was discussed.

Hotelmen Vote To Pay Finlands Debt Installment

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 7 (AP).—New Jersey hotel men voted today to raise an amount equal to Finland's post-war debt payment—approximately $234,000—and present it to the Finns.

The executive committee of the New Jersey State Hotel Association termed as "dangerous to our neutrality program" President's proposal to remit the Finnish payment, which is due ecember 15.

Instead, the hotel men suggested that the payment be accepted, and an equal amount raised through voluntary contributions be forwarded to the Finnish Embassy at Washington.

Bennett E. Tousley, association president who made the suggestion at a meeting, proposed that donations be limited to $1 per person. He expressed hope the entire amount could be raised in New Jersey, but invited the cooperation of hotel men throughout the Nation.

Canadian Woman Bears Fourth Set Of Girl-Boy Twins

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 7 (Canadian Press).—The birth to Mrs. Jack Dye, 32, of four consecutive sets of girl-boy twins was described by a physician today as a medical phenomenon apparently unequalled in Canadian medical notes.

The eight children, born in a five-year period, are alive and well.

Shopping for Yule Tree Requires Special Technique

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IF YOU'RE a waiter-till-the-last-minute, far be it from us to try to reform you, at least in time for Christmas. But better do a little thinking about your tree and Christmas before hand, unless you want to come dragging home on Christmas Eve with scrawny boughs that will lose all their needles before New Year's, when all self-respecting Christmas greens should cling to their glory till Twelfth Night. Here are some things to know about Christmas greens when a-shopping you go . . . or are you one of the lucky few who really can go to the woods and chop your own?

Fir and spruce are the most usual types of Christmas trees, but they shed their needles sooner than a noble pine which makes the most beautiful Christmas tree of all because it's fuller looking. Arbor vitae and cedar are lovely for Christmas trees and are more commonly used in the South.

Novelty Lends Charm

But for wreaths, garlands and other decorations, it's more interesting to try to vary the usual evergreen assortment with charming less-familiar kinds. Hemlock and juniper, for instance, boxwood, California huckleberry, ivy, laurel and sumac can be interestingly used, especially if you entwine them with unexpected berries and fruits, either Della Robbia fashion or in a modern impudent way.

And don't forget the versatility of pine cones, acorns and the likes that you pick up in the woods, or shells and burrs from the shore. Used in natural color or gilded or silvered they are attractive and Christmasy.

Heat the pine cones in the oven before using them—that makes them a grand glossy brown and gets rid of the stickiness. Remember that English holly is brighter and more festive than the native variety, and it is grown here in this country, too.

Freshness Important

Freshness is of first importance in choosing evergreens—and try to have some humidity in the rooms in which they're to be kept. And, of course, there are some safety rules that should be reviewed before the holiday decorations actually go up. Have no lighted candles on the tree, come what may. They may look romantic but they're a too risky hazard.

And count cotton out as decoration, either on or under the tree or as whiskers for Santa, because it's too inflammable. Watch the electric load on each circuit, and beware of strong lights near the wall, tree or any inflammable ornaments. Get insulated staples for stringing up electric wires and buy standard tested tree lights. Remember that candles burning too near a mirror may crack it.

Missouri Reports of Mrs. Stark's Charm Found No Exaggeration

Governor's Wife, Straightforward and Unassuming, Has Dignity Without Being Stuffy and Is Not Afraid to Have Opinions

By Hope Ridings Miller,

IT'S RARELY difficult to figure out why popular people—are.

Before yesterday, I had taken with more than a generous grain of salt all this enthusiasm sweeping eastward from Missouri about beloved Mrs. Lloyd C. Stark, wife of the governor. After a brief interview shortly after she and her husband arrived in Washington, I could easily understand why her name is coming to the fore in the official wives' gallery of 1940.

MRS. STARK

Now, I'm not nominating the next White House chatelaine; nor am I "promoting" a hostess whose husband may be a Senator from Missouri. I'm merely pointing out that Mrs. Lloyd C. Stark is the type of woman who would go over well in Washington. And here's why:

She's straightforward, unassuming, and completely lacking both in "side" and that quality of coyness characterizing so many women whose husbands are in public life.

She's not afraid to have an opinion, and to express it, but she cleverly sidetracks "dangerous" topics. ("Is there much fanfare for a third Presidential term around Missouri?" I asked. "Well," she replied thoughtfully, "the subject is being widely discussed.")

She has charm that you feel isn't turned on especially for the occasion. She has dignity without being stuffy about it; and she has a variety of interests that range all the way from the garden at her back door in Jefferson City, Mo., to the war in Europe and its effect on America.

She talks easily, but is no chatterbox; and she apparently can discuss anything objectively, except Stark's Delicious apples, a basket of which centered the table in the Mayflower suite. "They're very good," she said. "We brought those along to last us during the whole trip. Couldn't be without them, you know," she added with a twinkle.

She is handsome, rather than pretty; parts her dark hair in the middle, combs it softly to a knot in the back for daytime and into a coronet for evening. She is fashionably slim, but I have the impression diet lists are not responsible. The simply cut cerise crepe frock she had on yesterday set off her vivid coloring and contrasted becomingly with her turquoise accessories.

Says She's "Not a Joiner"

She admits she's not "a joiner" in the sense of adding her name to every club list that makes the rounds. "If I can't find time to work in an organization, I don't go in," was the way she put it; but she has devoted much time to Junior League and Girls' Scouts activity, and she belongs to a number of garden clubs.

There's a special reason for her interest in the later. Horticulture, once a hobby, became much more than that later; and before her marriage in 1931, she completed a three-year couse at the Missouri Botanical Gardens. A friend of "horticultural inclinations" was responsible for her meeting the general manager of Stark Brothers Nursery in Louisiana, Mo.—the man who was to become Governor of Missouri. Incidentally, she's a native of that State, and is the former Miss Katherine LeMoine Perkins, of St. Louis, daughter of the late Col. A. T. Perkins, railroad man and banker.

Her small daughters, Mollie, "who will be 5 next week," and Katherine, who has just turned 4, take up a good bit of her time and with her husband, comprise her "most absorbing current interests." Mollie, by the way, was named for the wife of Gen. John Stark, hero of a Revolutionary battle, who encouraged his men with the famous remark, "We'll lick the Redcoats today, or Mollie Stark's a widow."

Full Calendar For Capital Visit

Coming to Washington primarily for the round of Gridiron festivities, Gov. and Mrs. Stark will be feted right and left during their visit. Last night they were guests of Secretary of War ad Mrs. Harry Woodring at a small dinner at the Occidental. Tonight they will attend the dinner to be given by Justice and Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister at their Alexandria home; and on Sunday afternoon, they will be at the Raymond Clapper's tea at the Willard. Outstanding events on their Washington calendar are, of course, the Gridiron Dinner—on the Governor's schedule; and the White House "Widiron" party—on Mrs. Stark's.

Yesterday afternoon, they attended the large tea and cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Duke Shoop. Notables, local and from out of town, were a dime a dozen at this event, which originally was planned as a small affair and drew around 150 guests before it was over.

Guest of honor was Commodore A. B. Randall, of the United States Lines; and other "big names" on hand included former Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, and scores of local celebrities.

Generally assisting the hostess were Mrs. James L. Wright and Mrs. Jay Hayden, while those who took their turns at the tea table were Mrs. Junior Owens, Mrs. Edwin W. Gableman, Mrs. Walker Buel and Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

Underwood & Underwood

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Parker photographed as they arrived at Washington Airport yesterday morning en route to Stratford, Westmoreland County, Va., birthplace of Robert E. Lee, where they were married yesterday afternoon. The bride, the former Lee Montgomery, is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. John Carter Montgomery, of New York, and the niece of Gen. John Harbord, chairman of the Radio Corporation of America. The bride's grandfather was Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, of Confederate fame. Mr. Parker, who is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Parker, of Los Angeles, is an attorney in New York with Lewis and Kelsy

Col. Merritt Is Party Host

Col. L. G. Merritt entertained yesterday afternoon at a 5 to 7 party at the Army-Navy Country Club for nearly 200 guests.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. R. J. Mitchell, Mrs. Joy Hancock, Mrs. Sam S. Jack, Mrs. W. L. McKittrick, Mrs. Field Harris and Mrs. Roger Carlson.

Among the ranking guests were the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb, and the Chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers.

Cards Go Out For Two More Holiday Parties

With the Christmas holidays only two weeks away, invitations are being issued every day for parties in honor of the season's debutantes and their beaux, who will shortly be home from school and college.

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry West have sent out cards for a small dance Saturday evening, December 23, in honor of their pretty debutante daughter, Miss Billie Byrd West. The party will take place at the Sulgrave Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John Boyle Gordon have cards out for a tea on that afternoon in honor of their daughter, Miss Margaret Fleetwood Gordon, who is making her bow to Capital society this season. There will be dancing at the party, which will take place at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Davis Returns

Mrs. Dwight Davis has returned to Washington for a few days from her plantation in Tallahassee, Fla. She expects to go back there shortly.

Mrs. Fletcher To Give Tea

Mrs. Albert T. Fletcher will entertain at a tea this afternoon in the South Lounge of the Carlton, for Mrs. Richard M. Cutts, with her husband, Maj. Cutts, recently returned from Shanghai.

Maj and Mrs. Cutts arrived in China at the beginning of the war, and from then on went through one exciting adventure after another. When Shanghai was invaded, Mrs. Cutts was sent up the Yangtze River for safety, and from there went to the Philippines. However, she returned to Shanghai to rejoin her husband until he was ordered back to this country.

Among those invited to the tea are Mrs. E. Hart Fenn, Gen. and Mrs. Lorenzo Gasser, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mrs. Kate Marsh, Mrs. Esther Norment, E. Ormond Power, Mrs. Mae Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Harron, Mrs. Beth Farr, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Tudor Morcell, Hewitt Wells, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Edwin Flather, John W. O'Leary, John O'Brien, Chester Snow and Alfons Landa.

Maj. and Mrs. Cutts are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Morris. Maj. Cutts has been assigned to duty at the Charleston Navy Yard.

Mrs. Cutts was formerly Miss Dorothea Lane and their marriage took place when he was detailed as an aide at the White House.

Lewises in New York

Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis have gone to New York City, where they will attend the annual dinner tomorrow evening of the Philippine Club. They will return to Washington Sunday.

Margaret Smith Is Married to James Brown

Wedding Takes Place In Rectory of Church of the Nativity

The rectory of the Church of the Nativity was the scene of the marriage las tevening at 7:30 of Miss Margaret Virginia Smith to James Russell Brown. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jared D. Smith, and Mr. Brown's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dewey O. Brown.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the Admiral Club.

Palms, ferns, baskets of pastel flowers and calla lilies adorned the rectory. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory taffeta faille frock. It was made with a sweetheart neckline, leg o' mutton sleeves, a small ruffle of pleating at the neckline and three rows of pleating around the hem and train. She wore a diamond cross, a gift of the bridegroom. Her veil, which had inserts of chantilly lace, fell from a halo of seed pearls. She carried a prayer book with a shower of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William Albrecht served as matron of honor. Her violet moire taffeta gown was made along the lines of the bride's frock. She wore gold accessories and carried a bouquet of gold chrysanthemums.

Robert J. Barrett was best man, and ushers were Leroy Zink and Dewitt Felter.

Mrs. Smith was gowned in wine-colored velvet with silver accessories. Her corsage was of Johanna Hill roses. Mrs. Brown had selected a teal blue velvet costume and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Brown, of Irvington, N. J.; Mrs. Genevieve Brown, of Richmond; Lewis Russell, of Leonardtown, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Picket, of Mount Airy, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. August Priebe, of Gaithersburg, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown will make their home at 135 West 225th street, New York City, after a honeymoon.

Mrs. Hugo Black Is Honor Guest At Luncheon

Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, was honor guest for whom Mrs. Thomas D. Samford entertained a company at luncheon yesterday in the Louis Seize room of the Shoreham. Also attending was Mrs. Black's sister, Mrs. Clifford Durr.

Mrs. Samford, who knew Justice and Mrs. Black before they came to Washington, has come from her home near Montgomery, Ala., to visit in Washington with her son, William T. Samford.

Others in the company were Mrs. E. Y. Martin, Mrs. I. T. Quinn, Mrs. Edward Stitt, Miss Helen Newton, Mrs. A. K. McLeod, Mrs. A. M. O'Neal, Mrs. Robert Winston, Mrs. Henry Fulton, Mrs. Asah Roundtree, Mrs. H. H. Bennett, Mrs. Allen Crenshow and Mrs. T. W. Seay.

The Closes Fete Loring Christie

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun were ranking guests at the dinner party which the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close gave at the legation on Massachusetts avenue.

Honor guest at the affatir was the Canadian Minister, Loring Christie.

Another dinner last evening was that at which Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle entertained in their apartment on H street. Mrs. Coyle returned yesterday morning from a stay of three days in New York.

Over the Christmas holidays Mr. and Mrs. Coyle will have with them their son, Larry, who attends the Solebury School, in New Hope, Pa.

Party of Cummings To Honor Murphy

Attorney General Murphy will be honor guest at a cocktail party to be given on Wednesday, December 20, by former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. The party will take place at Ruthven, the sosts' residence on Tilden street, from 4 until 7.

State Department Aids Cupid, Permits Lee Washington to Sail for Italy

THE MANY PEOPLE who have been feeling sorry about the case of Miss Lee Washington, engaged to Arthur Norris Kennard, of England, but at first denied a passport by the State Department to go over and marry him, will be glad to know that all is about to end favorably. The hitherto hard-hearted department is permitting Miss Washington to sail if she promises to be married in a neutral country, so she has booked passage on the Italian liner Rex, leaving New York a week from today.

Her brother, Horace Washington, will go with her. The marriage will take place either in Naples or Genoa. Her fiance, who is with the military intelligence service, is getting leave to meet her in Italy.

After their marriage the young couple expect to go to Angers, France, to visit the bridegroom's father, Sir Howard Kennard, British Ambassador to Poland. With other foreign diplomats accredited to Poland he has taken up residence in the little French town which is now the seat of what's left of the Polish government.

VIA THE DIXIE Clipper which brought back Ambasador Joseph Kennedy, we have received a letter from a friend of ours who is living in the English countryside.

"Home life is becoming just as prevalent today as it was in the Victorian era. Now that gas for our cars is so limited, we spend most of our evenings reading—I read eight books last week alone—or playing every sort of a game from charades to backgammon. I must say that I feel as though I never really knew my family well until after the war began.

"Occasionally, however, when we begin to get on each others' nerves, we invite a neighboring family over for dinner, and, since transportation is so difficult, to spend the night. It's just like the old days, when I remember one of our cousins came from the next county to spend the week-end and stayed for two years.

"Because of the gas situation, all kinds of odd conveyances stored away in barns are being brought out and used enthusiastically. We have unearthed a pony cart we used when we were children and do all our marketing therein. Many women find that they no longer have to worry about their reducing exercises as walking and constant bicycling take care of the extra-pounds problem.

"WE HAD several slum children from London staying with us, but they have all gone back, though we did our best to make them happy. But it seems they just don't like the country, and resented being put each in a room to themselves. They felt it was much more friendly to sleep five and six in a room.

"Many people have relatives staying with them. One of my aunts, who lives on the Isle of Wight, not a very safe place to be nowadays, has joined us here.

"Mrs. Frank Heywood, whom you will remember, no doubt, as Maj. Heywood, was Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy in Washington until a year or two ago, tells us that her husband is "somewhere in France" with the British troops. Though she can write to him, she hasn't seen him since shortly after the war began.

"We are very glad that mail service from your country continues to be good, even when letters are sent by boat instead of clipper. Everybody seems quite cheerful, perhaps only because air raids on the civilian population and heavy fighting have not yet really begun."

MORE ABOUT PEOPLE:

The young son of the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, is in uniform and helping to protect his country against the Russians. Even before the war broke out, the Minister has had the habit of being at his desk ready for work every morning at 8 o'clock, which is practically dawn for most members of the Diplomatic Corps.

THE LIBRARIAN of the Library of Congress and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish are living in a most charming house in Thirty-third street in Georgetown, directly opposite the remodeled residence which used to be the leading tavern, and where the tobacco farmers from Maryland once gathered every Saturday night after their business in town was completed.

Besides being a well-known concert singer, Mrs. MacLeish also plays the accordion. Her young son, Peter, can perform on the recorder, an ancient instrument which predated the flute and which is being widely revived in England and this country. Fortunately for Peter, it is much simpler to master than the flute.

Senator Hattie Caraway Returning Here for Holidays

Senator Hattie W. Caraway, who has been on a two weeks' trip to her home in Jonesboro, Ark., and other parts of the State, will return to Washington late tonight or early tomorrow.

She will be joined here soon for the holidays by her oldest son, Lieut. Paul W. Caraway, and his wife, who are now stationed at West Point, where Lieut Caraway is an instructor in law at the United States Military Academy.

Senator Caraway will entertain again at her annual New Year's Eve party for her Washington friends and those from Arkansas.

This recent trip to her home State is the first the Senator has been able to make since before Congress adjourned last summer. At the time of adjournment, Senator Caraway left for the West Coast to attend the wedding in Seattle of her son, Lieut. Forest Caraway, who has since gone to Alaska for station.

After the wedding, Senator Caraway, accompanied by her secretary, Garrett Whiteside, and Mrs. Whiteside and Miss Emma C. Riley, went on to Hawaii for a brief inspection trip and was called back to Washington for the special session of Congress.

Stellita Stapleton Plans Party for Patricia Hurley

Miss Stellita Stapleton will entertain at a dinner party on December 28, when her guest of honor will be Miss Patricia Hurley, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hurley. Guests will include only those from the debutante contingent and their beaux.

Miss Stapleton, who has been busily engaged in Red Cross work of late, has just received her Cap and Pin from the Volunteer Nursing Corps.

'Hobby Horses' Amuse Hunt Dinner Guests

Society Gourmets Meet To Feast on Wild Turkey and Terrapin

Virginia wild turkey and delicious terrapin were only two of the features at the second annual turkey-terrapin hunt dinner held last night in the Pall Mall room of the Hotel Raleigh and enjoyed by dozens of gourmets among members of Capital society.

As a surprise for the guests, "hobby horses," newest feature in nightclubs, had been imported for the occasion and were ridden by the guests, causing much hilarity. One old-fangled note was struck, however, by the dancing of the Virginia reel, in which several chosen from among the guests participated. Two young ladies dressed in flannel nightdresses, and holding candles, sang several numbers from "Babes in the Wood," an act which was originated by the Junior League in New York but never been put on before in Washington. Paloma, guitarist, who is a cousin of the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos, also appeared on the lively program.

Officials Attend With Wives

The Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Oscar Chapman, was in a party which also included, during the latter half of the evening, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who came from a dinner at the University Club at which Dr. Grady spoke.

Dr. and Mrs. Custis Lee Hall had at their table Dr. and Mrs. James Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Reeves, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buel, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gableman, Mr. and Mrs. John Small and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Walser.

Dr. and Mrs. Victor Alfaro entertained a party of eight, including Dr. and Mrs. Fred Sanderson, Dr. and Mrs. William Herbst and Mr. and Mrs. George Shea. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Krafft had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. George Ferris and Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Colt.

Residential Society Well Represented

Walter H. Dunlap had with him Miss Josephine Waggaman, Miss Rose Ball and William Dunlap. Others who entertained sizable parties were Mr. and Mrs. R. H. B. Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Minier Hostetler, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Crosby, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Hillyer, who had 20 guests.

Among others seen at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Bachrach, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nash, Mr. and Mrs. William Mackall, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Cates, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Hurtt, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Adams, the Misses Virginia and Fontaine Flannery, Henderson Gregory and Robert Parsons.

Mrs. Tuckerman Honors Mrs. McNary

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of the Senator from Oregon. The party was given at the clubhouse of the League of Republican Women on Seventeenth street.

The guests were Mrs. Walter Riddell, wife of the Counselor of the Canadian Legation; Mrs. David F. Sellers, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack, Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, Mrs. William Doak, Countess de Buyer-Mineure, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Ollie James and Mme. Illarion Mishtowt.

From Baltimore for the luncheon came Mrs. Bruce Cotten, Mrs. Edward Simpson and Mrs. George Huntington Williams.

$750 Given For Library In Hospital

20th Century Club Makes Progress in Drive to Aid Gallinger Ward

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

More than $750 has been given in voluntary contributions by members of the Twentieth Century Club to the fund for the occupational therapy ward library and reading room it is providing for the children's ward of Gallinger Hospital.

This announcement was made yesterday by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman of the Golden Jubilee committee, at the club's monthly meeting in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. The gift to Gallinger is the most important project in the club's observance of its golden anniversary. Mrs. R. Thomas West, chairman of the Gallinger committee, announced that students in the colored vocational schools were making the tables, chairs and benches to be used in the therapy room, as their donation.

Many other gifts also have been received from members of the club and others interested, providing furnishings for the rooms which are ready to put into them as soon as they are finished. Otto L. Veerhoff will present a picture for the therapy room in memory of his late wife, who was an active members of the club.

A housewarming is to be held in addition to the dedication, at which will be present members of the club and those in public life interested in future development of the work for crippled children.

The meeting was addressed yesterday by Dr. Charles C. Abbot, astronomer and secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. Dr. Abbot spoke on "The Sun," which he described as a "variable star," and blamed for the variability of the weather and for droughts. There is a drought every 46 years, he said, and a major drought every 90 years.

Dr. Abbot also told of experiments he has made on Mount Wilson in cooking by the rays of the sun, showing a machine in which he baked bread and gingerbread successfully.

In the absence of Mrs. E. C. Montgomery, the president, Mrs. Lawrence Martin, first vice president, presided at the meeting. Mrs. W. W. Husband, chairman of the program committee, announced the guest speaker.

Short talks were also made by Harold Snape of Goodwill Industries who told of the work done there by handicapped persons, and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, president of the Woman's Guild of Goodwill, who announced the benefit bazaar to be held today at the Shoreham Hotel. An appeal for more workers at Red Cross Headquarters, 1730 E street, was made by Mrs. Ernest P. Bicknell. Great quantities of warm winter garments are needed for the war refugees of Europe, she said.

Mission Guild Plans Christmas Meeting

The Christmas dinner meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission will be held at the E street Y. W. C. A. this evening at 6 o'clock, with Mrs. Allen Rowlett chairman of the program committee.

The president of the Washington Story League, Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell, will present a Christmas story, and the Mission Glee Club, heard each Saturday night on the mission broadcast, will lead the carol singing.

Distribution of cretonne bags furnished by the mission to be filled for needy children and given out at the annual Christmas party at the Capitol Theater also will be made.

New President Takes Office

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Walter B. Woodson (left), wife of Admiral Woodson, yesterday assumed her duties as president at the meeting of the Woman's Army and Navy League at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, Eleventh and L streets northwest. With her is Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard, wife of Chaplain Rinard, who has served for several years as secretary, but will leave early in the year for Texas, where Chaplain Rinard, now executive officer in the chief of chaplain's office, will be transferred for duty at Randolph Field

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MONDAY the Business and Professional Women's Club, as it has done on one other occasion, will provide a Christmas dinner party for children under the care of the Juvenile Court, and their brothers and sisters. Each club members has been assigned one of them (more than 60 boys and girls) to provide for. The gifts will be selected in accordance with the wishes of the children.

I remember the other party—two years ago, I think—when the wide-eyed youngsters were brought to the Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets, the same place it is to be this year. They were seated at long tables for dinner before the distribution of presents from the big tree. There was no Santa Claus except the loving spirit of the business women, exemplified by their national president, Earlene White, who officiated at the tree. The Christmas celebration was a practical and happy one which needed no false faces to complete it. Every child received clothing he needed and usually a toy in addition.

Judge Fay L. Bentley, Miss Genevieve Gabower and Miss Margaret Ralston of the Juvenile Court were there with others of the staff, as they will be this year, to assist with the party and provide transportation for the little guests.

This year, Mrs. T. B. Thompson will be the church hostess and the women of the church will provide ice cream as a treat for the children.

Judge Lucy Howorth, the club president, has turned over arrangements for the party to the emblem and membership committes with Mrs. Grace Keller Cooper, general chairman.

CHRISTMAS PLANS—Tomorrow morning, at 9:30, over Station WJSV, some of the plans for the alley Christmas programs of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches will be announced. The speakers will be Mrs. Richard A. Sauer, chairman of the Juvenile Court Committee under which the work is carried on; Mrs. William Sampselle of the Juvenile Court staff and Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the council, who will tell of the plans for giving whole families Christmas in their own homes.

The program also will include an arrangement of "Ave Maria" (Bach-Gounod), for two cellos, Miss Naomi Hewitt playing first cello and Walter McCurdy, jr., second.

WOOSTER DINNER—Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Compton will be hosts tonight at their home, 2900 Cathedral avenue, to the alumni of Wooster College at their annual dinner. Coach Boles, director of athletics for 24 years in the Ohio conference, will be guest of honor. Thomas Law Coyle is president of the club.

FOUNDERS' DAY—Marion E. Martin, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee and a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority from the University of Maine, will be the guest speaker tonight at its dinner at Hotel 2400, celebrating its founding, in 1897. Washington alumnae chapter and Pi Delta, active chapter at Maryland, will join in the celebration. Mrs. Edward J. Nichols, of State College, Pa., executive secretary of the sorority, and Mrs. Robert Taylor, of Atlanta, Ga., district superintendent, for active chapters in the southern district both will be on hand.

Mrs. Haig Gives Dinner for Mrs. Robert

D. A. R. President Heads the List of Distinguished Guests

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, entertained at dinner last night at her home, 207 Wilson lane, Bethesda, in compliment to Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The house was decorated in Christmas colors, the centerpiece on the table being a small white Christmas tree with sparkling red ornaments. Holly was grouped at the base of the tree and down the center of the table.

Among those present were Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, national organizing secretary general; Miss Page Schwarzwaelder, national treasurer general; Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, national registrar general; Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, national librarian general; Mrs. Willard Steele, national curator general; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent for the District; Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, District State vice regent, and Mrs. A. C. Swann Sinclair, State regent of Virginia.

A meeting of the national board, D. A. R., this morning at Memorial Continental Hall, is the occasion of many of the national officers being in Washington at this time.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis will entertain the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, D. A. R., at her home, 1440 Massachusetts avenue northwest, when Mr. Ellis will give a talk on the Magna Charta following the business meeting of the chapter. Mrs. Guy Withers, soloist, and Mrs. William T. Clark, pianist, will furnish patriotic music.

Miss Luella Chase, sister of the hostess and regent, will preside. She will introduce Miss Chenoweth, Mrs. Haig, and Mrs. Hodgkins, as guests.

This chapter has reached its full quota for the Golden Jubilee project of the National Society, D. A. R., in 1940.

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, jr., State chairman, District D. A. R. Radio committee, will present Mrs. Frederick W. Pennoyer, jr., of the District Red Cross Chapter, tomorrow at 12:45 p. m., on Station WOL. Mrs. Pennoyer will speak on "The Red Cross and National Defense."

Miss Mary Russell Williams, who is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, N. Y., will sing "Music O Lord Most Holy" by Cesar Franck, accompanied by Mrs. A. F. Williams. Mrs. Pennoyer, who is the wife of Commander Frederick W. Pennoyer, jr., is a member of the Army and Navy Chapter, D. A. R., and has been an active member of the Red Cross for several years. She is at present a member of the Public Relations Committee and also serves as a sponsor for the Junior American Red Cross.

The junior group of the Col. John Donelson Chapter, D. A. R., will be hostesses at the regular meeting tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 in the clubrooms at 2616 Sixteenth street northwest. Miss Isabelle Allen will be in charge of the Christmas music, and Mrs. Harry M. Howard will speak on "Christmas at the White House." Christmas gifts will be presented for the approved schools.

Ladies' Aid Plans Party

The Ladies Aid Society of Ruppert Home for the Aged, 2,100 Good Hope road southeast, will present a Christmas entertainment at 3 o'clock Sunday, December 17, for residents of the home. A station wagon will meet the bus at U street southeast to take the aid society members to the home.

Mrs. Karl E. Krumke, president of the society, is being assisted by the members in arrangements for the program. A benefit supper to raise funds for the home will follow the entertainment.

Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, wife of the superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, has arranged for the music, and Mrs. John Thiemeyer and Mrs. Max Walthen for the purchase and distribution of gifts.

Other committees include: Reception, Mrs. Christian Heurich, Miss Antonie Graff, Mrs. L. Rosenbusch, Mrs. Paul Menzel, Mrs. A. Rupertus, Mrs. A. Schwarz, Mrs. William T. Hyser, Mrs. R. Dietle and Mrs. Lucy Hartford; fancy table, Mrs. Oscar Dietz, chairman; Mrs. C. Miller, Mrs. Thomas Griffin, Mrs. Krumke, Mrs. M. C. Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 24, Who Supports Family, Must Stay at Mother's Heels or Quarrels Ensue; Should She Rebel?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 24 years old and I live with my mother. I almost keep the family going from a financial standpoint, as my parents are separated. I bought the family car, pay for the groceries, taxes, etc. Here is my problem: Mother still thinks of me as a child, and tries to make me behave as one. When I speak of taking the car to go any place, she says it isn't safe for me to ride on the highways alone. If I say I will take a girl friend with me, she says two young girls should never ride alone at night.

It is very seldom that I leave her alone at home, and there is always a fuss if I do. This I resent, because I feel that I am old enough to make my own decisions. I don't think she means to spoil my life, but she just has no other interest in life than me. She thinks I should go every place she goes, whether or not I want to. She also thinks I should never go out without her.

Lots of times I would like to take girl friends to the movies, or visit a girl friend for an evening, but Mother gets mad and makes it terribly unpleasant if I even mention such a thing. Also, while she doesn't like movies and is bored to death if she has to go to one, still there's a quarrel if I mention going without her. If there is some place to go that would keep us out after 11 o'clock at night, she refuses to go or to let me go. Consequently, all my friends now have the idea that I never go anywhere without my mother—unless on a date.

I am getting very tired of all this and am about to revolt. Do you think I would be wrong in demanding some privileges, when I am putting my earnings into the family exchequer? If I am in the wrong, I would like you to tell me, because I hate the idea of upsetting the family equilibrium. But I am also disgusted with having mother tell me that I must be back before dark, every time I leave the house. I feel that a couple of girls 24 years old are just as capable of looking after themselves as they would be with somebody's mother along. Please tell me whether I am justified in demanding a change of attitude on the part of my mother.

INDEPENDENT LADY.

Siamese Twin Act Bad for Both

DEAR I. L.: The suggestion, not to mention the spectacle, of any creature's devouring its young would be considered revolting by most of us—yet that is exactly what women of your mother's type are prepared to do, without realizing the nature of the grisly crime.

Certainly any girl past 21 years of age, with the social intelligence to earn the money which pays her family's bills, is entitled to claim as much freedom of action while living with, and supporting, her mother, as she would exercise if she had an apartment of her own a thousand miles away from that dependent lady. And when she lives under the same roof as her mother, and the latter doggedly insists on their doing a Siamese-twin act, socially, she simply has to lay down irrevocable rules of behavior designed to correct the situation.

If her mother refuses to see the reason in the rules; if she declines to make a graceful and gracious adjustment to her daughter's adult emancipation from parental shadowing—then the daughter clearly would be justified in splitting up the household and supporting her mother at a separate address. This latter drastic measure is often the only solution of the more aggravated cases of maternal possessiveness.

It isn't alone your mother's desire to keep you a child which accounts for her thwarting supervisory activities. She is also (perhaps unconsciously) using you as a stand-in for her divorced husband, so far as a social companion is concerned. She feels lost and alone; unwanted and afraid; emotionally insecure to the nth degree. And that is a pity, of course. But hanging herself around your neck to the suffocation point is not the indicated remedy. The only cure-all for what ails her is to start right now, from scratch, and build up a new social program that is intrinsically her own. If you cannot persuade her to do this, you may have to force her to do it. Otherwise, both of you will sink gradually into social oblivion together, hating each other with progressive bitterness as you do so.

With your very girl friends beginning to give you the go-by because of your mother's querulous, ubiquitous intrusion, you haven't a ghost of a chance with the opposite sex, as I suppose you can see. Since it is a normal woman's first business in life to seek the psychological fulfillment of happy marriage and motherhood, any parent who would obstruct a daughter's aspirations along these lines, either wittlessly or wilfully, has forfeited the right to special filial consideration. The offspring thus hamstrung is more than entitled to compel a re-arrangement of the picture, which will place the offending parent in a position where major interference is impossible.

M. H.

Accordion Back In Family 'Parlor'

The old accordion is coming back into fashion, and can be found in many homes today. Once the piano keyboard is learned, the old "Squeeze-box" can be played easily, along with the organ and the new instrument, the novachord, which, like the organ, is designed along the lines of a spinet type piano and operated on electricity.

The novachord, although it was introduced only a few months ago, has excited more comment and enthusiasm than has ever greeted any new musical instrument. By a system of controls, the player can completely change the character of the tone of the instrument, switching instantly from a percussive tone similar to that of the piano, to a sustained tone similar to that of the organ,

Mother and Daughter Fashion Act

Two peas from the same pod are the smiling brace of models shown here. They are mother and daughter, Mrs. Ruth Shelton Rossi (left) and her raven-haired youngster, Dolores, who has just entered the Marjorie Webster School after recent studies in war-torn Continental schools. "For the fun of it," both Rossis did a mother and daughter act of modeling at a local style showing, wearing identical colors but styles suitable to their own types. Mrs. Rossi here wears a sheer black wool frock with drawstring neckline, and a cardinal red suede toque, while her daughter models a black wool skirt with black hat and bright red suede cloth jacket

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Van Tinsel held their annual hog-killing last week-end at their Virginia farm, Stagcrest. Many of their friends from the city motored down to the country for this picturesque event and heroically braved the early morning cold to watch the farm hands kill and dress the hogs. The guests later were presented souvenirs of the occasion in the form of packages of home-made sausage wrapped in pink cellophane and ornamented with sprigs of mistletoe.

Fascinating Newcomers

Mr. and Mrs. Parmalee Dudd, new additions to Truthtown's social set, have taken the old Birdhaven house, one of the darkest and draftiest wrecks in Adamtown. The Dudds are a most interesting couple, he being short, bald and fat; she tall, sallow and skinny. They have two utterly incorrigible children and a huge police dog named Adolph which has a penchant for prowling in neighbors' yards.

The Vacationists

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Plush, who have returned from a vacation in Palm Beach, will remain here until Christmas, when they will go to New York for a short holiday. They will then return to Washington, where Mr. Plush will attend to business affairs for a few days, after which they will leave for a vacation in California. On their return from California in the spring they will go to Bermuda for a rest and later relax on a South American cruise. Mr. Plush is connected with Plush & Co., place card manufacturers, a firm that was founded by his father.

When Do We Eat?

Considerable gastronomic confusion developed at parties given Wednesday night by Mrs. Wynkoop Bigger and Mrs. Rufus Looney. Many of the guests invited to Mrs. Bigger's home for 8 o'clock assumed that the event was a dinner or, at least, a buffet supper. Finding it was neither, they took turns slipping out to the nearest barbecue stand. Part of the guests invited to Mrs. Looney's home for 8 o'clock had eaten in advance and found an eight-course dinner awaiting them. It was understood a large number of broiled squabs and confectioner's cakes were carried home from the Looney dinner in evening bags and tuxedo pockets.

Christmas Shopping Resolutions

I will not settle the dilemma of what to give Aunt Susie by going downtown to "look around."

I will under no circumstances go downtown or even to the corner drug store to "pick up something" for anybody.

I will give no hose, handkerchiefs or compacts unless I can order them by telephone.

I will not try to find a present for $1 that looks as if it cost $1.35 or $1.65 or $1.98.

I will not try to choose a book that I think somebody "might like."

I will not further complicate the traffic problem by doing a shopping twosome with any relative or best friend.

I will not obdurately stand at the front of elevators when I am not getting off until the sixth floor.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Modern Mata-Hari Just a Worker in Munitions Plant

New York, Dec. 7.

IN THESE MAD shambles around town sometimes called "parties," with 150 ladies and gents shoe-horned into a couple of rooms built to hold 30, anything can happen, and inevitably does. Especially, there's always at least one dramatic, quiet, faintly mysterious beauty whom no one seems to know. She's the type that adds a little gingery speculation and whispering to a night out.

Alice Hughes

I got mixed up in one of these free-for-alls the other night. Fred, the mighty milliner, was leaving town, and as a ta-ta gesture he bade the lads and lasses turn up at his elegant apartment. It was an easy mixture with which to cope, being a blending of professional people and some of his costly customers. He doesn't wind a scrap of felt for less than $45. And then, just as things were cooling off, there she stood, over in a comparatively quiet corner.

A tall, handsome, mysterious-looking blonde girl, she was—whom nobody seemed to know. She wore a beautiful pale blue dress which exposed a beauty spot on one pink marble shoulder. No jewels, and she seemed to utter only an occasional syllable. Perfect set-up for an alluring international spy, a mata-hari of 1939—bent on finding the location of the one modern anti-aircraft gun which protects this great city from sky raiders. Sure—she must be.

So my old reportorial blood began to simmer, and I inched my way toward this mysterious and silent beauty. At last someone introduced us. Of course, the inevitable was true. She's a Miss Ann Evasko, who works quietly as a secretary for some Massachusetts munitions firm. It was the customary let-down. I gave her an order for a gross of handgrenades, and went my way. But if Miss Ann Evasko ever wants a chance at the international spying racket, believe me, ladies, she's got precisely what it takes!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The great Artie Shaw mystery gripped the local jitterbugs for several days. One day this popular swing band leader just didn't show up at the Broadway house where he was packing in the adolescents, and went away. Some said he was sick and had gone to Mexico for health. Another school guessed that the great Artie had gone to the Midwest to recruit a new and different sort of orchestra. But all the rug-cutters really knew was that their dream prince had taken a powder and was no more. His band still remains in town, playing at a big hotel, with a youngster named Georgie Auld waving the stick. But without the inspired Shaw, the kids look in vain for the big red letters on the box . . .

More Funds Needed To Keep Down Toll Of Tuberculosis

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

We are in the season when the Christmas seals of the National Tuberculosis Association are distributed, and this column heartily recommends that everyone, who can possibly afford it, buy a page of them and use them. The money so accumulated by this association is well spent, and the advertising which you give to the movement by placing a seal on the back of your Christmas mail will spread interest in the great campaign.

We have tuberculosis on the run. That is the reason why this campaign must be encouraged.

There has been a consistent decline in the United States from nearly 200 per 100,000 population in 1900 to about 50 for 1938. While this is gratifying, the statement does not picture the true situation. The round numbers tell us nothing about the special problems yet to be solved before the fight against tuberculosis can be declared won.

For Local Work

Your seals pay only for certain work done by your local tuberculosis society. Besides this work, the National Government and State and county governments are spending a great deal of time and thought on tuberculosis control.

A national health program was presented at the National Health Conference in Washington, July, 1938. The section on tuberculosis recommended case finding, especially by X-ray examination of contacts of known cases, isolation and treatment of persons with active disease and periodic examination of those with latent or quiescent disease.

Case finding in school children has been in operation since 1924. The school program suffers from failure to secure parental consent for the investigation of more than 50 to 60 per cent of the children. The advantages of the findings of tuberculosis in school children are two-fold—to the affected child and to the community.

Your Figure, Madame!

Glands Believed to Have Major Part In Control of Appetite; Depressed Persons Often Find Emotional Solace in Overeating

THE DAY may come finally when you can take something to regulate your appetite—and weight. That won't happen until science puts its finger exactly on the factors influencing the appetite and in the meantime you will have to continue to rely on a sensible diet. But it should help you in your struggle just to know about the vast amount of painstaking research which is being directed toward the solution of weight control.

An extremely comprehensive survey of this work was given recently by Dr. Eaton M. McKay, of the Scripps Metabolic Clinic, California, at a meeting of the American Dietetic Association. It would be impossible to do full justice to his discussion here but a few of the highlights will give you an idea of the exciting new possibilities along the line of weight control.

Dr. McKay prefaced his talk with the statement that "whether hunger and its satiation is dependent on the condition of the stomach under central control, or whether it is entirely dependent on the state of the brain is still in question." While it is evident that obesity is the result of a disturbance in the appetite, science has not yet determined where the appetite factor is located or just how much it is influenced by glands and emotions.

Glands Enter the Picture

But those glands of yours do enter into the picture!

"Current evidence seems to indicate that the weight regulation of the body and consequently the appetite depends upon a center in the hypothalmus, a very small part of the brain intimately associated with the pituitary gland," Dr. McKay said.

In experiments with rats, removal of the pituitary gland has been followed by marked reductions in food intake and weight, while an injury in the region of the hypothalmus produced marked weight increases.

Hyperthyroidism is, according to Dr. McKay, rarely accompained by obesity. Investigation has shown the reduced activity of the thyroid gland to be equalled by a corresponding decrease in appetite. So it seems unlikely that your weight trouble is due to a thyroid condition.

Here is another excerpt of special interest:

Diet Still the Best Way

"Removal of the ovaries generally does lead to an increase in weight. Experimentally, the administration of estrogenic substances corresponding to the active ovarian secretions does the reverse and causes a marked reduction in appetite and loss in fat stores . . . Whether the effect is directly upon a weight regulation center or by way of the other ductless glands is unknown."

It is generally recognized that worry or bad news will cause loss of appetite and, if continued, a loss in weight. Pleasant emotions are associated with an abnormally large appetite but it does not follow that the fat person is always jolly. Scientists agree that persons who are depressed or dissatisfied often turn to overeating as a means of emotional satisfaction.

Dr. McKay warns that the use of thyroid is extremely limited and should always be under medical supervision and that pituitary extracts have been used with little success. One drug only has proved hopeful, he says, and that is amphetamine sulphate, or benzedrine sulphate. The success of this is attributed to its effect on the emotions. In some instances, however, it has produced troublesome insomnia. It should be used only under a doctor's supervision.

For the most part, the overweights must still resort to diet. Dr. McKay favors slow reducing to allow the skin and tissues to resume their normal size and tone.

Fashion Art Self-Taught

CAN YOU learn to draw? You may think not when you compare your efforts with the glamorous work of professional artists.

But you must not forget that today's successful artists were once as unskillful as you are now. Many of them learned drawing at home—and you can do the same thing!

You quickly grasp the proportions of the human figure, for instance, when you study charts.

Notice that the body is measured according to the length of the head. The adult figure is about 7 1-2 "heads" high. The waistline is usually 3 "heads" from the top of the figure.

Once proportions are familiar to you, you let your eye measure from point to point. You learn to sketch the figure in any pose, then fill in the details.

Soon you progress to the study of light and shade. You have often seen how shadows deepen on that side of an object which is farthest from the sunlight. Drawing a fashion figure to appear in a newspaper, you put in only the strongest shadows. You keep the lighting simple—from one angle only.

The professional techniques of wash, pen and ink, you learn easily too. And you have a great thrill when your drawings reach the professional stage. Where to sell them? Department stores, advertising agencies, magazines all use fashion art.

Our 40-page booklet, "Home Course in Fashion Art," gives you practical instruction in step-by-step lessons. Its 138 illustrations include charts based on the Da Vinci rules of figure proportion. Has full explanation of light and shade, wash, rendering of furs and fabrics. Shows how to make your fashion figures glamorous, smart, professional.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Home Course in Fashion Art," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y.

Appleton, Wright Traded for Walker

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1939 29

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 7.—No boos will ring out in Washington next season for Shortstop Cecil Travis . . . Well, because in 1940 it will be Third Baseman Travis if he is still a member of the Nats by that time.

And if you're asking what will become of Buddy Lewis, who for three years has been a prime asset at third base for the Nats, well, next season if will be Leftfielder Buddy Lewis.

POVICH

That twin transition is the salient feature of the face-lifting operations planned on the Washington club by Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris as revealed today by the Nats' bosses. It will go into effect unless Travis figures in a trade for a first baseman, which is now a dimming possibility.

Three deepseated beliefs underlie the shuffle. They are: (1) The well-defined suspicion that Jimmy Pofahl, the $40,000 purchase from Minneapolis, can handle the Nats shortstop job; (2) the conviction that Travis will be an even better third baseman than he was a shortstop, and (3) the confidence in Lewis' ability to make the shift to the outfield which would retain his batting punch for the Nats.

Nats Bosses Visualize Great Combination

Eager to capitalize on the batting punch of both Lewis and Travis, the Nats' bosses visualize the shift as a long stride toward rebuilding the team. Manager Harris, discussing the plan today, declared:

"Travis gave us a great defensive performance at shortstop last season. Third base is an easier job to handle and anybody who can play short as well as Travis did, should be a great third baseman. He's not the same Travis who did play third base for two years before Lewis came along. He's smarter, he gets a better break on the ball, and there never was any complaint with his throwing arm.

"If what we hear about Pofahl's ability to play shortstop is true, that would make Travis available for third base, and with Travis around there would be no point in keeping Lewis on third. We need Lewis' batting punch in the outfield and I'll stake my reputation on Buddy's ability to hold down an outfield job.

"I've seen Lewis go farther for short flies hit over third base into foul territory than other third basemen in the league. On ground balls, he figures to be the best man in our outfield. And his throwing arm would also be the best. Lewis gets the long wallops that an outfielder is supposed to make and I can see in him the makings of a standout outfielder.

Travis' Slump Wrecked Detroit Deal

These elaborate plans for Lewis and Travis would be booted into the proverbial cocked hat, however, if either the Tigers or the Browns grab Travis. The Nats have put him on the market, but they will trade him only for a first baseman, and that means either Rudy York or George McQuinn.

The Detroit-Washington deal involving Travis and York would probably have been closed long since except for an unfortunate lapse on Travis' part last summer when the Tigers were highly interested in acquiring him.

Travis underwent a magical transformation from a bungling sort of shortstop into a truly classic performer; had been playing superb ball for two months. In Chicago, his defensive play bordered on high sensationalism. In Cleveland the next week, he robbed the Indians of a dozen base hits. But in Detroit on the same Western swing he went into an unaccountable slump, could sacrcely pick up a ball. The Tigers interest in him cooled.

The fact that it was Travis' only fielding slump of the season carried little weight with the Tigers. They had seen him as a bum and it was apparently a lasting impression. If Travis had not reserved his worst performance of the year for the series with the Tigers, he would at this writing be a member of the Detroit club and York would be with the Nats.

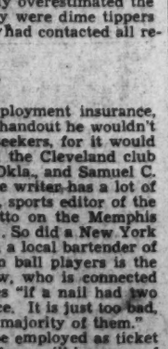
Briggs Pleased With Bartell Deal

Lobbying—With the departure of the minor leaguers, the lobbies of baseball headquarters are not now so thickly packed . . . Today for the first time there was room for a standee to fall down if his aching dogs tossed in the towel . . . Walter O. Briggs, jr., who was tabbed with the picturesque name of "Spike" in his undergraduate days at Georgetown, was highly elated today at announcement of the deal which brought Dick Bartell, of the Cubs, to Detroit in exchange for Bill Rogell . . . "But Bartell has got two bad ankles," a National leaguer reminded young Briggs in some glee . . . "Huh," said Spike. "You ought to see Rogell" . . . Clark Griffith heatedly denied the report that a movement was afoot to impeach the vice president of the American League until he realized that the vice president of the American League was himself and that he was being kidded . . . Al Simmons, one of the half-hundred free agents in search of a job here, may catch on with the Pittsburgh Pirates as an outfielder . . . Among the possibilities are that Zeke Bonura will come back to the Nats at the $7,500 waiver price, which would represent a $20,000 profit for Washington on the deal with the Giants last winter . . . Without asking the majors, the minor leagues killed the clause in their constitution whereby the majors could invade minor league territory and set up a team on payment of only $5,000 to the minor league club owner . . . But the minors aren't getting away with it . . . The National League today pointed out that the majors must consent to any such amendment.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 7.—It might turn out to be a nice day Sunday at Milwaukee, but what a silly time to be playing as important a game as the Giants vs. the Packers! . . . The big league baseball and football owners should get together and try to dovetail their schedules . . . The baseball season, even though it was first, should compress itself in such a way as to end up around Labor Day, with the World Series perhaps running until the middle of September . . . That would pull the tail end of the pro grid season in out of the arctic weather . . . After all, five, six or seven teams in each baseball league lose money during September . . . They could save that loss and begin renting their parks out to the grid teams, and selling those miles of hot dogs sooner, if they'd get together on this.



CONSIDINE

Wally Paige, young Negro who served as Henry Armstrong's chauffeur and secretary for a time, was sentenced to the electric chair a few days ago in New York for killing Bobby Forbes, son of Frank Forbes, well-known colored sports authority, after an argument at a baseball game . . . Joe Louis will second Holman Williams when Williams hooks up with Izzy Jannazo next week in Scranton . . . Vermont, where the first infantile paralysis epidemic broke out 50 years ago, has arranged an active sports scheduled to aid the annual drive for the infantile paralysis foundation . . . Close to 10,000 sports events of all types will be held in the United States for the benefit of the foundation.

Now It's the All-Americas of Golf

If you don't think college basketball is going a long way then you don't know that the University of Oregon's team left yesterday for New York, where they meet Long Island University, National invitation tournament champs, at Madison Square Garden . . . Frank Dobson has started a campaign to increase the height of the goal posts' uprights to 50 feet, as a result of the dissension over Bo Russell's disputed kick in the Giants-Redskin game.

The current issue of Golf lists Grantland Rice's All-America . . . He rates the pros as follows: Byron Nelson, Henry Picard, Ralph Guldahl, Dick Metz, Sam Snead, Jug McSpaden, Denny Shute, E. J. Harrison, Horton Smith and Harry Cooper . . . He also ranks the men and women amateurs, with Bud Ward and Betty Jameson leading their respective fields . . . In place of the war-torn Ryder Cup matches, it has been suggested by A. Linde Fowler, veteran Boston golf writer, that the 10 leading pros play the ten leading amateurs . . . It would result in a 10-0 shutout.

We were inundated beneath a flood of mail (nearly 29 pieces) on our recent piece on the parsimony of big league ball players . . . A colored waiter at the Hotel New Yorker wrote that we badly overestimated the generosity of most of the players when we said they were dime tippers . . . New York auto dealer writes that the players he had contacted all refused to pay the public's price for a car.

Only the Newspaper Clan Is Tighter

Crosby Maynard, an Albany authority on unemployment insurance, points out that if Keltner had gotten his $15 a week handout he wouldn't have been muscling in on Cleveland's 20,000 dole seekers, for it would have come out of another fund into which he and the Cleveland club have contributed . . . V. G. Burton, of Bartlesville, Okla., and Samuel C. Hart, of New York, said the piece indicated that the writer has a lot of courage, which of course he hasn't . . . Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and Walter Stewart, ditto on the Memphis Commercial Appeal, seemed to think it was okay . . . So did a New York tradesman named William Bauer and Johnny Mack, a local bartender of renown, who says that the only tighter group than ball players is the newspaper clan . . . And a man named Ed Barrow, who is connected with some team whose name slips my mind, writes "if a nail had two heads, you would have hit them both with your piece. It is just too bad, but I am sorry to say that your description fits the majority of them."

There is a possibility that girls and women will be employed as ticket sellers when New York tracks go pari-mutuel . . . There will be none, of course, in the pay-off booths—for the obvious reason that they would shell out too reluctantly to keep the line moving . . . Such New York tracks as can afford it will have those fool-proof automatic totalisators, the most lavish one of which is the $650,000 gadget installed at Longchamps in Paris . . . The only one in the United States now is at Hialeah . . . The machine, which electrically records every bet, was invented in 1913 by Sir George Julius, son of the late Archbishop Julius of Christchurch, New Zealand.

Navy Names Captain . . . Greets Iowa Star

Autograph Seekers, Gridders Greet Kinnick at Annapolis

Iowa Star, Coach Larson and Al Bergner, Middie Captain, Make Short Stop in D. C.

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 7.—Autograph seekers and members of the Navy football team today greeted Nile Clarke Kinnick, winner of the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding football player of the season, when he visited the Naval Academy.

The 175-pound Iowa back, who lives in Omaha, Nebr., is on his first trip East. Maj. Emery E. Larson, U. S. M. C., coach of the Navy team, and Midshipman Allan Bergner, Kankakee, Ill., captain of the Middies during the season, were present in New York yesterday when Kinnick received the trophy. He came to the academy as Bergner's guest.

The pair flew from New York in a Navy plane, landing at Washington, where they were met by Mrs. Larson who drove them to Annapolis. Lieut. Comdr. R. E. Jasperson, U. S. N., academy publicity officer, greeted them at the main gate.

Bergner took his friend to Worden Field where the Iowa player reviewed the Twelfth Midshipman Company which was at drill. He was presented to Midshipman F. J. Karch, Carmi, Ill., company commander.

Members of the Navy junior football team, made up of the young sons of academy officers, surrounded Kinnick seeking autographs. He and Bergner both signed a football for the group.

After a short tour of the academy, including a stop at the exhibit of ships, engines and planes in the Engineering Building, Kinnick was taken to recreation hall where he met members of the Navy team for an informal chat. He autographed another football and was presented to Midshipman Richard E. Foster, Piedmont, Calif., who had just been elected captain of Navy's 1940 football team.

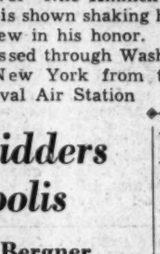
"It's a real privilege to visit this institution," the quiet Westerner commented as Bergner took him to his room and then to dinner with the midshipmen regiment.

Kinnick spent the night at the academy. He will leave tomorrow for Washington and will return to Iowa University after a short visit to New York.

Sid Luckman Signs to Play With Newark

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Dec. 7.—The Newark Bears of the American Professional Football Association announced today they had acquired the services of Sid Luckman, star quarterback of the National League Chicago Bears.



LUCKMAN

Luckman, visiting in Buffalo, was expected tomorrow in time to work out with the Bears, who meet the Wilmington, Del., Clippers here Sunday in a playoff for the association's southern division title.

The winner of the playoff meets the Paterson Panthers, northern division champions, for the association crown.

Luckman drew national attention in 1938 as Columbia University's forward-passing sensation.

James Monroe High Elects Co-Captains

Frederiksburg, Va., Dec. 7.—James Monroe High School's football team will have a captain on each side of the line next season.

Harold Brame and Roy Butler, veteran tackles, were announced today by Coach Ben Plotnicki as the choices of the squad to lead them in 1940. Brame recently earned a post on the All-Northern Virginia High School first team.

Boston Faces Duquesne in Cotton Bowl

Eagles Definitely Accept; Duquesne Expected to Agree

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 7 (U.P.).—J. Curtis Sanford, wealthy and enthusiastic young promoter of the Cotton Bowl New Year's-to-be classic, announced tonight that Duquesne was "in," "with a suitable opponent." His announcement had hardly echoed before Boston College grabbed one of his "feeler" bids and accepted.

Quickly, then, from Duquesne University, through Publicity Director Jack Davis at Pittsburgh, came the information that that school had not accepted, after all. School officials will have the final say tomorrow, Davis reported.

"We have not been able to contact officials at Duquesne tonight," Sanford reported then, "but I am sure that they will find Boston College a suitable opponent."

Sanford, who wanted to do something different to make his the most spectacular New Year's game, said players from both schools were anxious to make the trip here.

"We plan to show the boys plenty of color and wide open spaces and they are going to have something to talk about," he said. "What are they offered? Well, other bowls haven't been saying and we don't want to appear to be bargaining."

Charley Kocsis Noted Golfer, Turns Professional

Pontiac, Mich., Dec. 7.—Because he can't concentrate on a business career when golf is his "first love," Charley Kocsis, of Detroit, today decided to make golf his business and turn professional.

Kocsis, former University of Michigan star and Walker Cup player, left today with his brother Emerick, a professional, to play in the $10,000 Miami (Fla.) Open tournament.

'Skins Sign Andy Farkas For 3 Years

Gene Buck, ASCAP President, Advises Redskin Fullback On New Contract

By Jack Munhall.

For the second time in as many years Gene Buck, president of the ASCAP, has stepped out of his accustomed role to render an invaluable service to the Redskins and to Washington football fans, it was learned yesterday as Andy Farkas signed a new 3-year contract.

Only by the persuasion of Buck, head of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and his close friend was Farkas, prompted to autograph a binder on his services to the Redskins, the stocky fullback star revealed.

"I had intended to quit the game, just as I had decided last year," Farkas said, "but Mr. Buck, who is the greatest man I ever met, advised me to continue playing.

You'd Be Astounded

"Last year, after we took a trouncing from the Giants in our last game of the season, I firmly made up my mind to hang up the cleats. But, after spending a night at Mr. Buck's home in Great Neck, Long Island, and listening to his arguments why I should play at least another season, I weakened and talked terms."

Farkas, who will leave here by plane early this morning for Detroit, where he will be married Tuesday, spoke glowingly of Buck, a Detroit University alumnus.

"You'd be astounded if I told you some of the wonderful things Mr. Buck has done for me since I graduated from Detroit," the baby-faced, likeable youngster continued.

"I visited him Wednesday night and again he convinced me I would be foolish to give up professional football at this time."

Honeymoon in California

Farkas' bride to be is Ellen Marie Ryan, a nurse at Providence Hospital in Detroit.

"I met Miss Ryan in May of my senior year at Detroit (1937) when I was laid up with an infected leg. She nursed me and was so kind that I guess I fell in love.

"But would you believe it I did not have enough gumption to ask her for a date until October, some five months later?"

Miss Ryan will quit her position, Farkas said, after the marriage ceremony is performed at St. Mary's

Nats Get Slugging Chisox Outfielder; N. Y. Trades Halted

League Passes Rule Barring Champs From Swapping Within Loop

Late Deal Sends Relief Pitcher and Fielder to Chicago

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 7.—Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington club scored a smashing triumph in the American League council halls today when league owners voted unanimously to forbid the league champions to acquire players from within the league except by the waiver route.

The proposal sponsored by Griffith was aimed at the pennant-winning New York Yankees in an attempt to balance the league. It restrains the Yankees from making any deals for star players from other clubs as long as the Yankees are champions.

Such a rule, if in effect last season, would have prevented the Yankees from acquiring Oral Hildebrand, pitching star of the Browns. Hildebrand's acquisition by the Yankees during the trading season contributed to the runaway race made by the New York club.

Yanks Favor Rule

Paradoxically, the Yankees cast their vote in favor of the new rule in what was regarded as a generous gesture to bring about league balance.

Griffith withdrew one of his other proposed amendments: The recommendation that a major league club be limited to one farm team in each minor league class. He agreed that it would interfere with property rights already established and would create chaos. Under his original plan, the Yankees would have had to abandon either their Kansas City or Newark teams, both of which are in a Class AA league.

The rule restraining the championship team from acquiring players within its league except by waivers goes into effect immediately and forestalls the reported deal between the Yankees and Browns which was designed to bring First Baseman George McQuinn of the St. Louis Club to the Yanks.

Proposal Rejected

The American League voted also to maintain the status quo with relation to farm system agreements with the minors and thus tossed back into the laps of the minors their four amendments designed to hamstring Commissioner Landis in chain-store baseball decisions.

The minors' proposal that each club of a farm system be treated as an individual club in rulings by Landis rather than as a member of a chain-system was flatly rejected by the American League. The commissioner thus was given encouragement to continue to interpret manipulation of players by farm-owning clubs as he saw fit.

The National League had accepted two of the minors' four amendments and as a result of the American League's flat refusal to approve any of them, Landis will cast the deciding vote.

Night Baseball Unchanged

A proposal of the St. Louis Browns that any club sending players to the minors on option first be compelled to obtain waivers on him was also voted down by the American League. The rule was amended, however, to limit the unrestricted option on players to two years instead of three.

The night baseball program was unchanged by the American League which voted to continue the present limit of seven night games for each club. However, the ban against night games on Saturday was lifted, with only Sundays and holidays now excepted from night baseball.

On a later date the American League rules committee will meet to deal with Griffith's proposal that a pitcher be given more freedom on the rubber, and to discuss the proposal that the intentional walk be made automatic upon declaration of intent, instead of going through the motions of pitching four wide balls.

Cincinnati, Dec. 7.—Gerald Walker, tempestuous outfielder of the White Sox was acquired by the Washington club late tonight in a three-player deal that sends Outfielder Taft Wright and Pitcher Pete Appleton to Chicago.

The trade was completed shortly after midnight when Clark Griffith emerged from an American League meeting and went into session with Manager Jimmy Dykes of Chicago.

For the 30-year-old Walker, a colorful figure since he broke into the big leagues in 1931, Washington gives up a 35-year-old right-hander in Appleton and a 26-year-old performer in Wright.

Deal Is a Surprise

It was a deal that the Washington club did not anticipate when Griffith and Manager Bucky Haarris came to trade meeting four days ago.

The Nats' bosses had believed that the White Sox were unwilling to part with Walker, but learned meanwhile that the Chicago club officials had soured on the player.

According to Chicago sources, Walker incurred the wrath of White Sox officials at the end of the season when he made an issue of bonus payments promised White Sox players.

Didn't Like Figures

Certain Chicago players were to be given bonuses if the White Sox home attendance reached a 600,000 figure, according to reports. When club officials announced at the end of the season that the attendance was only 592,000, Walker questioned the accuracy of the statement.

In what was said to be a heated dispute, Walker remonstrated with club officials but received no bonus. It was then that the Chicago management resolved to trade him off the club.

Walker last year batted only .292, his lowest average in the last six years. Wright had a batting mark of .309. Appleton, used chiefly in relief pitching roles, slumped badly and compiled only five victories against ten defeats.

Many times a storm center in American League games, Walker has been famed chiefly for his hot temper, his enthusiastic if sometimes over-ambitious base running, and his ability to hit in the pinches.

Played for Bucky Harris

He came into the big leagues in 1931 when Bucky Harris was managing the Tigers and remained with Detroit until 1938 when he was traded to the White Sox in a five-player deal. So popular was Walker with Detroit fans that there was a mild movement to boycott the Tigers when the outfielder was shipped to Chicago.

In 1936 and 1937 Walker was one of the recognized outfielder stars of the American League, batting .353 and .335 respectively. In 1938, after joining the White Sox, he batted .305.

Walker has long been a favorite of Manager Harris who declared tonight: "His base running gave me many a headache when I was his manager at Detroit, but I'm willing to suffer those headaches if Walker will only hit the ball for us like I know he can."

Walker is distinctly on the eccentric side. One day he showed up in the Detroit clubhouse with his head shaved. On alternate plays he has been a brilliant outfielder and what is described in baseball parlance as a "shoemaker."

He is regarded as far from a fine outfielder defensively but that he has the natural speed and ability to be one is well known.

He came up to the Tigers in 1931 as part of the brother team of Gerald and Hub Walker, who had been college baseball stars at Mississippi State. His older brother failed to stay in the big leagues but Gerald has been a regular from the outset of his career.

Scribes Move To Place Gehrig In 'Hall of Fame'

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 7.—The Baseball Writers Association of America moved tonight to place Lou Gehrig in the sport's Hall of Fame immediately "to commemorate the year in which he achieved his record."

By a unanimous vote at the annual winter meeting the writers agreed to suspend the rules and present Gehrig to the Hall of Fame committee as the association's nominee without an election.

After running his string of consecutive games with the New York Yankees to 2,130, Gehrig retired from baseball because of illness from a form of infantile paralysis.

Eagles Host to River Vale in Crucial Hockey Tilt Tonight

Locals Trail New York by Three Points

Washington Sextet Has Two Big Games With Baltimore In Title Fight

What may prove the key match of the Washington Eagles' Eastern Amateur Hockey League schedule will be featured at Riverside Stadium tonight when the Jersey Skeeters, of River Vale, N. J., are entertained at 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles yesterday were in third place in the Eastern League race, but four points removed from the pace setting Baltimore Orioles and three points behind the runner-up New York Rovers.

Took Lead Wednesday

The Orioles forged into the leadership last Wednesday night when they won their third consecutive game from the New York Rovers in Baltimore, 8 to 4. As a consequence, the Orioles yesterday were leading the Eastern League with 14 points; the Rovers were second with 13 and the Eagles third with 10.

Following tonight's match with River Vale the Eagles are to move to Baltimore for a meeting with the Orioles Sunday night, and will play host to Baltimore at Riverside next Tuesday night.

Washingtonians who thrilled to the Eagles' sensational last period victory over Atlantic City at Riverside last Tuesday night, 5 to 2, are expected to sit in on the hostilities tonight, and probably will be treated to one of the most furiously fought matches of the year.

Series All Even

The Jersey Skeeters, though last in the Eastern League race are tied with the locals at 1 to 1 in games played, and last week avenged an earlier season 7-to-0 rout by turning on the Skeeters in River Vale, N. J., 3 to 2.

Both of these games, incidentally, have bristled with aggressiveness, and one of the few major penalties of the season was administered the offending players last week, when a free for all that for a time threatened to halt hostilities ensued.

Coach Redvers (Red) Mackenzie emphasized that he is centering his attention on a one-two Eastern League finish and that the Eagles definitely are in the running for the pennant.

Johnny Gagnon Shows Way With Two Goals; 11,000 Watch Game

By the Associated Press

Montreal, Dec. 7.—The Montreal Canadiens, with the veteran Johnny Gagnon showing the way with two goals, defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-1, here tonight before the largest crowd of the home season—11,300 howling fans.

The victory put the Canadiens into a first place tie in the National Hockey League with Toronto.

With the Gagnon-Toe Blacke-Paul Haynes line supplying most of the punch, the flying Frenchmen checked the Leafs to a standstill and scored a goal in the first period, two more in the second and one more in the third.

The Maple Leafs' marker was scored by Gordon Drillon, the hefty right wingman who was the league scoring champion in the 1937-38 season and who is leading all other marksmen at the present with nine goals and five assists.

Blackhawks Beat Americans, 2 to 1

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Chicago's Blackhawks ended their three-game losing streak at home with a 2 to 1 National League triumph tonight over the New York Americans. Only 7,423 saw the game. The victory enabled Chicago to climb into a fourth place tie with New York's Rangers.

The Hawks went ahead in the first period on a goal by Des Smith unassisted, and added another in the second when Bill Thoms counted after assists by Mush March and Doug Bentley. Tommy Anderson retaliated for the Americans late in the second period and thereafter the Hawks were called upon to withstand frequent and hard rushes by the New Yorkers.

Police Boys Club 135-Pound Grid Title at Stake Sunday

No. 4, Current Leaders, Play No. 5 For Second Time on West Potomac

The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club 135-pound football league reaches its climax Sunday when, for the second time, the elevens of No. 4 and No. 5 clash at 1 p. m., on the West Potomac gridiron for the championship.

A 7-7 tie and a sudden outbreak of intense rivalry was the result of the first meeting of the two teams. Gilly Eslin, No. 5's star halfback, took a punt on his own 40-yard line and ran 60 yards to score in that game, but No. 4 came back and marched 75 yards to a score with Kelpy leading the way.

No. 4 stands at the top of the league with only one tie, while No. 5 has but two ties to mar its record.

New faces will appear in the No. 4 lineup when Billy Haek, Bill Ickes and Carroll Hall return to the squad. Hall has been out with a dislocated shoulder received early in the season against Capital Plaza.

Bobby Hart, former Eastern and Wilson Teachers College backfield star, also will be in the lineup for the Southeast lads.

$10,000 Offered For Jeffra, Archibald Go

That man with the $10,000 is here again—it's Max Waxman offering to put up that amount once more as a guarantee for a return title bout between his fighter, Baltimore's Harry Jeffra, and Featherweight Champion Joe Archibald.

Waxman's proposal was made in a conversation with Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday about Jeffra's eight-round match with Jersey City's Johnny Buff Monday night at Turner's arena.

In a spectacular and slightly mysterious move last summer, Waxman hove into town with a bag containing $10,000 and turned it over to his fellow New Yorker, and Archibald's manager, Al Weill, who came down for the occasion.

That move brought on Chapter 1, of the Archibald-Jeffra title struggle and ended up on a bilious note with Archibald retaining his crown by virtue of a poor decision.

Notifying Heinie Miller, National Boxing Association president, of Waxman's action, Ahearn was assured that the N. B. A. would lend its voice in insisting that Archibald give Jeffra another chance at the title.

The Baltimorean's fight here Monday is touted as the first step in a winter campaign toward a return match to be staged in Griffith Stadium next summer—if Archibald hasn't lost his crowd "officially" by that time. He's been knocked out by Pete Scalzo and beaten by Simon Chavez, but those fights were "unofficial"—no title was involved.

Jeffra arrives in Washington tomorrow to conclude training for Buff, a comparatively unknown featherweight. Ten per cent of the fight gate will be turned over to a Christmas fund for underpriviledged children.

Engineer 'Sees' Covered Ball Parks in 15 Years

Cincinnati, Dec. 7 (AP).—Without batting an eye, a pioneer in the baseball park lighting business predicted today that within 15 years the game that was born a century ago in a cow pasture would be played entirely under a roof day or night—and the weatherman could go hang.

"Don't call me a nut," pleaded R. J. Swackhamer, illuminating engineer for one of the big electrical companies. "They wanted to turn me over to the sheriff in 1930 when I put in the first baseball lighting system in Des Moines and said it wouldn't be long before the major leagues would do it."

Georgetown Prep Cagers Rout St. Paul's

Football Players Star as Little Hoyas Triumph, 40 to 13

Georgetown Prep's football stars, Bud Eckrich and Ben Decker, blossomed out as basketball stars last night at Garrett Park and led the little Hoya quintet to a 40-13 victory over St. Paul's of Washington.

Eckrich, center, who was fullback on the 1939 eleven, was high scorer of the night with 12 points, and Decker, quarterback, was second with 11 points.

The Little Hoyas, playing their first game under Coach Tommy Cady, took an early lead and had a 19-6 advantage at the half. St. Paul's Lynch was high scorer with six points for the losers. Georgetown Prep plays Richard Montgomery High, of Rockville, Md., Tuesday night in Rockville.

Patent Office Wins In Table Tennis, 9-0

Patent Office table tennis team scored a six-game advantage in the Federal Table Tennis League last night at Chevy Chase Ice Palace, downing R. E. A. No. 1, 9-0, to pick up a full game on the second place Justice paddlers, which were walloping the third place Agriculture combine, 8-1, thereby increasing their runner-up advantage to 14 games. In the other match, Archives downed R. E. A. No. 2 easily by an 8-1 score.

Pirce Wolfe Rolls 463 Set In Pin League

164 Game Included In College Park Businessmen's Loop

Perce Wolfe tacked three lusty games together for a 463 set total in the College Park Business Men's League last night in the nearby Maryland alleys, one of the highest sets of the season in any pin loop.

Wolfe, who ranked twenty-seventh nationally last season and is a frequent local sweepstakes winner, started with a 132, added 164 and finished 147 for the count. His total was in vain as far as his team was concerned, however, as his Del Rio mates dropped two to Happy and Gay, with "Handsome" Fitzgerald leading the winners.

MT. RAINIER

Chet Lilley held a hot hand for all three games in a Mt. Rainier League session at the Suburban Alleys, leading his Smith's Tavern mates with a 158 game and totaling 441 for the set, another unusually high total.

Dr. Pepper had high team game of 651 in an odd game triumph over Fire Department while set honors went to Russell Motors, with an 1,817 count that was good for a triple triumph.

ICE PALACE

Bill Williamson led his Fuller and D'Albert five to the lead in the Reproduction Trades League at the Ice Palace, rolling a 137 game and 377 set in a triple victory over Leet Brothers. The winners also copped team honors with a 556 game and a 1,617 set.

PETWORTH

Helen Bailey was best of the night in Intersorority League action at Petworth, posting 143 game and 336 set that also stood up for high total. Chi Sigma No. 1, aided by Miss Bailey's score, posted high-team set of 1,530.

LUCKY STRIKE

Four sets over the 375 mark were turned in by the National Capital League pinmen at Lucky Strike, Elmer Welsy rolling 155-381 in leading Diamond Cab to an odd-game victory over Shaffer Flowers, Abe Povich posting 153-396, Pete Metrakos, 382, and Russell Parks a 375. Jimmy Moore tossed in a 153 game.

Harriet Buck was tops in totals in the Women's Procurement League at Lucky Strike, with a 129 game and 337 set, while her Demons team won two out of three over Comics. Umpires led the team scores with 494 and 1,313 in a shutout over Busy Bees.

ARCADIA

High team game in the Veterans Bureau League at Arcadia finished in a tie between Control Accounts and Dependents Claims, each with 468, while the former rolled the highest set total of 1,388. Phyllis Hess, with a 120 game for Construction and Celia Hartznell, with 321, for Dependents Claims, were best in their class.

Federal Trade made off with individual and game honors in the Federal Ladies' League at Arcadia, the team with 541 and Nettie Dawson, a member, with 140. Elise Whiton's 343 set was high, while Aggies team set of 1,490 couldn't be beat.

Ray Moore's 154 game helped him sweep the individual honors in the War Department League at Arcadia, his 379 leading the set totals while Washington Aqueduct and Barbettes split team honors with 623 for the former, high game, and a 1,785 set for Barbettes.

RECREATION

Raleigh Haberdashers pinmen upset the defending champion Woodward & Lothrop quintent three straight in the Department Store League at Recreation and took over first place. Kann's won two to stay just a game back while Garfinckel's fell out of the lead when losing the odd one to The Hecht Co. Kann's had 637 and 1,777 for team honors. Jeleff's, over Lansburgh's, and Guy Curran over Credit Bureau.

QUEEN PIN

High sets were the rage in the Southeast League at Queen Pin, including a 409 for Ollie Pacini, 391 for Harry Brown, a 410 for Lou Chipouras and a 95 for aonther Lou, Placoes. Frank Mischou had 367 and Arthur Nelson 363.

Quality Shop had three team games over the 600 mark and a 1,815 set in winning three over Dargan's. "Reds" Megaw starred with a seven-pin count on a spare in the final box to salvage one game for his City Baking line-up against Bantam Press.

COLUMBIA

Johnny Compton's 148-game and 407 high team set paced the rolling for the Interior league-leading National Capital Parks team as they took two out of three from Indian, with a 597 high team game and 1,746 set. Morris Facers, of Fisheries, had a 162 high game for the night as his team downed Classification. Engineers took three from Reclamation.

Brewers Beat Barons, 31-20, as Bloom Stars

Capacity Crowd Sees Heurich Team Open Home Season; Brewers Buy Dubilier, High-Scoring Wilkes-Barre Forward

Led by Big Mike Bloom, former all-American court star of Temple University, Heurich Brewers opened its home season in the American Professional League by handing the Wilkes-Barre Barons a 31-to-20 defeat before a capacity crowd last night at the Heurich gym.

The rewers went into an early lead, and although it changed hands several times, the local club never was in trouble. Dick Lee, a new addition to the Brewers, opened the scoring by sinking a foul shot, and a few seconds later, Bloom scored another foul. Lee then sank the first basket of the game, making it 4 to 0 for the Heurich club. Moe Dubilier and Mickey Schoenfeld sparked a late Baron rally in this period and the Barons rallied to pull ahead of the Brewers 10 to 6 as the first period ended.

Brewers Turn On the Heat

In the second period, the Barons were only able to score 1 point, that being a foul shot by Moe Dubilier, while the Brewers turned on the heat to score 9 points. Jake Goldfadden and Bloom were outstanding in this period.

Dib Martens and Schoenfeld attempted to keep the visiting Barons in the game, but the locals managed to keep its lead with a late rally in the last period which saw Bloom and Lee hitting the cords with two baskets apiece.

Frank Filchok, forward passing star of the Redskins, tossed up the ball to start the game, and Jimmy Bake acted as master of ceremonies for the evening. Between periods the crowd was serenaded by the Southeast Ramblers, a quintet of colored boys, who sang popular songs. They were received with a shower of coins.

Brewers Buy Dubilier

After the game, Manager McDonald announced the purchase of Moe Dubilier, high-scoring forward of the Barons.

Moe was the second high scorer in the league last year. A former student at John Marshall Law School in Jersey City, Dubilier came into the league four years ago, first playing with the New York Jewels. Last year he played the entire season with Wilkes-Barre.

Ernie Dusek Beats Joe Cox

Referee Benny Bortnick awarded Ernie Dusek the decision over Joe Cox on last night's charity wrestling show at Turner's arena and then beat a hasty retreat before the charge of Cox and an irate throng of about 1,500.

Twice Cox pinned Dusek for the count, but Ernie managed to edge his cranium out of the ring each time, thus making it illegal—a fact which seemed to irritate Joe when he finally stretched out long enough for Benny to count him out.

Ernie tossed Joe out to the spectators once. They tossed him back. When the end came, Bortnick, who holds the record for having his decisions booed the longest (7½ minutes) suddenly disappeared, apparently not wishing to be around for the usual ringside brawl which followed. Ten per cent of the gate was turned over to a Christmas fund for underprivileged children by Promoter Joe Turner.

The supporting struggles saw Jack Hader down Ralph Garibaldi in 20 minutes; Alan Eustace and Bibber McCoy draw; Bob Wagner beat Jim Casey in 17 minutes, and Abie Coleman defeat Chief White Feather.

It's '30' for Fielding H. Yost As He Presides for Last Time

Wolverines' Coach Chairman Today at Conference Meeting

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Michigan's grand old man of football, Fielding H. Yost, will "call signals" for the Western Conference tomorrow—for the last time.

The Wolverine athletic director will preside as chairman at the annual Big Ten winter meetings, the chairmanship being an honor which rotates among the conference directors and which "Hurry Up" last held a decade ago.

He does not plan to retire until he is 70—April 30, 1941—but when he does he will be able to look back on a glory-filled coaching career, studded with great teams such as his "point a minute" elevens and with all-time, All-America stars such as Willie Heston and "Germany" Schulz. But Yost right now is looking ahead—not backward.

"This season I saw the best football played in the Big Ten in many years," he said enthusiastically. "Blocking and tackling were sharper. Long passing plays worked better. The game generally was better than it has been in practically every department. Teams now are handling the ball 10 times as much as they did 10 years ago because of the spinner and reverse plays—and handling it better.

"Boys are learning to punt better—and punting is the hardest part of the game in which to acquire real skill. This boy at Illinois, Ralph Ehni, was one of the finest kickers I've seen in years—ranking with some of Michigan's greatest kickers such as Ev Sweely and Harry Kipke."

In addition to routine schedule making, Big Ten officials may attempt to more clearly define regulations governing the conference—specifically those involving athletic directors and faculty representatives. In addition, Chicago may fight for approval of a plan to make transfer students eligible in the hope of strengthening the Maroon football team. Maj. John L. Griffith, confined to his home by illness, will miss the meeting for the first time since he was appointed Big Ten commissioner 17 years ago, and Yost faces a busy two days.

FIELDING YOST

Ring Tourney In Semifinals

The soft music a fighter is supposed to near when his chin runs into a hard punch will be real tonight when 18 amateur fighters square off in semifinal championship matches in the District A. A. U. tourney at Turner's Arena.

To lend color to the simon-pure show, the Knights of Columbus' 40-piece band will be on hand to give forth with various military airs between fights—nine in all, beginning at 8:30 p. m.

One of the trophies offered in the boxing tourney is being put up by the Knights of Columbus—the senior championship cup.

Fights tonight start in the 126-pound class—which probably will steal the show for telling action—and end with the 175-pounders.

Reds Vernon, highly regarded Police Boys Club No. 4 entrant, clashes with Leo Marcopolis, of No. 5, in what the pros call the featherweight division. This fight is expected to share the spotlight with the 147-pound battle between Bob Williams, unattached, and Bill Weaver, jr., of the National Guard.

The three-round battlers who don't stop slugging a minute while they are in there will be pointing toward next Friday's final amateur title bouts, and plenty of action is the aim.

The complete card:

Novice Class (Semifinals)

126 POUNDS—Leo Marcopolis (Police No. 5) vs. Reds Vernon (Police No. 4).

135 POUNDS—Kenny Swann (Police No. 5) vs. Tom Johns (St. Mary's); Carl Steele (St. Mary's) vs. Bernie Morris (unattached).

147 POUNDS—Ed Alexander (unattached) vs. Bernie Cook (St. Mary's); Bob Lester (unattached) vs. Bill Francis (unattached).

Senior Class (Semifinals)

147 POUNDS—R. W. Williams (unattached) vs. Bill Weaver, jr. (National Guard).

160 POUNDS—Roy Dunn (National Guard) vs. Frank Cuddy (unattached); John Rodgers (National Guard) vs. Charles Maimone (Police No. 5).

175 POUNDS—Malcolm Rink (unattached) vs. Jim Brady (unattached).

Eastern Women's, Payne Cup Play on '40 Golf Schedule

Mrs. Lacey Reelected President

Eastern Title Play Set for Baltimore; Mrs. Davy Donates 'Mrs. Payne Trophy'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Two added events for the 1940 women's golf schedule were announced at the eighteenth annual meeting of the District Women's Association yesterday at Columbia Club. The Eastern Championship will be played in Baltimore in mid-June, while a tournament will be added, a three-day medal play event at Congressional Country Club for the better golfers.

The latter event will be for the Lillian Payne Trophy, honoring the former three-time president of the organization and donated by Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional Club champion. It will be under the auspices of the Maryland State Association, and limited to players with handicaps of 10 or less.

Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, the nominating committee's choice for a second term, was re-elected president in a routine action of the 103 members present, while the only other officer carried over was First Vice President Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, of Manor.

Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Chevy Chase, as second vice president, Mrs. R. L. Hutchinson, Washington, secretary, and Mrs. P. J. Winkler, Congressional treasurer, were new officers that will serve with Mrs. Lacey for the coming season. The nominating committee was headed by Mrs. J. C. Dale, Kenwood.

The outgoing officers, all resigned, included Mrs. George C. Roney, Washington, second vice president; Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring, secretary, and Mrs. Theodore D. Peyser, Woodmont, who completed her fourth year as treasurer of the organization.

Record Reports

Other business in the meeting was the reports of the various committee chairman on the affairs of the 1939 season, the biggest in the history of the organization from the standpoint of tournament entries and the treasurer's report.

Reports read and passed included those of Mrs. Peyser, treasurer; Mrs. C. E. McGowan, assistant tournament chairman who acted in the absence of Mrs. Frank H. Kramer; Mrs. Bullock, secretary; Mrs. Coolican, team captain; Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, intercity team captain; Mrs. C. L. Valle, rules, in the absence of Mrs. S. Whipple; Mrs. P. J. Winkler, handicaps, in the absence of Mrs. V. A. Welte; Mrs. Edward Widmayer, year book; Mrs. Lacey, the president's report; Mrs. John A. Lever, prizes, and Mrs. Dale, the nominating committee.

Several recommendations were made for the 1940 play, that will be taken up at later meetings, including the problem of excessive entries for several of the trophy tournaments that make the fields unwieldly, the most serious task confronting the organization. Mrs. Lacey will name a committee next week to cope with this situation.

Tourney Date Set

Others included one by Mrs. Landra Platt on including Maryland State golfers on the intercity team for the Philadelphia matches, as they use Reading, Pa., and other players, and another to increase the substitutes on the team, by Mrs. Dowdall. Another was to increase the local third team to six players.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, district chairman of the Maryland State women's body, announced through Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of Baltimore, that the Eastern women's championship would be played at the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club, June 11, 12 and 13, over the 54-hole medal-play route. Players with handicaps of 15 and under will be eligible, and the clubs must belong to the association, with dues of only $5 per year. It has never been played closer than Philadelphia, and was played this year at Charles River, C. C., and won by Mrs. H. Warren Beard.

Mrs. Davy's plan in the Payne Trophy tournament is one tournament for just the low handicap players, to be played in Washington and Baltimore on alternate years, and always at Congressional, home club of Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Davy, when in this city. Three gross prizes will be awarded and it will probably be played in the spring. Details will be announced later.

Mrs. Lacey was presented a bouquet of roses by Mrs. Gale Pugh, on behalf of Mrs. W. B. Jarvis and the host club women's golf committee. Special votes of thanks were accorded Mrs. Lacey, Mrs. Peyser and Mrs. Lever.

Joe Cronin Named Manager of A. L. All-Stars Next Year

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Dec. 7.—The American League voted tonight to end the precedent of the championship manager handling the league's team in the annual all-star baseball game.

As soon as the resolution was adopted the league named Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, to manage the junior circuit team in the 1940 game.

A manager for each subsequent game will be designated by the club owners of the American League in advance of the game.

Herb Kopf Signs 5-Year Contract

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Herr Kopf signed a new contract today for five more years as athletic director and head football coach at Manhattan College, thereby ending reports that the Jaspers were planning to quit intercollegiate gridironing.

Kopf, who came to Manhattan for the 1938 season after several years as assistant to Lou Little at Columbia, still had another year to go on his original three-year contract with Manhattan. The old document was torn up, however, and the new five-year paper goes into effect today, the college announced.

Farkas Signs For 3 Years With 'Skins

Gene Buck, ASCAP President, Advised Return, Star Back Says

Catholic Church in Detroit. The couple will honeymoon in Los Angeles, where Farkas expects to play in the annual All-Star game around the first week in January.

Asked where he and his bride would make their permanent home, Farkas said he was considering several places, but he "would like to live in Washington if possible."

The 23-year-old, 190-pound fullback who this season established a new National League touchdown scoring record with 11 goal-crossing jaunts, has been offered an attractive position with a local corporation. Terms have already been discussed and only Farkas okay remains to be given before one of the city's fairest adopted sons will be brought much closer to his many admirers.

With the signing of Farkas at an unrevealed figure (reputedly at about $3,500 a season), the Redskins are assured the continued services of three of their outstanding backfield stars of 1939.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh, one of the league's most deadly passers and probably its greatest kicker, and Ernie Pinckert, blocker and defensive man de luxe, are in the fold. Baugh and Farkas are the only Redskins ever to receive three-year contracts.

The only Redskin stars who are doubtful signers are Turk Edwards, tackle, and Jim Barber, guard. Both are advanced in years, as professional football players go, and have been threatening to retire to a softer living for several years. Marshall expects both of them to be back next year.

Edwards, Don Irwin and Charley Malone are presently employed by local business firms and expect to live here during the off-season. The signing of Malone and Wayne Millner, his running mate at end, is only a matter of time, Marshall said yesterday. Malone and Edwards were in conference with their boss and with Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday.

Far Western 'Little' Teams Are Leaders

Little All-American Has 3 West Players; 2 From East, South

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 7.—Powered by a couple of backs who scored 227 points between them and pushed the ball forward nearly two miles, the Associated Press' 1939 Little-All-America football team emerged from the small colleges today as an outfit that could get along in any league.

Led by the Far West, where the flourishing number of strong small-college teams resulted in that area winning three places on the first-team eleven, the Little All-America boasts a backfield averaging 184 pounds operating behind a 191-pound line.

The East, South and Midwest each gained two positions on the "varsity," and the Rocky Mountain and Southwest split the other two.

All but one of the first-team eleven, Tony Canadeo, Gonzaga University halfback and a standout ballcarrier on the Pacific Northwest, are seniors. Canadeo, a junior, comes from Chicago.

Heading the backfield quartet are two high-geared offensive ballcarriers, Lloyd Madden, of Colorado Mines, and Sam Hammerstrom, of Union (N. Y.) College. Madden, one of the fastest in the country, was the Nation's high scorer with 141 points. Hammerstrom led the East in point-making with 86.

Madden advanced 1,316 yards, net, on rushes, kick returns, runs with passes and stolen passes. He had 92 chances with the ball, averaging 14 yards each time. In running through or around the line, alone, he gained 870 yards in 79 trips, for an 11-plus average. Offensively, he was "Mr. Big" throughout Colorado Mines unbeaten season.

Hammerstrom was a triple-threater for union, but shone most in running the ball. He rushed a total of 1,100 yards during the season and, like Madden, was the main cog in an unbeaten machine.

Bogus Tickets For Pro Game In Milwaukee

Scalpers Are Also Having a Big Time With the Tickets

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, Dec. 7.—There is much ado in this temporary capital of pro football, for scalpers have cornered scattered blocks of choice seats and there are reports of counterfeiting of tickets to Sunday's New York Giants-Green Bay Packers championship game.

Lee Joannes, president of the Packers, took official notice of the counterfeiting reports by announcing that his club would pay $250 reward for evidence leading to conviction of anyone selling bogus tickets.

Warns Ticket Buyers

He warned the fans to make sure that their tickets came from authorized sales agencies.

The club's attorney told Mayor Daniel W. Hoan he had heard 1,500 fake tickets had been printed here and were being sold for $10 each. At the mayor's suggestion, he then consulted the chief of police.

The management of State Fair Park, site of the game, announced that persons able to identify bona-fide tickets would be on hand at the gates to protect holders of legitimate pasteboards.

Sellout Assured

The park seating facilities have been enlarged to accommodate 32,000 and a sellout is evident, assuring an $80,000 gate. Nothing but the lowest-priced seats, far removed from the gridiron, were available today.

Under these conditions, scalpers hoped for a golden harvest. Top-priced seats, which sold for $4.40, were offered at two for $30. One fan was informed by telephone that he could get a $3.30 ticket for $10.

Otto La Budde, Internal Revenue collector, has sent out spotters in an attempt to make sure Uncle Sam is remembered by the scalpers both in the matter of income and amusement taxes.

Giants Leave For Milwaukee

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—The New York Giants, defending titleholders in the National Professional Football League, left today for their championship playoff game with the Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee Sunday.

They were led by Assistant Coach Bo Molenda in place of Head Pilot Steve Owen. Owen's mother, Mrs. Isabel Owen, of Kinsley, Kans., died here yesterday, and Owen probably will not rejoin the team in time for the game. Mrs. Owen will be buried in Kansas.

The Giants held a brief workout this morning before entraining. All hands, including Tuffy Leemans, the No. 1 back, who had an infected leg last week, reported in playing condition, but the team seemed depressed, regardless.

Many looked forward to the fact that the Giants would have few rooters in the crowd Sunday.

In addition, there appeared a noticeable letdown from the high spirit with which the team went into last Sunday's Eastern championship battle against the Washington Redskins.

Locally, bookmakers were quoting the Packers favorites at odds of 5 to 7.

Vols' Star Voted Outstanding Player

Clinton, S. C., Dec. 7 (AP).—President W. P. Jacobs, of Presbyterian College announced today that Sam Bartholomew, cocaptain of the undefeated Tennessee football team, had been voted best blocking back in the Southeastern Conference.

The trophy, donated annually by Jacobs to the player chosen by ballot of the Conference coaches, will be presented to Bartholomew Tuesday night at a banquet here. Similar trophies also offered by Jacobs will be presented to Jimmy Riggold, of Wake Forest, winner in the Southern Conference, and to June Moore, Presbyterian College, winne rin the State.

It is the second consecutive year that Bartholomew has been chosen as best blocker in his conference.

Presidents, Arrows Meet for Title

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—The Richmond Arrows must meet the Washington Presidents on December 16 or 17 in the playoff of a postponed Dixie League game which will decide the championship of the pro football loop.

If the Arrows win they would have undisputed claim on the league title.

Fans Appeal for Revised Ruling On Field Goal, Letters Reveal

Protests of Referee Bill Halloran's ruling on Bo Russell's attempted field goal for the Redskins against the Giants Sunday in New York continued to pour into the offices of The Post yesterday. Almost to a man, the fans think the decision was incorrect and that changes should be effected to guard against repetition. What is your opinion? Send your letters to the Sports Department of The Post.

Better Seats Needed

Sports Editor:

We want to add our protest to the . . . much disputed and discussed "outside kick" . . . since nothing can be done at this late date, we do think such a decision is far too important to leave to just one man. It didn't seem to us so many thousand people could be wrong . . . it looked good from our angle . . . but we do think Redskin fans should be entitled to better seats . . .

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Pettingill.
4300 Third street northwest.

Players Acted Beaten

Sports Editor:

Why did so many Giant players act as players would when they think they have just been beaten? I think the plan of a "lightning eye" would be very feasible . . .

James Trundle,
Ashton, Md.

Unsportsmanlike Hicks

Sports Editor:

Yesterday's goings-on at the Polo Grounds in New York and today's newspaper repercussions confirmed an old theory of mine—that the people of Washington are as provincial a bunch of unsportsmanlike hicks as exist in these United States.

I was raised in Connecticut . . . Listening to the broadcast of the game on the radio, I heard the announcer expressing the fervent hope "we" could come from behind. The Redskins were licked . . . the referee's decision is final, and there is no appeal. . . . The Giants are being called lucky, and that's a laugh. They dominated the whole game. . . .

Thomas E. McMorrow,
Washington, D. C.

Saw Kick in Mind

Sports Editor:

It remains . . . only for me to say that, sitting quietly before my radio . . . seeing the game 100 per cent with my mind, I clearly saw that the kick was good. And please, gentlemen, do not let the fact that I had five bucks on the Redskins lead you to discredit the accuracy of my mental perception. What the mind sees is final and real. I refer you to Descartes.

T. Lefoy Richman,

Electric Eye Needed

Sports Editor:

I suggest some sort of an electric eye which would shine straight up from the goal post and toward the inside so that should the ball go through that light it would break a contact which would light a light or ring a bell . . . another suggestion is to get a good dependable kicker like Riley Smith or Tilley Manton.

Alden H. Whitney, jr.
132 Longfellow street northwest.

Watches Players

Sports Editor:

I have seen every home game of the Washington Redskins and have made the trip to New York each year for this final game. My policy in all close decisions is to watch the action of the players. In this play (Bo Russell's kick) the 22 men on the field acted as though they thought the kick good, and everyone over in the stands where I stood thought the kick good. . .

Charles H. Flagg.
915 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Reply to 'Scallions'

Sports Editor:

Being one of the Redskins' most avid rooters, and voluntarily speaking for thousands of others, I wish to reply to Mr. Joseph (Scallions) Francke's attack upon our so-called "poor sportsmanship" in Thursday's column. . . .

May I state first that sitting in section 44, directly behind the much-debated goal posts, our crowd and all New York fans in the vicinity were of the opinion the kick was good.

Secondly, Mr. Francke's eloquent (?) arguments are founded on a very insecure basis, for since when does the so-called "best team" come to be recognized as the ultimate victor . . . the Giants themselves have disproved his contention many times this season. . . .

In his last argument he has taken the weakest of all comparisons in the Professional League—comparative scores, which have been proven time and again to mean nothing . . . so to Mr. Francke, who might have saved a lot of time by throwing his letter in the basket before mailing it, I return his "scallions" in profusion—with a few "raspberries" of my own thrown in.

J. Haring,
3118 Tennyson Street northwest.

Royal Cross Wins Half-Length Victory at Charles Town

5-Year-Old Gelding Near Track Record

Clapair Runs Second Four Lengths Ahead Of Dulie; Winner Pays $10 Mutuel

By a Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 7.—D. N. Gilpin's Royal Cross came back to his favorite track today and drove to a half-length decision in the featured fifth race. In turning in a smashing victory, the 5-year-old gelding was only a fifth of a second over the track record of 1:15 1-5, held by Lady Buck, for the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs. Royal Cross holds the mark for 6½ furlongs here. Today he carried 6 pounds more than Lady Buck did when she set the record.

Henry Pleet's Clapair, a recent graduate from the maiden ranks was second, four lengths in advance of C. M. Feltner's Dulie. Five other good sprinters competed with John Bosley's well-played Berwyn to be among those to finish "up the race track."

Conditioned by Claude Feltner, Royal Cross had a lukewarm backing in the mutuel department and paid a $10 mutuel.

The weather and track conditions were of the best ever enjoyed by this track at a winter meeting. The height of something or another was reached in midafternoon when a stable boy worked out a horse in his shirt sleeves.

Jockey "Never Grow Old" Obert clung to his honors as leading rider at the meeting by piloting his fourth winner aboard Scarlet O. in the sixth race.

Charles Town Charts

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1939.
(Compiled by Walter Haight.)
WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 1:33½. Off 1:34. Winner, E. R. Pike's ch. g. (3), by Cantier—Princess Julep. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROSIT, $7.60, $3.20, $2.60; TIMBER STORM, $3.60, $2.80; TARDY JEST, $8.20.

PROSIT took command at once, shook off TIMBER STORM to gain clear lead and held sway to end under drive. TIMBER STORM was hard ridden from start, could not stay with winner, but was best of others. TARDY JEST was forward factor throughout and weakened at close. BRAINCHILD was off in tangle and rallied mildly. CHIDE went evenly to stretch and tired. VONNIE and DAY SPRING could not keep up.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good for all but Dusty Wind from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:08. Off 2:13. Winner, P. H. Faulconer's blk. g. (2), by Trace Call—Litany. Trained by C. H. Fitzgerald. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:17⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALL IT, $13.00, $5.80, $4.20; DAWNSLIT, $11.80, $8.80; GROUCHY, $9.00.

CALL IT, lacking early speed, came to outside for racing room while bettering position and responded to punishment to be up in concluding strides. DAWNSLIT raced GAY PRANK into defeat to take command, but could not resist winner. GROUCHY raced forwardly on outside from start and weakened in closing 50 yards. ROYAL WANTON lacked early speed and closed full of run. DUSTY WIND was backing when start came. GAY PRANK set early pace and stopped. TRAPSHOT had early speed and quit badly.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:38. Off 2:42. Winner, S. E. Veitch's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAN AT ARMS, $9.00, $4.00, $3.60; WAUGH SCQTT, $3.20, $2.80; PROUD KING, $8.20.

MAN AT ARMS shook off STELLA HAMPTON to open good lead and withstood closing challenges of WAUGH SCOUT to hold away to end under light punishment. WAUGH SCOUT, in first flight from start, came to outside of leader when making bid, but hung in closing 20 yards. PROUD KING moved up menacingly on backstretch and then weakened. PUKKA HEAVEN saved ground, but tired. CLYMENE could not keep up.

Daily Double, CALL IT and MAN AT ARMS, Paid $87.40.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:05. Off 3:08. Winner, Mrs. O. B. Wearley's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONIANNA, $5.20, $3.80, $3.60; WORTHOWNING, $5.60, $3.80; HI ADA, $3.80.

TONIANNA, hard ridden to hold forward position going to first turn, was rated when KIRK ON went to top between calls, shook off challenge of HI ADA and held on under punishment in final stages. WORTHOWNING, slow to begin, went to contention boldly, saved ground entering stretch, but was held safe while under intermittent punishment in closing test while on inside. HI ADA was rushed to contention and weakened. POLISHER was well placed for a half and tired. QUATERNARY had early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:32½. Off 3:35½. Winner, D. N. Gilpin's gr. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL CROSS, $10.00, $4.20, $3.40; CLAPAIR, $3.20, $2.60; DULIE, $2.80.

ROYAL CROSS, off alertly, wore down BERWYN to get to front and withstood closing challenge of CLAPAIR. The latter was rushed to contention along backstretch, went into pocket and had to be steadied and runs in final drive. DULIE was hard ridden from start, while holding forward position and tired. PRINCE TURLEY showed a good effort. GOLDEN VEIN rallied mildly. BERWYN set good pace and stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:04. Winner, O. S. Jennings' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCARLET O, $6.40, $3.80, $2.60; GAY JAY, $11.60, $4.80; HOWARD, $2.40.

SCARLET O. rated while closest to pace of SONGSTOP, forged to front when put to drive and drew out gradually. GAY JAY improved position gradually and closed full of run. HOWARD bore out at turns and closed with good energy. SONGSTOP set good pace, weakened in final test. HASTINGS VIEW was keen forward factor for a half and weakened gradually. TUTTICURIO was knocked back soon after break and failed to recover.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:34. Winner, Mrs. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT CHANCE, $11.20, $4.00, $3.20; EASTER HOLIDAY, $3.20, $2.80; LAND OF SMILES, $4.20.

BRIGHT CHANCE, within striking distance from start, moved up along backstretch, went to EASTER HOLIDAY in stretch and was up in concluding strides. EASTER HOLIDAY, under heavy restraint while closer to early pace of QUO WARRANTO, took command when latter stopped and received little help from rider in final test. LAND OF SMILES was hard ridden from start, saved ground entering stretch and was held safe. QUO WARRANTO set early pace and quit. WANDER BIRD was prominent early.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

This track will have an electrical gate next year. The Puett gate people are making a 10-stall gate for use at the smaller Maryland tracks and Santa Anita is using a new magnetic gate that can be purchased outright by the race associations. A gate that would do away with long post delays would be a big asset to this track especially at the fall meeting when darkness creeps up on the last race each day. Then again, in summer it would get the crowd from Washington back home sooner. Sometimes as much as a half hour is lost during a program due to starting problems. I heard Art Brown, of WOL, yesterday morning. He said that I was running down the backstretch yelling "Come on, Dunlad." Well, I wasn't. If you want to know how we made him run better, we got one of the stable boys to drag a sack of oats around the track. Dunlad simply got on the trail and thought he was running down something to eat. At that, I believe Dunlad can beat that old model car Art is driving. The Tournuer Stable's Addis is the only horse to get postward twice during the meeting. There are so many horses being entered daily that some horses will have to get as many as six stars before they get postward. A star is allotted a horse every time it is named for a race, but failed to draw into same. During the first four days racing, no less than 1,349 entries were filed in the race secretary's office. W. A. Preston's Hardesty, a 10-year-old, has never won a race, according to Trainer S. L. Yates. Preston's Stella Hampton, also a 10-year-old, won her first race here last summer. An effort will be made next year to limit some of the veterans of racing, who slip into races every once in a while at this course. Fans playing post positions the first three days, would have collected four wagers had they played No. 4 lane in sprint races. Two horses won from No. 1, No. 4 and No. 5 lanes in distance races. Seventeen riders won races during the first three days, with Willie Obert, of Laurel, Md., being high with a trio of winners. Not a single trainer has been able to saddle two winners the first 21 races of the meeting. Mickey Brooks, who is visiting here, reports that Mrs. E. G. Lewis, whose horses are trained by Louis Feustel, has purchased the contract of the Apprentice Mike Caffarella, leading winner rider during the recent Bowie, Md., meeting. Caffarella, who will retain his 5-pound allowance until May, will ride in Florida this winter. BILL.

First race—Little Mowlee is a brisk breaker and will like this 4½-furlong route. Needs only to get off the reserve list. Irish Mirth has plenty of speed and is dangerous. Supreme Kin has taken the top on good ones and is a threat.

Second race—Happy Host has had a good rest and may be ready to crack down. Likes the short route and needs a hustling rider. Royal Veil runs good over this track and is reported to be fit. Irene's Bob would have to be dealt with if taken off the also-eligible list.

Third race—Emma H. turned in a good race on the milers and gets in action with light weight. May be the right one in a rather open race. Automat is a newcomer with plenty of foot and seems capable of being in the thick of contention. Locomotive for the show end.

Fourth race—Sir Isaac has turned in many wins this year and appears nicely placed in this field. If he can get off the reserve list, I'm going to string along. Bubbleworth comes back home and will like the light assignment. Golden Key probably will get a place in the money circle.

Fifth race—Big Fish has operated with success on the big time and, providing he can make the turns, he should take care of these. Tavern is taking off a load of weight and has been over the track once at the meeting. Ouragan may be a good thing.

Sixth race—Noble Scot did a lot of running over at Bowie and has an inside post position. May go to the top and forget to stop. Pencader likes the track. Easiest Way has had class but the turns may bother him.

Seventh race—Rosin is another which turned in a good effort at the Maryland track. Should have no trouble getting to the front and I expect him to be there at the end. Count Me and Wahcoo to take care of the place and show awards.

Eighth (substitute) race—If this race is used, I'll take Brilliant One, Braving Danger and High Betsy.

Freight Traffic For Week Tops 1938 and 1937

Total of 688,888 Cars Also Is 1.8 Per Cent Over Preceding Week

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended December 2 totaled 688,888 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 40,354 cars or 6.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1938 and an increase of 68,563 cars or 11.1 per cent above the same week in 1937.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of December 2 was an increase of 12,372 cars or 1.8 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 293,739 cars, an increase of 12,386 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 39,505 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 149,510 cars, an increase of 6,954 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 3,227 cars below the corresponding week in 1938.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 38,222 cars, an increase of 2,225 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 2,453 cars above the corresponding week in 1938. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week of December 2, totaled 17,208 cars, a decrease of 1,890 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 4,800 cars below the corresponding week in 1938.

Less Livestock

Livestock loading amounted to 13,554 cars a decrease of 225 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 3,127 cars below the corresponding week in 1938. In the Western district alone, loading of live stock for the week of December 2 totaled 9,867 cars, a decrease of 902 cars below the preceding week, and a decrease of 3,126 cars below the corresponding week in 1938.

Forest products loading totaled 34,764 cars, an increase of 1,541 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 6,036 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Coke loading amounted to 11,749 cars, an increase of 392 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 3,822 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

The Eastern, Allegheny and Pocahontas regions reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1938, but the Southern, Northwestern, Central Western and Southwestern reported decreases. All districts reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1937 except the Southern, Central Western and Southwestern.

Penn. R. R. Protests ICC's New Haven Plan

Attorneys for the Pennsylvania Railroad protested to the Interstate Commerce Commission that a proposed reorganization plan for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad would unjustly "wipe out" common stock in the New Haven. The protest was directed at a recommendation by Examiner Harvey H. Wilkinson.

Wilkinson's finding, said attorneys for the Pennsylvania, a stockholder in the New Haven, would "eliminate both the present preferred and common stocks as having no value."

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co., reported today that sales for the eleventh period of its fiscal year—November 6 to December 3—totaled $58,426,118, largest for the period in the company's history. The sales exceeded those of the like 1938 period by $7,161,491, or 14.5 per cent. Sales for the eleven periods aggregated $43,-180,472, compared with $442,-610,768 in the corresponding periods a year ago, an increase of $100,569,704, or 22.7 per cent, and also the largest for the eleven periods in the company's history.

Nolan and Booker D. C. Committee for Security Dealers

The National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., announced yesterday the appointment of James Parker Nolan, of Folger, Nolan & Co., Inc., and Y. E. Booker, of Y. E. Booker & Co., as the local business conduct committee of the National Association of Securities Dealers for the District of Columbia.

The local business conduct committee is delegated by the District committee to hear trade practice complaints in the District of Columbia area. The committee will recommend the disposition of the complaints to the District business conduct committee for district No. 11, which will make the final determination in each case, subject to appeal to the national body, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the courts. District No. 11 includes the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

Local business conduct committees for other areas in the district were appointed as follows: Maryland and West Virginia: Edward K. Dunn, of Robert Garrett & Sons, and Herbert W. Schaefer, of Herbert W. Schaefer & Co., both of Baltimore; Virginia: William Frazier, of Davenport & Co.; Walter S. Robertson, of Scott & Stringfellow; Beverley B. Munford, of Mason-Hagan, Inc., all of Richmond; W. Peyton May, of the Investment Corporation of Norfolk, Norfolk, and W. B. Bowles, jr., of W. B. Bowles, jr., & Co., Roanoke, and North Carolina: Oscar W. Burnett, of Oscar W. Burnett & Co., Inc., Greensboro, N. C.

The district business conduct committee is composed of the entire membership of the district committee. The district committee includes Mr. Nolan, Mr. Dunn, Mr. Frazier, Mr. Booker, Mr. Burnett and Mr. Schaefer.

Steel Output Sets New Monthly Record

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—November production of open-hearth and Bessemer steel ignots totaled 5,462,-616 gross tons, a new high monthly record, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today. This compared with the previous high of 5,393,821 tons set in October this year and with 3,558,363 tons in November, 1938. Until October the record production month had been May, 1929, with 5,286,246 tons.

November operations in the steel industry averaged 93.26 per cent of capacity, compared with 89.17 per cent in October and 61.81 per cent in November, 1938.

Private Construction Continues Climb

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Private engineering construction continued to boom during the week ended Tuesday as contracts awarded exceeded their respective 1938 values for the thirteenth consecutive week, Engineering Nws-Record reported today. Private awards were approximately equal to the previous week but 118 per cent greater than a year ago.

The construction awarded, however, aggregating $57,739,000, dropped 11 per cent below a year ago, although it was also practically unchanged from the preceding week. Public engineering contracts let, were 33 per cent below the corresponding week last year, more than offsetting the gain in private contracts and causing the decline in total awards.

Heavy Selling Topples Wheat From New High

December Crop Soars To 99½, Highest Price Since 1937

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Heavy buying, renewed with increasing vigor for a time in the grain pits today, pushed wheat prices upward 2 to 3 cents a bushel to the highest level since autumn, 1937, before profit takers rushed to sell.

December wheat soared to 99½, highest any contract has been quoted here since October 1937. In the final hour heavy selling poured into the pit from dealers who accepted profits ranging from a few cents up to more than 10 cents and priced reacted. Nevertheless, the market managed to close higher for the tenth consecutive session with gains of ⅝-1⅝ cents compared with yesterday's finish. December closed at 98⅛-¼ and May 94⅝-½.

Corn closed ⅝ lower to ½ higher, December 54⅝; May, 55¾-⅞; Oats, unchanged to ¼ higher; soy beans, ¼-1 cent up; rye, ⅞-1⅛ higher and lard, 7-15 higher.

The Market

Stock Prices Continue Moderate Recovery; Aviations, Motors, Steels, Rails Firm; Foreign Dollar Bonds Lower; Some Rails Up

New York, Dec. 7.—The stock market is one of the best forecasters of future business trends. At this period in our financial affairs the majority in the street are hoping that the commodity markets are the best forecaster for the stock market. For the commodities have been displaying a firmness that cannot be ignored and while the stock market also has done better since the beginning of December than it did at any time during November, it has lacked the zip of the futures markets.

One explanation has been the foreign influence. Belligerent nations naturally are never on the selling side as far as our commodity markets are concerned; what they need is supplies of wheat, cotton, all the metals and every other type of raw material. If they are in the market at all they are buyers.

But when it comes to securities, they are either sellers or else they sit on the sidelines. That has been one of the things that has been hurting our securities markets. When the war broke out in September the French and British consolidated the foreign holdings of their nationals and since that time they have seen to it that any liquidation was accomplished in an orderly manner, instead of being dumped on the market all in one piece, as happened in 1914.

Foreign Liquidation

This was all to our advantage, and it made it possible for the New York Stock Exchange and other American exchanges to stay open; whereas in 1914 they had to throw up their hands and close. But this has not stopped the liquidation. There is still a large quantity of stocks and bonds to be sold. The foreign countries have not been selling for a week, and during that time our market has made an effort to recover. On the other hand there has been no foreign buying and everyone in Wall street knows very well that just as soon as the stock market sticks its head up a little higher there will be a renewal of the foreign liquidation. This makes an essential difference between the present market in securities and that in commodities.

Trading today was in keeping with the firmer tone that has been noted during the other days of this month. There was a further moderate recovery, measuring 0.04 point in the composite average. There was a welcome increase in the volume of dealings, the turnover on the big board amounting to 1,005,470 shares.

Seaboard Air Line the Leader

Aviations did relatively better than the other departments while the motors, utilities, steels and rails were firm. Most active stock was Seaboard Air Line, which is in the lowest priced bracket of the rail division. Buying continued in United States Rubber, which advanced more than a point, the interest being a result of the proposal to take over the Fisk Rubber properties. A better market for sugar futures was reflected in a good demand for sugar shares, the most active being Cuban American which scored a good fractional gain.

A representative delegation of Wall street men attended the meeting at the town hall and they welcomed the observations made by Stock Exchange President William McC. Martin, jr., that government and business can work together if government by consent is not permitted to become government by coercion. The rank and file of Wall street employers and employes has come to the conclusion that since the passage of the various securities acts the attitude of official Washington has become one of governing the financial district by coercion because of the wide discretionary powers granted to administrators.

Cotton was a strong feature of the commodity markets, running up 17 to 25 points, while wheat added ⅝ to 1⅝ cents a bushel on the basis of lower Argentine production estimates coupled with poor prospects in the hard winter wheat belt. Sugar futures were up 2 to 8 points.

Bonds Irregular

Price movements in the listed bond market were irregular today in a turnover of $8,220,000. Both high grade investment issues and speculative bonds showed small changes in either direction. Attention again was drawn to the foreign section by fresh declines in Scandinavian issues, which are rated highly by all experts. Most other foreign dollar securities likewise were soft.

Norwegians and Danish bonds fell 2 to 6 points in fairly active trading. The offerings were not extraordinary, but buyers remained hesitant. In the thin resultant market many issues dropped to lowest figures in years. Finland 6s closed unchanged, but Helsinki 6½s receded. Canadian and Australian loans resumed their decline, while German bonds remained at their low levels. Latin-American default bonds were idle and mostly lower.

United States Treasury obligations improved fractionally despite the indications that refunding of the $1,378,000,000 notes due next March will receive consideration next week. The gains ranged from 1-32 to ¼ point, with longest term obligations in best demand. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also improved. Most high grade corporate issues drifted slightly lower, but there were some gains.

Among the speculative railroad bonds numerous issues showed advances, owing to special considerations, but there also were many losses. A few of the speculative industrials did well, but most holding company and share privilege bonds were dull.

Bankers Deplore Competition by U. S. Government

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—Banks of the Nation "should seek further opportunities to serve the public by judicious and understandable advertising and by getting out in the field and calling on customers and prospects," Giles H. Miller, president of the Virginia Bankers Association, suggested.

Miller, who is president of the Lynchburg National Bank & Trust Co., Lynchburg, made an address at the opening session of the Southern Regional Conference of the American Bankers Association. Referring to the independent, locally owned banks of America, he said:

"The unit system of banks is largely in favor in this country and this is as it should be, for the local bank can render a closer and more intimate service to its community than a bank managed and controlled through a distant city.

"One of the most serious problems confronting the banks today is Government competition. With the multiplicity of Government lending agencies, and more being proposed at each session of Congress, the banks are confronted with competition they cannot possibly meet, and this is going to result in enormous losses to the Government. "There never has been a time when our banks have been more able, more willing and in fact more eager to make loans."

Robert M. Hanes, president of the A. B. A. and president of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Winston Salem, N. C., told the conference "chartered banking is on trial today" and that "increasing efforts are being made to substitute for it Government credit institutions."

Alaska Salmon Pack 23.5% Under Last Year

San Francisco Dec. 7.—The 1939 pack of Alaska salmon is estimated at 5,136,400 cases, a decline of 23.5 per cent from the 1938 output, according to the current Business Outlook of the Wells Fargo Bank, San Francisco. This reduced production is reflected in lower canned salmon inventories, the unsold stocks of 2,644,417 cases on September 15 being 42 per cent under those on the same date last spring.

Prices are substantially above the levels of a year earlier, with recent quotations for red salmon (around $2.35 a dozen cans) 25 per cent higher than on the same date last year, and pink salmon quotations ($1.45 a dozen cans) 50 per cent higher.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

HORSEBACK RIDING IN BLUE ROOM! For the first time in history young ladies have gone horseback riding in a Washington night spot . . . "Baby Doll," the Shoreham's pony star approached the table of Mr. C. S. Borden of San Francisco, dining with his little daughters, four-year-old Beverly and two and one-half-year-old Bonny, and made unmistakeable signs that he wanted to take the little girls for a ride. Beverly delightedly cantered all around the Blue Room. By this time Bonny was bouncing up and down with impatience. So off she trotted around the dance floor . . . Papa Borden then asked "Baby Doll" to take him for a ride. But "Baby Doll" shook his head in an emphatic "No." . . . He'll remain at the Shoreham all next week, in case you have that equestrian urge.

NEW STARS ARRIVE. The night spot picture bristles with smart arrivals in the next few days. Here they are:

Metronome Room. Eddy Brandt and his Rhythm Boys Orchestra will sound off in the Metronome Room this evening . . . They come with the benisons of the Music Corporation of America, known as a backer of winners. You've often heard them on the big radio commercials, remember? . . . Eddy has written the scores of several musical comedy hits, is now working on another . . . Their singer is Phyllis Starr, who looks like one.

Troika. Lee Kerry, new singing emcee, will make a handsome bow at Troika tomorrow evening . . . He'll be introduced by Don Lamont, who has done such a fine chore of emcee-singing at Troika for the last few months. P. S. Lovely little Ballerina Bielinskaya will return to Troika on December 27. A grand Christmas present, if two days late.

Neptune Room. Glen Hardman, nationally known organist, and Grace Shannon's Trio will debut in Neptune tomorrow . . . Grace has made a notable name for herself on the radio . . . Her accomplices in rhythm are Accordionist Frank Meyer and Jack Sevier, who's fresh from Kansas City, play violin, sax and clarinet.

Del Rio. Nora Williams, mischievous singing clownette, will blossom out in Del Rio on Monday in conjunction with the big Max Zinder band . . . This gives you just today and tomorrow to enjoy the sweet canarying of Cleo Mayfield.

CONGRESSIONAL CHERCES. Shar-Zad's Bil' McCune is featuring the pet songs of various Congressmen and Senators each week . . . Representative Sol Bloom chose "The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring" . . . Wonder if Hamilton Fish will select "Three Little Fishies."

TICKLISH RHYTHMS. Mayflower Lounge. The new "It's a Hap-Hap-Happy Day" with "Ha-Cha" Gardner doing the Pollyanaing.

Lounge Riviera. "Love Beckoned on 'Fifty-second Street," another honey fresh from the songsmiths, as chanted roguishly by Adele Van.

Mayfair. The sleek and swifty piano acrobatics of Lyle Smith. He has that Vincent Lopez touch.

Anchor Room. Matt Windsor's rollicking gypsy music. He's a whole gypsy music ensemble in himself.

LOTUS VIEWS. Bill Strickland dedicates a number to the Beta Chi sorority girls lunching on the balcony . . . The magicking Maginis do tricks with rice that cause even the waiters to stop and look popeyed . . . Canary Alice Eilers sings "Good Morning" just for the Jewish World War Veterans' party . . . Clever dancers Jose and Mona actually do a new kind of spin. Mona catches her toes in her hands, makes a circle of herself as she's whirlwinded . . . Manager Dick Lam looks as chipper as can be, though he's fresh from a session of surgical cut-upping.

MAGICAL MAID. Dolly Reckless, the star dancer-magician at Bamboo Gardens, does all the tricks of the best men magicians, popping fiery cigarettes from nowhere and swallowing razor blades by the dozen. She's a brilliant acrobatic dancer, too. Note. Don't be surprised if Al Norton, lately of Bamboo, pops up in a new nightclub venture. If not, he may be coming back to Bamboo.

TABLOIDINGS. Russ Cullen of the Pall Mall Room and Ethel Fistere (Arthur Murray Studios) will collaborate on a tea dance to be given at 1223 Connecticut avenue on December 17 to collect Christmas toys and wearables for needy tots.

. . . The staff of the Ambassador Hotel will toss themselves a party on December 16 at the Woodmont Country Club. All hands will set sail for the Woodmont around midnight, being as it's Saturday . . . Arthur Todd, singing guitarist of the King Cole Room, has received flattering offers to do his warbling in Nassau and Bermuda during the winter. But he likes Washington . . . The dance floor has just been enlarged at Caprice, says Manager Daniel Wathey of the Roger Smith. The Rhythmaires' rhythms do have that dance lure.

OLD FRIENDS are pouring into River Bend these evenings to enjoy the dance music of George Stein, recently returned to his old stamping ground . . . George's new band is proving a zipperino . . . Practically all numbers they use are special arrangements made by either George, Singer Lee Mason or Harry Echols and finely adapted to the individual talents of the orchestreers.

GREAT BIG NIGHTINGALE. Owner Nightingale of the Nightingale (that's his real name) proudly asserts that he has the biggest spot and the biggest dance floor for miles around . . . He has a big band, too, in that 12-piece outfit of Bill Downer's. More than that, the Downerites produce a brand of swing that keeps the jitterbugs too, too happy.

VIBRAPHONING LEADER. The Fat Boy's maestro, DeVaughn Clements, is one of the most vivid vibraphone thumpers ever developed in the Capital. He has that sixth sense of rhythm that brings dance music to life. Just ask any of those enthusiastic dancers who regularly head their cars out New York avenue to the Fat Boy.

RED HOT. They may call it the Gay Nineties, but we don't believe grandpop ever danced to such music or had such a time for himself as is being dispensed at this new spot down on the Mount Vernon Boulevard . . . The entertainment is continuous. The dance music goes on forever, so far as we know.

CHICKEN DINNER DANCE. This grand affair is on tonight at Wharton's at 2719 Wilson Boulevard, Clarendon. Dance and eat all the chicken your little hearts desire for just one dollar. Who said anything about the high cost of living?

G. W. U. Unveils Swisher Portrait

A portrait of Dr. Charles Clinton Swisher, professor emeritus of history at George Washington University, was unveiled last night in the university library. It was Dr. Swisher's ninety-third birthday.

The portrait was presented by Harold Keats, nephew of Dr. Swisher, and was accepted for the university by Dr. Elmer L. Kayser, dean of university students. A reception to Dr. Swisher followed.

Woman Injured As Trolley Stops

Thrown head first against a fare box when the street car she was riding stopped when she was unprepared, at Connecticut avenue and M street northwest, yesterday Janet Grover, 39, of 1739 N street northwest, suffered skull injuries.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital in a taxicab and was released after treatment.

Police failed to obtain the name of the motorman, but said he made the quick stop to avoid striking an automobile.

EVERY AFTERNOON AND EVENING.
We think this is one of the finest units we have had in the Mayfair for a long time. Why not drop in today and hear them, long about cocktail time? Reading left to right:
★ FABYAN WRIGHT—that "slap that bass man."
★ HELEN REILLY—lovely soprano, formerly featured voice on "Myrt & Marge" radio program and C. B. S. sustaining artist.
★ LYLE SMITH—virtuoso of the vibraphone, piano, saxophone, accordion, clarinet and maybe more, we're not sure.
★ CUB HIGGINS—a hundred pounds or so of dynamic guitar.
Remember, for a memorable meal at a modest price or a potent pickup and a moment's relaxation, drop in the Mayfair "where your friends meet . . . and you meet your friends."

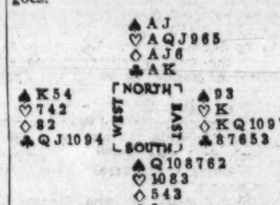
Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

J. W. sends an exciting slam hand in which the fall of a singleton king brought him victory. Here is his letter:

"This hand came up in play the other night right after your article about singleton kings and I thought you might be interested. The bidding is admittedly bad, but here goes:



"The bidding, with North dealer:

North	East	South	West
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT.	Pass
4 NT.	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 NT.	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

"I was South and almost fainted. I had bid five spades trying to show an almost Yarborough, but my partner had completely misunderstood. Anyway the opening was the queen of clubs, taken by the king in dummy. Then I played the ace of spades from the dummy, then the knave which West took with his king. He returned a club, which was taken by dummy's ace. At this point it looked to me like a horrible set, and the only chance seemed to me to set up my ten of hearts. So I led my ace of hearts. The king fell, which realized more than my wildest dreams and then I entered my hand with the ten of hearts, ran the spades and returned to a solid gold board with my small heart."

Listen! with Slocum

Any man who gets a new idea in radio is hailed as a genius by his coworkers and gorged with coin of the realm by his superiors. When the cheering dies down everybody is invariably struck by the same thought — "why didn't somebody think of that before."

There is a new serial getting under way tomorrow night at 7:30 on WJSV. It's entitled "Sky Blazers" and its theme is one of the most exciting things in this world today and yet it took all these years for somebody to think of it.

"Sky Blazers" will tell the story of aviation from the ancient legend of the man who tried to fly with wax wings and fell into the sea when they melted, right up to the still slightly unbelievable everyday episode of getting in a plane in Washington at 4 and getting out of it at 5:20 in New York.

"Sky Blazers" will be a half-hour dramatization to be heard each Saturday at the same time. Roscoe Turner, winner of hundreds of air trophies and world famous for his speed exploits, will be master of ceremonies on this new program and Phillips Lord, one of radio's finest production minds, will be in charge of the programs.

WJSV's "Washington Hour," a daily 30-minute period devoted to the finding and promotion of local talent, has bobbed up with another artist whose capabilities led to a week's engagement at the Earle Theater. He is Jack Dalton, a cowboy singer who actually sings on key.

Each month the Earle officials pick one of the artists on the "Washington Hour." These youthful performers are each given four chances during the course of a month. A full orchestra works behind them and they are granted ample rehearsal time so they get a better break than the average beginner with his constant fear of the hook.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS

It was two weeks since Dr. Chris Arden completed his internship and started a practice of his own. His first mistake was to rent an office and room from the shiftless Walters family but he had felt sorry for mild, inefficient Henry Walters and his drab, listless wife, Lily. They obviously needed the money. His sympathy did not lessen when he thought of their lazy daughter, Katie, and ne'er-do-well son, Dick. It is Sunday morning, and Chris descends the stairs to his office with a jaunty step. Chris has one patient that morning. Beverly Lewis, from the mansion on the hill, brings her terrier and apologetically asks him to remove a bone from the dog's throat. Beverly leaves in a huff when Chris refuses to accept a fee. Chris visits the hospital where he had trained. It's main support is Beverly's father, Staunton Lewis, local magnate and political power. Nettie Simpson, the old nurse in charge of the training school, loves Chris like a son and gives him a royal welcome. She makes him promise to come to her should he need financial aid. Next, Chris visits young Dr. Scott in the X-ray laboratory. The latter shows him an X-ray burn on his finger. Chris wonders if it is fair to Scott's family to have him jeopardize his health for science.

"Nobody who looks like that needs to be scared," said Martha

Chapter 6

He was in rather a somber mood when he reached the house, and the nowledge that his key in the door had caused some rapid, surreptitious motion in the hall inside, followed by the discovery that his waiting room was filled with smoke, made him scowl. But he went white-lipped with anger when he found an envelope on his desk, inclosing a $10 bill and the single word, "Thanks."

He got an envelope of his own, placed the bill in it, and sealed it. Then, still stiff with resentment, he addressed and stamped it, and carried it out to the mailbox. It was only on the way back that he suddenly laughed. He was thinking of Beverly Lewis when she received it the next morning.

Curiously enough, that evening marked a red-letter day in Chris's life, a day which had nothing to do with the Walters' or even with a girl with a stubborn chin. Between 8 and 9 two patients came in. One was the little seamstress from next door, who had run her machine needle through a finger.

"That's what I get for working on Sunday, Doctor."

"Nonsense! It's what you get for being overtired and careless."

The other was a retired clergyman. The clergy being exempt, the total receipts for the day were $1, forced on him by Miss Sophia Barker, dressmaking and tailoring.

However, he went upstairs that night to his sagging brass bed with considerable cheerfulness. Even the fact that on his approach Katie slammed her hallroom door with violence did not daunt him. He was humming a song as he took off his clothes and hung them in the shallow closet next to the fireplace. Then, in pajamas and dressing gown, he started, toothbrush in hand, to the bathroom.

Early as it was, the door to Dick's room was already locked, and, still humming, but with a gleam in his eyes, he simply hauled off and gave it a hard kick. The bolt flew off, and the door opened. As he suspected, Dick was not inside. With a grin he picked up the bolt and put it in his pocket. Then he completed his simple ablutions, went to bed and, armed with a book on the therapeutics of diarrhea, prepared to read himself to sleep.

That was before the World War. It is a forgotten period now, as though the world had slept between the turn of the century and that August 14 years later; but it was in fact a transition era, with iron hitching posts still in the streets, with country roads being paved for the new automobiles, which still scared the farm horses; with electric coupes, slow and dignified, warning city traffic with their bells; with airplanes still clumsy but accomplishing flight, and with new machinery competing with hand labor and inevitably winning the battle.

It was to this world that Beverly Lewis had been formally presented the winter before; putting on her sheer white undergarments and her white taffeta petticoat, and then stepping into the dress which had been made for her in Paris, long and feminine and youthful, and looking anxiously at her reflection in the long mirror.

She was excited and a little frightened. This was the beginning of life, and she knew very little about it. She had had four years of boarding school, could speak indifferent French, play good tennis and golf, was amiable but had her father's temper at times, and was, all in all, a rather lovely thing as she surveyed herself in the cheval glass that night under the admiring eyes of Martha, her mother's elderly maid.

"I'm scared, Martha."

"Nobody who looks like that needs to be scared," said Martha.

So she had gone down the stairs, her white draperies traling behind her. The orchestra had come and was tuning up at the back of the hall, and the drawing room looked strange, almost empty of furniture and banked with flowers. For a moment she stood there alone, a little frightened. This was the beginning of life, and life was like this, an empty room waiting to be filled.

Her flowers had gone to the hospital the next morning, and a jaunty young interne had pinched off a rosebud and worn it all day.

"What's happened, Chris? Celebrating?"

"I made my debut last night. Didn't you hear about it?"

Beverly had successful season, as Staunton Lewis's daughter was sure to have, and at the end of it was heart-whole and extremely weary. Only one man was carried over into the spring, cheerful but insistent. His name was Jarvis Ames, but he was called Jerry, Jerry Ames. For years to come she had only to close her eyes and see him as he had been that winter and spring, tall, blond, and debonair, proposing to her with cheerful regularity.

"What's wrong with me anyhow, Beverly? Most women rather like me!"

"Too many women like you," she would say. "I don't like competition."

He liked the fact that she was difficult. It gave some excitement to the pursuit, and women had been easy for him always, as she had said. Nevertheless she attracted him irresistably, her soft dark hair, her honest eyes, even that determined small chin of hers. She was a good playfellow, too.

"We're made for each other, Bev. Think of the fun we'd have."

"Is that your idea of marriage? It isn't mine."

Sometime he drank, and then he would be difficult to manage. Once she slapped him hard, and he sulked for a day or two. Then he was back, devil-may-care as ever, and asking her to kiss him on the spot.

"Look," he said. "Right there. Mamma kiss, eh?"

"Oh, don't be such an idiot," she told him. "I loathe men who drink."

Upon which he had solemnly taken out of his pocket a small white ribbon and pinned it to his lapel, and she had had to laugh.

He was irresistible in some ways, this Jerry Ames, handsome, rich with inherited money, humorous after his own fashion, and not too scrupulous about a number of things. But it was a bewildered Jerry who confronted her that Sunday night after she had met Chris Arden.

"I don't understand you, Bev. What's all this talk about work? I work, don't I?"

"If that's what you call it. You play at work, and you work at play."

"Where did you hear that?" he asked suspiciously. "And anyhow, what has that to do with you and me? I can work if I have to. I will if you say the word. But if you care for me—"

"I'm not sure that I do. Not in that way. I've tried to, Jerry."

"Tried! Good God, if you have to try—"

He had gone then, with a sort of angry finality, getting into his car and driving furiously down the hill and past a lighted window where, inside, Chris Arden was bending over Sophia Barker's injured finger, and the small sterilizer hissed and steamed beside the stationary washstand.

"Feel better now?"

"So much better. I've given you a lot of trouble, Doctor. And—how much do I owe you?"

"Nothing, of course. Aren't we neighbors?"

"But I must pay you, Doctor. I must, indeed."

In the end reluctantly he took a dollar from her, which made two in his pocket and gave forth a pleasant jingling sound which had been absent for some time.

Milk Cooperative Formed to Serve District Market

A new dairy farm cooperative for the Washington market has been organized at Frederick, Md., by independent shippers.

The organization, which has been incorporated as the Metropolitan Milk Producers Cooperative Association, has between 50 and 60 producers enrolled or pledged to join, according to Paul G. Johnson, of Frederick, resident agent.

The new cooperative will compete with the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which now dominates this market, Johnson said, but it does not plan to sell to Washington distributors at lower prices than prevail. Producer prices will be uniform if the Agriculture Department acts favorably on a pending request for a marketing agreement or order.

Independent producers expressed fear at the Frederick hearing on the marketing order that an individual handler pool would give cooperative members an advantage of possibly 2 cents a gallon in the blended price paid by Washington distributors.

By organizing, the independents will not suffer this disadvantage if an individual handler pool is made a part of the marketing order. They will be dealt with as an individual, as will the Maryland-Virginia Association.

N. Y. Communists Raise $205,000 In Only 100 Days

New York, Dec. 7.—Cash is rolling into the Communist Party treasury, Israel Amter, chairman of the party's New York State Committee, anounced yesterday, disclosing $205,000 had been raised in New York State alone in the last 100 days.

On August 23, the day Soviet Russia signed its nonaggression pact with Nazi Germany, Communists in New York State opened a drive for $250,000. By last night $169,599.85 had been received. In addition, a later campaign to raise $100,000 for a bail fund with which to fight legal prosecution of Communist leaders has already produced $35,000.

Amter predicted both funds will be completed "within the next few weeks." Collections were $17,699 last week, he said.
